NEW YORK (MAY 11) UPI - The former administrator of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos's trust accounts testified Friday that he never saw the deposed dictator's wife sign documents acknowledging some $65 million destined for her and the couple's children.

Rolando Gapud, former president of the Security Bank and Trust Co. of Manila, testified for the second day in the racketeering trial of Imelda Marcos.

He told how secret ''7700 series'' Philippine Peso and U.S. Dollar accounts, set up in 1980 for the president, totaled between $65 million or $66 million.

Seven was Marcos's favorite number.

Mrs. Marcos, 60, is charged with racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice for allegedly plotting with her late husband to divert more than $200 million from the Philippine treasury for personal use.

Gapud, 48, said he prepared reports on the accounts at the president's direction and sent them to Chartered Bank Hong Kong Trustee Ltd., which oversaw the trusts, leaving the Marcos's wealth to his wife and children.

Friday, under questioning by Gerry Spence, attorney for Imelda Marcos, he was asked about the various trust documents.

''Did you see her (Mrs. Marcos's) signature on anything?'' asked Spence.

''No,'' firmly replied the bespectactled and confident Gapud, testifying under immunity of both the U.S. and Philippine governments.

''And you prepared them on his (Marcos's) instructions?'' said Spence.

''Yes,'' said Gapud.

Spence produced 3-by-5 foot blowups of two ''wish letters,'' expressing what Ferdinand Marcos wanted done with his wealth upon his death.

A Dec. 5, 1980, letter was signed by Ferdinand Marcos and representatives of the Hong Kong banks. But, the space where Mrs. Marcos was supposed to sign was left blank.

''On neither of these does Mrs. Marcos signature appear?'' Spence asked Gapud.

''No,'' replied Gapud.

''Did you ever talk with Mrs. Marcos about any of these trusts?'' he asked.

''No,'' said Gapud.

Spence's line of questioning attempted to distance the widow from the doings of her late husband.

TEHRAN, IRAN (MAY 11) UPI - Iranian Foreign Minsiter Ali Akbar Velayati said Friday Tehran was considering a Soviet proposal for three-way discussions in Moscow aimed at establishing a lasting peace between Iran and Iraq.

''We are considering the Russian plan favorably, but we seek additional explanations from the Russian side,'' Velayati said in remarks broadcast on Tehran radio, referring to a proposal by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Shevardnadze's proposals were handed to Velayati by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovsky who ended a two-day visit to Tehran Friday.

Iran has not disclosed details of the Soviet proposals, but reports in the Tehran media said Shevardnadze invited Iran and Iraq to hold peace talks in Moscow under Soviet auspices. The Kremlin has friendly relations with both countries.

''A positive move from any party, whether it is the Soviet Union, the United Nations, or even from Iraq, that may help in implementing (U.N. Security Council) Resolution 598, will be welcomed,'' Velayati said, referring to the resolution that led to the August 1988 cease-fire between Iran and Iraq after eight years of bitter fighting.

Earlier this week, Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Mohammad Ali Besharati said: ''Iran is ready to carry out direct talks with Iraq under the supervision of the United Nations, provided the points of dispute are set out prior to the talks.''

Iran disclosed last week that it had received a letter from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein proposing direct discussions between the two countries.

The letter was handed to Velayati during his visit to New York last month to address the U.N. General Assembly.

After Velayati's return to Tehran, Hussein's proposals were discussed at a meeting of Iran's National Security Council, but details of the letter were not disclosed, apart from the Iraqi president's proposal for direct talks.

The U.N.-brokered talks have so far been held indirectly, with Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar or a deputy shuttling back and forth between delegations from the two sides.

There was no immediate indication of whether Shevardnadze's latest message was linked to Saddam's letter. Velayati said the proposals which Petrovsky brought to Tehran were part of a process that begun about a year ago.

Iran and Iraq began U.N.-sponsored peace talks in August 1988, days after the cease-fire went into effect, but the discussions broke down early last year after Iran insisted that Iraqi troops should pull out of Iranian territory taken during the war.

Wednesday, Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said he saw an inclination in Baghdad toward peace, but he said Tehran still did not have confidence in Iraq's goodwill.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (MAY 11) UPI - Rival Shiite groups began observing a cease-fire Friday, ending nearly five months of bitter clashes in a strategic hilltop area in southern Lebanon that took 150 lives.

Security sources said the truce began at 8 a.m. between the Syrian-backed Amal movement and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah in Iqlim Al Toffah region east of the southern port city of Sidon, 28 miles south of Beirut.

The agreement was announced Thursday by a mediation committee including a number of Shiite leaders after a round of talks with various political and religious leaders in Beirut, the sources said.

Under the agreement, representatives from the rival parties would meet under Iranian and Syrian sponsorship within 24 hours at the Syrian military command in Anjar, 28 miles east of Beirut, a committee statement said.

Amal and Hezbollah, competing for leadership of Lebanon's estimated 1.5 million Shiites, have engaged in ferocious house-to-house fighting for the control of a cluster of villages in Al Toffah.

The area is a string of 18 villages that runs from east of Sidon to the Western part of the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon. More than 150 people have been killed since the inter-Shiite clashes broke out last December.

Meanwhile, rival Christian forces skirmished in east Beirut and the surrounding mountainous areas after a short lull during the night.

Security sources said troops loyal to Gen. Michel Aoun and militiamen of Samir Geagea's Lebanese Forces fought with heavy machine guns and artillery along frontlines in east Beirut and the northern strategic areas of Kesrouwane as all crossing points between the divided parts of the Christian enclave remained closed for the third consecutive day.

Militia sources said Aoun's gunners shelled the vicinity of Beirut port, wounding four people.

The bloody warfare between the rivals that broke out Jan. 31 for the control of the Christian enclave has claimed the lives of at least 985 people and wounded 3,675 others.

Fighting intensified Wednesday after Aoun imposed a siege on harbors held by the militia to halt shipments of supplies, arms and ammunition.

The general said he was barring navigation within territorial waters off the militia-controlled Beirut port to the Madfoun bridge, 23 miles north of the capital.

The Lebanese Forces militia warned it would ''retaliate fiercely'' if Aoun attacks any ship or harbor.

ORLANDO, FL (MAY 11) UPI - Walt Disney World Co. has won a legal challenge to $57 million worth of tax-exempt bonds it was awarded at the expense of six central Florida counties.

Anthony Martin, a Republican gubernatorial candidate who filed suit against Disney and the company's Reedy Creek Improvement District, promised Friday to appeal the decision. "I'm disappointed, but I'm not surprised," he said. The suit challenged the legal standing of Reedy Creek, saying it should be stripped of its status as an independent government and of the bonds.

Reedy Creek won all $57 million in tax-exempt bonds available in six central Florida counties this year and plans to use them to upgrade Disney's sewage system. Officials in Orlando's Orange County officials wanted to use the bonds to raise $19 million to finance affordable housing.

The county asked Reedy Creek to surrender some of the bonds but district officials refused, saying they had gotten their application in first and had won the bonds fairly.

Martin filed suit in January, contending Reedy Creek was ineligible for the bonds because the Florida Constitution bars a special district from using its governmental power to aid a private corporation.

Circuit Court Judge George Diamantis, who heard about 45 minutes of arguments May 2, ruled Thursday in favor of Disney and Reedy Creek. Because it intended to use the money on a pollution-control project, Reedy Creek fell within constitutional guidelines that allow governments to issue bonds for industrial plants, the judge ruled.

Martin said he hoped to meet with Disney attorneys Monday to discuss an expedited appeal to the Florida Supreme Court. "I'm not doing that in a hostile sense, an evil sense or an adversarial sense. I think every private enterprise should be accountable to the public," Martin said.

"Their multibillion-dollar expansion plans will impose a corresponding multibillion-dollar expense on the public. ... It's an illogical situation where they can shift costs onto the public without accountability." Disney spokesman John Dreyer said the ruling "confirms the validity of the Reedy Creek Improvement District and its entitlement to the bonds."

WASHINGTON (MAY 11) UPI - Bush administration and Navy officials detailed their objections to naval nuclear arms control to a Senate panel Friday, saying verification problems make it hard to ban or limit the weapons.

In addition, they expressed hope Moscow will accept the U.S. proposal for declaring how many sea-launched cruise missiles are deployed, rather than setting overall limits on the number of weapons manufactured.

Moscow has said a pending Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, or START, cannot be signed unless Washington accepts legally binding limits on the number of cruise missiles in its arsenal. But the United States has insisted that because of verification problems inherent in sea-based weapons, it would be better to simply tell one another how many of the weapons are at sea.

John Lehman, head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, told a Senate Armed Services subcommittee the U.S. negotiators have ''gone at least half way or more to try to address their concerns in a rational way that meets our interests.''

''Our approach to naval issues is not simply to say no. ... We do not see great merit in any of the recent proposals that the Svoiet Union has made and we have been very candid in telling them so,'' Lehman said.

Some in Congress, such as subcommittee Chairman Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., have publicly pressured the Navy to relax its reluctance to engage in arms control talks.

But the Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Carlisle Trost, told Kennedy that because cruise missiles are small and easy to conceal, verification would be exceptionally difficult.

And, Trost said, because conventional and nuclear cruise missiles are identical in appearance, it would require inspectors looking at classified storage spaces aboard ships and that ''would involve an unacceptable level of interference with our ability to independently move our warships around the world.''

''Additionally,'' Trost said, ''for U.S. purposes, intrusive verification could only serve as a guarantee while the inspectors were aboard.''

He said the United States would be worse off with no nuclear weapons at sea because its ships would still be threatened by land-based Soviet bombers.

Last Tuesday, retired Soviet Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, an arms control adviser to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, testified that Moscow would be willing to negotiate over its Backfire bombers assigned to naval forces.

But Trost said Friday there would have to be ''absolute verification'' of the weaponry on all bombers used by both naval forces and air forces.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, asked Trost whether a treaty on naval nuclear weapons would be acceptable if it included all Soviet planes that could threaten U.S. ships.

''Yes,'' Trost replied, ''it could be in our interest, with all the 'ifs' included.''

But, he said, ''You can list me among the pessimists on that happening.''

Until last fall the United States planned to buy 4,104 of the sea-launched cruise missiles, with 758 tipped with nuclear weapons. But in December it was announced that because of budget constraints the total buy would fall to 3,704, and it was expected that the number assigned nuclear warheads would also decline, although neither Trost nor Lehman would say what it would decline to.

However, Lehman indicated he hoped that the expectation of a lower number might persuade Moscow to accept the U.S. position during a meeting next week between Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

''It ought to help persuade the Soviets that what we've gone through is to try to satisfy their concerns,'' Lehman said.

DETROIT (MAY 11) UPI - A company advising institutional investors recommended Friday that General Motors Corp. shareholders approve a corporate proposal that would in part double the yearly pension of GM Chairman Roger Smith to $1.1 million.

Institutional Shareholder Services of Washington D.C. said it is asking stockholders to support the proposal at GM's annual meeting May 25 in Detroit because the automaker's current executive pension plan is not competitive.

"General Motors executive pension plan is currently in the lowest fifth of all U.S. retirement programs in terms of pension benefits relative to total compensation," ISS senior analyst Andrew Smith said.

The proposal, which would also effect 3,350 other top GM executives, would cost GM about $42 million more in pension benefits this year alone, according to the company's annual proxy statement. ISS also noted GM is not legally required to submit the proposal to shareholders "but did anyway because of past promises to do so."

Smith, who retires Aug. 1, received $2.5 million in salary and stock awards during 1989. By contrast, eligible GM hourly and salaried workers received an average $50 payout under the company's profit-sharing plan earlier this year, based on a decline in GM's 1989 U.S. earnings.

The news of the proposed pension increase angered the United Auto Workers union, which said pensions and salaries of top industry executives are already excessive.

"General Motors is unable to find any justification for this outrageous move," UAW President Owen Bieber said, adding that the union will be bargaining for hundreds of thousands of union workers later this year, "many of whom are facing a real income squeeze and all of whom are hard pressed in comparison with the privileged manager group." GM has also been crowing about its Action Plan, that carved $3 billion out of total costs last year alone.

On Thursday, shareholders at Ford Motor Co.'s annual meeting overwhelmingly approved a long-term compensation plan for company executives despite objections by corporate gadfly Lewis D. Gilbert of New York, who said it could lead to abuses "like at General Motors." "Mr. Lewis, we are not General Motors," Ford Chairman Harold Poling tersely replied.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (MAY 11) UPI - The government of President Violeta Chamorro, facing its first major crisis since taking office two weeks ago, warned striking public employees Friday to go back to work or they will be fired.

The workers, demanding a 200 percent wage increase and protesting the suspension of the Civil Service Law that protects government workers, declared a general strike to protest Chamorro's economic policies.

Labor Minister Francisco Rosales called on state workers Friday to return to their jobs and offered to negotiate their demands, but he warned that if they continue to strike ''we are going to declare the strike illegal, and whoever does not return to work will be fired.''

Rosales did not set a deadline for the employees to return to work.

''Go back to your work, we are not going to negotiate under pressure,'' Rosales said. ''Negotiation between the state and the employees must be in good faith, without pressure and without violence.''

Most government workers are supporters of the opposition Sandinista Front, which has said it would oppose any plans by the Chamorro government to carry out layoffs in the public sector.

On Thursday, the government devalued the Nicaraguan currency, the cordoba, for the fourth time since Chamorro took office April 25 and announced increases in water, electricity and telephone rates.

The National State Workers Union, which has more than 80,000 members, declared the strike Thursday, demanding a 200 percent wage increase and charging that Chamorro's government was preparing massive layoffs of public employees.

Public offices in Managua were dotted with posters that said ''wage increases or general strike, the workers are starving.'' Others said, ''No to the suspension of the Civil Service Law, workers are unprotected.''

Nicaraguan workers have rejected the recent 60 percent wage increase granted by the government, saying they do not have enough money to buy even basic foodstuffs.

Chamorro said her government inherited ''a completely ransacked country, in bankruptcy, and it our responsibility to carry it forward.''

The president called a news conference Friday with Cabinet members attending to announce laws that deal with provisional land leasing and confiscations carried out under the Sandinista government, which was in power from 1979 until this year.

SEATTLE (MAY 11) UPI - The world's largest supplier of titanium nuts and bolts used to hold commercial and military aircraft together and two of its officers pleaded guilty Friday to charges of selling untested and defective parts.

The company itself pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy and three counts of mail fraud. All the pleas were made after the company announced a settlement of the case with the Justice Department.

The company, in a press release, announced that the settlement called for VSI to pay $14.5 million in civil penalties, in addition to reimbursing the government $1 million for the cost of its investigation.

Donald S. Parker, vice president of VSI, said outside the courtroom in Seattle that the company would pay an additional $3.5 million in criminal fines.

The individual defendants could have faced up to five years in prison and $250,000 in fines. VSI, also known as Voi-Shan, could have been fined an undetermined amount.

The government charged VSI, a subsidiary of Fairchild Industries, with falsifying and omitting tests on parts used in jetliners and military planes for more than 15 years.

The Culver City, Calif., company systematically generated fraudulent testing documents for products that had never been tested and, in some cases, for bolts the company knew were defective, the U.S. Attorney's office contended.

The charges culminate a two-year investigation by NORDECON, a special government task force formed to probe fraud in defense contracts in the military and aerospace industries.

Fairchild nuts and bolts, also referred to as fasteners, are installed on almost every military and commercial aircraft, including jets built by the Boeing Co.

Eighty percent ofthe fasteners are used in airframes and 20 percent in engines. Sixty percent of the fasteners are used in military planes.

The government investigation received a big boost from the February 1989 raid of the VSI plant in Chatsworth, Calif., in which 50 boxes of test reports were seized. Investigators, led by Seattle-based Assistant U.S. Attorney Bruce Carter, uncovered the widespread use of a fictitious ''Inspector 11'' to sign off on hundreds of fraudulent test documents.

A spokesman for Fairchild Industries said the company had no comment on the charges. However Fairchild's corporate counsel, Donald Parker, confirmed that Boeing, Northrup and other Voi-Shan customers had discovered and returned substandard fasteners to Voi-Shan.

The Seattle Times reported last year that Boeing had received two shipments of more than 200 Voi-Shan titanium fasteners approved with test reports certified by the phantom ''Inspector 11.''

The shipments were among the many destined exclusively for the B-2 Stealth bomber project in 1988 and early 1989. Boeing makes primary structures for the bomber, including the outboard section, the aft-center section, fuel system, weapons-delivery system and the landing gear. Boeing has used Voi-Shan parts on military and commercial aircraft for 40 years.

(MAY 11) UPI - Philippine Transport Secretary Oscar Orbos says an investigation is under way to determine what caused a fatal explosion today aboard an airliner preparing to take off from Manila. Seven people died and at least 87 others were injured. Orbos says the Boeing 737 had been delayed by another plane, saying more people could have died if the explosion had occurred in flight. Aviation sources say that if the blast was caused by a bomb, it was timed to go off while in flight.

President Bush says he is NOT going to respond to questions about whether he would consider raising taxes, saying to do so would be dealing in bad faith before negotiations begin next week with Congress. Instead, Bush is reiterating his call for budget talks ''with NO conditions.'' Bush also says he would NOT characterize the nation's record deficit as a crisis, instead calling it a major problem.

Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu told parliament today that he will apologize to Asia for Japan's military expansion before and during World War Two. Kaifu will meet with South Korean President Roh Tae Woo next week. Kaifu says he feels responsible for past Japanese actions and will apologize NOT only to the South Korean leader but to China and Asia as a whole.

In Warsaw, a rift widened today between Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa. A government spokesman scolded Walesa for his recent criticism of Mazowiecki's reform program, saying ''exposure of political differences does NOT serve the interests of the country.'' Yesterday, Walesa had attacked the government for failing to address the concerns of workers in the Gdansk shipyard.

PARIS (MAY 11) UPI - The National Assembly suspended its session Friday to protest the ''monstrous'' desecration of a Jewish cemetery in the southern town of Carpentras, and officials blamed right-wing extremist Jean-Marie Le Pen for inciting the vandals who smashed 34 tombstones and mutilated a corpse.

Police said they held for questioning a French skinhead, a neo-Nazi extremist, in connection with the incident. The unidentified man, arrested Friday afternoon in the southern city of Avignon, was not immediately charged.

''We are proceeding with verifications,'' one officer said. ''One must not make hasty conclusions.''

Police said at least four people took part in the desecration, using crowbars and shovels to unearth the caskets and lift heavy marble tombstones.

''I hope this is the work of an unbalanced person, for Carpentras is a peaceful town that has never known such horrors,'' said Carpentras Mayor Jean-Claude Andrieu.

The vandals also attempted without success to remove the body of a woman from one of the coffins they had unearthed.

Relatives of the Jews whose graves were desecrated were distraught and angry.

''They impaled Felix my husband. They ought to be impaled themselves,'' said Magdeleine Germon, the widow of an 80-year-old man whose body was dug up, thrown on a tombstone and transfixed on an umbrella handle at the graveyard in Carpentras. He was buried only 15 days before the outrage was discovered Thursday morning.

''They avenged themselves on the most fresh tomb, because he was the last one interred. You can imagine what hate one has to have. The authors of that profanation deserve death,'' Germon said, sobbing.

Prime Minister Michel Rocard, a Protestant, attended the Sabbath service at a synagogue in the rue Victoire in central Paris Friday to express his sympathy.

''Nothing can express, with all the force that is needed, our feelings of horror,'' Georges Hage, the communist session president in the lower house of Parliament, told deputies before suspending the sitting for 15 minutes. The Senate also halted its session for 10 minutes.

Hage expressed outrage at ''the monstrous events at Carpentras,'' one of the oldest Jewish communities in France.

A man speaking ''with a strong Arab accent'' and claiming to represent an unknown organization called a southern local newspaper, Vaucluse Matin, and claimed responsibility for the act.

Police were investigating the claim, but one agent said ''anybody could have made the call.''

Socialist Interior Minister Pierre Joxe accused the anti-immigration National Front leader Le Pen of creating a climate of hatred to incite such racist acts.

''One knows very well that his ideas carry along the weak-spirited, those who consider themselves strong ... and can lead, like other anti-Semites in history, to crimes, to acts of violence of a proportion that exceeds the imagination.''

Joxe dismissed remarks by Le Pen describing the vandalism as a ''provocation'' by anti-racist militants. Le Pen was ''a provocateur himself'' and a ''racist,'' Joxe said.

Le Pen told a news conference Friday that to find the authors of the crime ''one must search either among the communists' side or it could also be subversive Islamic movements.''

About 50 Jewish demonstrators from the southern port of Marseille stood outside the cemetery at Carpentras Friday, responding to an appeal by the National Union of Jewish Students. Some carried placards with slogans saying ''We will not let history repeat itself.''

Maurice Benassaya, brother of one of the dead whose tomb was desecrated, read Hebrew psalms during a simple religious ceremony held at the cemetery Friday and attended by about 30 relatives.

''May they repose in peace,'' he said. ''Stones have been thrown but they will never break the spirits of men.''

The Carpentras incident shocked French public and political opinion particularly because it recalled the mass deportations to concentration camps of hundreds of thousands of Jews during World War II, political experts said.

Carpentras was part of the unoccupied zone controlled by the French ''Vichy'' government, which ran a collaborationist right-wing state in France from 1940 to 1944, after signing an armistice with the Nazis.

But even under Vichy (named after the central city where the administration had its capital), the Carpentras' Jewish community, whose synagogue is the oldest in France, was spared from anti-Semitic round-ups and deportation, local historians say.

Nobel Peace Prize winner Elie Wiesel left the Cannes Film Festival to join national politicians paying their respects at Carpentras, 20 miles northeast of Avignon. After touring the cemetery Wiesel said the incident ''is proof that in France as elsewhere there are people who do not accept that Jews, living or dead, be in peace.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 11) UPI - Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., sharply criticized the Defense Department Friday for reversing itself and buying a troubled radar jamming device, and a senior Pentagon official promised the jammer ''will be canceled'' if it doesn't work well.

Pryor, chairman of the federal services subcommittee of the Governmental Affairs Committee, said the device ''is like a cat with nine lives.''

A report from the Pentagon's inspector general, released at a hearing of Pryor's subcommittee, recommended that the Pentagon defer making further production decisions on the equipment until additional tests are completed. The report also said a contract for the first 100 units should be streched out.

The device is known as the Airborne Self-Protection Jammer, or ASPJ, and is intended to allow a U.S. aircraft to confuse an opponent's ground- and air-based radar into thinking the U.S. plane is somewhere else. It has encountered trouble in testing.

In addition, the Air Force pulled out of the project last fall, leaving the Navy with a much smaller program on its hands, and started a less extensive but classified program of its own.

After the ASPJ's troubles were detailed, Deputy Defense Secretary Donald Atwood told Pryor that ''if this system proves to work well, it will be worth it. If not, it will be canceled. I assure you of that.''

Atwood also testified that last year, just days after deciding the $4 billion program should be killed off, he and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney agreed to revive it when the Navy appealed their decision and said the ASPJ's troubles could be fixed.

The inspector general's report revealed a number of problems in the program, including inaccurate test results given to those in a position to decide the future of the device. However, the report said top decision-makers found out about the performance troubles anyway.

The report also said the ASPJ's effectiveness and suitability in combat has not been proven, that the Navy's plan called for buying too many before its usefullness was tested, and that its lifecycle costs may be understated by $1.6 billion. It also disputed the Navy's claim that a break in production would dry up the base of subcontractors who help ITT and Westinghouse build the units.

Navy Secretary Lawrence Garrett III defended the device, saying it ''is the only system that shows the potential to meet the Navy's need for an internally mounted self-protection jammer.''

He said the program will be followed closely through the testing phase and a decision on going to full production will be held until the testing is done.

''If the program encounters any serious, unresolvable problems at any time I will call for a formal review to determine if the program should continue,'' Garrett said.

NEW YORK (MAY 11) UPI - Japan's yen took its turn at pummeling the dollar in heavy New York trading Friday after the release of U.S. economic figures that added to market conviction that domestic interest rates are headed down.

The dollar fell against the Japanese currency by more than 4 yen after an avalanche of dollar-selling in the Far East and Europe by major investors who were aiming to offset portfolio losses stemming from the dollar's decline.

The U.S. unit reclaimed ground from the West German mark and the Swiss franc, both of which pounded it earlier in the week.

The dollar's gains resulted in part from the technical effects of the yen's steep climb against the European units. But it was also helped by reports of a warning strike by 80,000 West German metalworkers.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.6370 West German marks, up from 1.6290 Thursday. The U.S. unit changed hands at 152.65 Japanese yen, down from 156.75 the day before.

Linda McLaughlin, a Chemical Bank foreign exchange vice president, said the dollar's sharpest losses came in the Tokyo market as institutional investors such as insurance companies dumped the U.S. unit.

Japanese with heavy dollar inventories moved to rebalance currency portfolios they maintain to hedge against losses on foreign bond holdings stemming from sharp fluctuations in currency markets, she explained.

Foreign exchange manager Robert White of First Interstate Bank in Los Angeles said the Japanese currency demonstrated power in the global currency markets in which it had long been oversold.

''Once (the yen) started to move, it was caught up then in a wave of activity against all the other currencies,'' White said.

McLaughlin brushed off U.S. economic figures showing a 0.6 percent fall in retail sales and a 0.3 percent drop in wholesale prices.

''They were worse than the market was looking for but no big deal,'' she said. ''The market was predisposed to sell dollars anyway.'' Selling was restrained as players squared books ahead of the weekend, she said.

Other dollar rates: 1.3990 Swiss francs, up from 1.3880; 5.2880 French francs, off from 5.5050; and 1,207.50 Italian lire, up from 1,200.

The British pound slipped to $1.6735 from $1.68.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly lower on the U.S. economic news. Currency markets were dominated by the strength of the yen as Japanese investors sold dollars for their own currency.

The West German mark had another good day, with the dollar closing at 1.6300 deutsche marks, off from 1.6415 Thursday. The U.S. unit also declined in Zurich to 1.3925 Swiss francs from 1.4010.

In London, sterling rallied on better-than-expected British inflation rate figures to close at $1.6805 against $1.6755 Thursday. Though the highest inflation rate in eight years, the 9.4 percent price growth came as a relief to markets braced for a figure of 10 percent or higher.

The U.S. unit rose in Paris, to 5.5340 francs against 5.5280, and in Milan to1,206.50 lire against 1,206.20 at the previous night's close. The dollar was lower in Brussels at 33.90 Belgian francs against 33.95.

Earlier in Tokyo, perceptions of U.S. economic slowing sent the dollar down sharply to 154.15 yen, compared with 156.75 Thursday.

''The dollar had been climbing for the past two weeks,'' said a Mitsubishi Bank dealer, Masahiriro Sasabe. ''But now customers were selling the dollar actively as they expect the U.S. interest rate to decline.''

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $368.50 an ounce, down from $370.25 Thursday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled spot gold at $368.80 an ounce, off from $370.10. Gold fell in Zurich to $369 an ounce from $371.50 Thursday. London gold dropped to $369 an ounce from $371.75.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.06 an ounce, down from $5.11. Comex spot silver finished at $5.043 an ounce, off from $5.088. Zurich silver closed unchanged at $5.10 an ounce. London silver slipped to $5.08 an ounce from $5.10.

SANTA MONICA, CA (MAY 11) UPI - Elizabeth Taylor, battling to recover from a near-fatal bout of viral pneumonia, has now contracted bacterial pneumonia and a yeast infection in her blood and will remain hospitalized at least six more weeks, her doctors said Friday.

A close family member who asked not to be named said the actress was ''disappointed'' that she would have to stay in the hospital, but that she was in good spirits, ''talking and playing games.''

''We're taking her a Nintendo game this afternoon. The new developments are a big pain, but she's going to make it,'' the family member said. The hospital listed Taylor's condition as stable.

Taylor developed the bacterial pneumonia in the hospital, Dr. Bernard Weintraub said in a statement released through the actress's New York publicist, Chen Sam.

Taylor, 58, also developed a yeast infection in her blood system, and ''will be hospitalized for approximately six more weeks.''

''She is tolerating this therapy extremely well and her doctors are pleased with her progress,'' Sam said.

Taylor's other spokeswoman, Lisa Del Favero, said the two new ailments were diagnosed in the past 48 hours and that she was being treated intravenously with antibiotics for the pneumonia and with anti-fungal drugs for the yeast infection, formally known as fungiemia of candida albicans.

''It's not something we don't think can be overcome. It's treatable,'' Del Favero said.

The Academy Award-winning actress was admitted to St. John's Hospital Apr. 16, after being transferred from another hospital where she had been admitted for a sinus infection and high fever.

She developed viral pneumonia that threatened her life, but had been recovering and was expecting to be released this week.

''Her spirits are good,'' hospital spokeswoman Paulette Weir said. ''The bacterial pneumonia very often follows the viral pneumonia. She's progressing well and we're quite optimistic.''

The actress, who has admitted a long dependence on such drugs as Demerol and Valium, as well as alcohol, has experienced other serious health problems. She has suffered from back problems that began when she fell off a horse during filming of the 1945 film ''National Velvet,'' and nearly died of pneumonia while filming in London in the early 1960s.

She admitted herself into a drug rehabilitation program at the Betty Ford Center near Palm Springs in 1983 and again in late 1988. Her admittance to the hospital in April prompted speculation that Taylor had contracted AIDS but those report were denied by both the actress and her doctors.

The violet-eyed actress has been married seven times, twice to the late actor Richard Burton. She won best actress Oscars for her performances in ''Butterfield 8'' and ''Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?''

ANCHORAGE, AK (MAY 11) UPI - The rebirth of spring in Alaska, normally a time of new life and growth, has revealed widespread death in the moose population following a winter of extremely heavy snow, state game officials said Friday.

Spring snowmelt uncovered moose carcasses over a wide area from Anchorage to Mount McKinley, triggering severe restrictions on hunting and the cancellation of moose hunting in one area, the state Department of Fish and Game announced.

The winter kill was estimated at 4,600 moose, said Dan Timm, regional supervisor for the Division of Wildlife Conservation.

Some estimates, however, place the winter kill at nearly twice that amount and data is still being collected.

Losses were calculated from death rates of radio-collared moose, carcasses found in areas of moose concentration and the known death toll from cars and trains striking moose.

More than one-third of the moose population in a 100-mile radius around Anchorage did not survive the winter. North of the city, between Mount McKinley and the town of Talkeetna, nearly half the moose population died.

Some experts believe it may take until the turn of the century for the population to recover, even with hunting seasons shortened throughout the region and eliminated entirely in one key area.

''The area's moose population is resilient, but it has been hit with an unusually harsh winter,'' Timm said. ''Significantly reduced hunting pressure will help it rebound.''

U.S. Forest Service biologist Vic Van Ballenberghe called the toll ''a pretty dramatic loss'' and predicted moose would need ''five to nine years to recoup the losses.''

Death struck up to 90 percent of calves, 15 percent of cows and 30 percent of bull moose in the region, Van Ballenberghe estimated.

Ten feet of snow, heaviest in 20 years, stacked up in places over the winter, making travel tough even for such large long-legged animals.

Moose, especially calves, starved because they became virtually immobilized or exhausted in deep snow and were unable to find sufficient food.

Alaska Railroad President Frank Turpin said trains killed 700 moose but that the railroad spent $339,277 trying to save many more. The state-run railroad spent another $75,372 salvaging moose hit by trains to provide meat for poor people.

Public outcry over train moose kills - one section of track was nicknamed ''death row'' - prompted the railroad to send pilot cars ahead of trains to scare moose off the tracks. A one-ton Ford pickup rigged to drive the rails ''without doubt saved more moose than anything we have done before '' Turpin said. Moose sometimes had to be nudged and several times moose attacked the pilot car.

Many hundreds of moose also died on highways around Anchorage.

To lure starving moose away from roads and tracks, state game officials spent $50,000 distributing hay. Although feeding wild animals is frowned upon in game management circles, Lew Pamplin, state wildlife conservation director, said the project was designed to get moose off roads and highways and back into moose browse habitat.

But because moose, which eat young willow and other tender tree shoots, cannot digest hay well and get little energy from it, some already-suffering moose starved with hay in their stomachs.

(MAY 11) UPI - A report published today in Miami says Manuel Noriega is getting some help from Fidel Castro. Lawyers for Panama's deposed military ruler say the Cuban leader has provided documents refuting charges that Noriega smuggled cocaine into the United States. Noriega faces a possible 145-year prison term if convicted of federal drug charges.

Hospital officials in Tulsa, Oklahoma, say they plan to remove the life support system next week from a woman considered legally dead for two weeks despite her family's pleas to give her time to heal. Officials at St. John Hospital yesterday notified the husband of Isabelle McFall of their decision in a hand-delivered letter. McFall's family, members of a Pentecostal church, have asked the hospital to maintain her present state to allow God an opportunity to heal her.

TITUSVILLE, FL (MAY 11) UPI - Five of the original ''Mercury Seven'' astronauts who carried America into space almost 30 years ago dedicated a museum and tourist attraction Friday tracing the history of their pioneering voyages on the high frontier.

''This is, in fact, another milestone,'' said Alan Shepard, the first American to be launched into space on May 5, 1961. ''This is the first time that astronauts of the first group have exhibited things that are personal and sentimental to them. We hope it will encourage youngsters to follow in our footsteps.''

Shepard and four other Mercury Seven astronauts - Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, Malcolm Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper and Donald ''Deke'' Slayton - were on hand to formally dedicate the U.S. Astronaut Hall of Fame, which shares a 37,000-square-foot building with U.S. Space Camp of Florida.

Astronaut Virgil ''Gus'' Grissom, killed in a 1967 Apollo spacecraft fire on the launch pad, was represented by his wife, Betty. The final member of the exclusive group, Walter ''Wally'' Schirra, was not able to attend.

During a news conference, Shepard was sharply critical of the movie ''The Right Stuff'' for implying that Grissom panicked during the second U.S. manned Mercury mission in July 1961.

''When his first flight landed, he was in the water, the hatch blew off unexpectedly, the spacecraft sank, we almost lost Gus then,'' Shepard said.

''In retrospect, everybody said he got panicky, he was flailing around and blew the hatch and it was all his fault. We knew immediately that Gus had not panicked,'' he said.

Shepard said that within weeks, engineers had determined the hatch mechanism on Grissom's capsule was overly sensitive and ''Gus was totally exonerated.''

''It is a damn shame that Hollywood never got off his back,'' Shepard said. ''Regardless of what the movie said, he did a great job.''

The U.S. Astronaut Hall of Fame is located at the entrance to the Kennedy Space Center, just a few miles from the Cape Canaveral launch pads where the Mercury astronauts blasted off on their historic voyages, and Spaceport USA, the fourth most popular tourist attraction in Florida.

A self-paced tour of the U.S. Astronaut Hall of Fame features a ''time tunnel,'' in which visitors can relive early U.S. and Soviet space launches, and special sections dedicated to the Mercury astronauts.

Memorabilia on display include the hand controller Shepard used to guide his lunar module to the moon's surface, a piece of the Atlas rocket that boosted Glenn into orbit in 1962 and the spacesuit Grissom wore during the second Mercury flight.

The tour ends with a movie highlighting the Mercury flights and other sections of the museum honor astronauts from the Gemini, Apollo and shuttle programs.

''I like the fact that it will be a growing 'Hall of Fame,''' Slayton said in prepared remarks. ''It won't be stagnant, confined just to the Mercury Seven. We want to have other astronauts honored and other names will be added.''

The museum is a joint venture between the non-profit Mercury Seven Foundation and U.S. Space Camp Foundation. Both organizations raise money for science scholarship programs.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (MAY 11) UPI - The chief of security for the city of Medellin was assassinated Friday while waiting in his jeep at a traffic light and two more policemen were shot to death in the turbulent cocaine center.

The shooting deaths of the two policemen Friday, one in Medellin and one in the nearby town of Bello, appeared to signal a new surge in attacks of policemen. Seven officers were killed in 72 hours in or near the city.

Bogota news media figures show 72 policemen have been killed this year in Medellin, 160 miles northwest of Bogota, where the Medellin Cartel has offered a reward of $4,200 for any hitman who kills an officer.

Carlos Guerro Rodriguez, chief of security for the city of Medellin, was shot to death by gunmen who fired into his jeep at a traffic light, police said. Guerrero Rodriguez also was a retired police major.

''We are not going to surrender,'' National Police commander Gen. Miguel Gomez told reporters Friday. ''As policemen we are very conscience of the dangers but also of the duty we have with Colombia and ware disposed to continue assuming this risk.''

Two officers died Thursday and three Wednesday in Medellin, a police spokeswoman said.

Also killed Thursday was a retired police major in Medellin, and a mayor-elect of the ruling Liberal Party in the state of Norte de Santander. In other parts of the country, another eight people were killed in a shooting involving Colombia's turbulent emerald trade, along with three leaders of a peasant farmer organization.

Police taped a telephone conversation between Alfonso Lopez Michelson, president from 1974 to 1978, and Guido Parra, a cartel attorney who was arrested Thursday, the newspaper El Espectador reported.

''The ex-president told him (Parra) to take care of himself and tell Pablo Escobar to do the same,'' the paper said.

Lopez Michelson in 1984 met with cartel leaders in Panama and carried a peace proposal to the government.

Another taped conversation between Escobar and Berta Ines Mejia de Serna, a city councilman in the cocaine-dominated town of Envigado south of Medellin, was obtained by a Bogota television news program and the El Siglo newspaper.

In the tape, Escobar mentions the name of Sen. William Jaramillo, who made an unsuccessful bid for the presidential candidacy of the ruling Liberal Party.

Escobar tells Mejia de Serna that if Jaramillo supported a candidate for mayor of Medellin ''the problem with him will be canceled,'' according to a transcript published in El Siglo.

Jaramillo said Friday he did not know Mejia de Serna or why his name was mentioned in the conversation. He also told a Bogota radio station he had received threats.

''During the campaign and during the election many threats were made,'' said Jaramillo, a former mayor of Medellin.

The Supreme Court meanwhile dismissed Thursday nearly half of the judges on a criminal court that hears cases against cocaine traffickers and other criminals.

Among the five judges dismissed were several who voted to drop charges against Escobar and another cocaine kingpin, Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, in the murders of 66 peasant farmers in April 1988, according to El Espectador newspaper.

Escobar and Rodriguez Gacha had been indicted for the massacres by Judge Maria Helena Diaz Perez, who was assassinated several months after she charged the two men. Rodriguez Gacha was killed in a Colombian police operation on Dec. 15.

WASHINGTON (MAY 11) UPI - The second highest official at the Justice Department quit Friday, less than two months after he was undercut by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh on tough mandatory sentences for white-collar criminals.

Deputy Attorney General Donald B. Ayer, who had only joined Thornburgh's team last November, said he was returning to his old law firm.

His resignation followed Thornburgh's withdrawal of the Justice Department's longstanding support for tough mandatory sentencing guidelines for corporations. Thornburgh backed off after a call from the White House and a strong lobbying campaign by defense contractors, oil companies and other major corporations.

Ayer, 41, was not available for comment.

He bore the brunt of the change in policy when he was forced to reverse himself about the Justice Department's position on tougher sentences for white-collar criminals. But Thornburgh's personal spokesman, David Runkel, denied that Ayer's departure was related to the sentencing controversy.

''You would be wrong to connect those two events,'' Runkel said. But when asked if Thornburgh tried to persuade Ayer to remain at the Justice Department, Runkel said, ''I don't want to go into it.''

Ayer quit in a terse three-sentence letter. Thornburgh moved quickly to replace Ayer, selecting former CIA employee William P. Barr, architect of a highly controversial Justice Department ''snatch policy'' last year claiming it is legal for American law enforcement authorities to enter a foreign nation and arrest a fugitive without that country's authority or approval.

Barr, 39, who worked at the Reagan White House in 1982 and 1983, had headed the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel since April 1989.

Ayer's departure came during a larger Justice Department shake-up that included President Bush's nomination of federal judge Robert C. Bonner to head the Drug Enforcement Administration, replacing John Lawn.

Bonner, 58, a native of Wichita, Kan., is a federal judge in Los Angeles and previously was a U.S. attorney.

New officials also were named to head a number of other Justice Department departments.

Thornburgh recently withdrew Justice Department support for the tougher sentencing guidelines after a telephone call to his top assistant from White House Counsel C. Boyden Gray.

The guidelines, being considered by the U.S. Sentencing Commission, would require federal judges to impose large fines on companies convicted of crimes such as polluting and cheating on government contracts.

In February, Ayer reiterated the Justice Department's ''strong support'' for tougher mandatory corporate sentences. But after the business lobbying and the White House call to Thornburgh's office, Ayer switched positions.

He wrote a second letter to the sentencing commission, saying he was withdrawing his first letter.

The first letter said the corporate sentencing guidelines were ''drafted, reviewed and refined in a very deliberate and thoughtful manner over a two-year period.''

But in his second letter, Ayer said: ''As you are aware, these guidelines involve many complex issues, some of which are being addressed for the first time.''

Ayer, who previously was U.S. attorney in Sacramento, took the Justice Department's No. 2 job after the original candidate withdrew his name while under attack from conservative Republicans.

Ayer, a former deputy solicitor general, had returned to the Justice Department in late 1988 after New York lawyer Robert Fiske Jr. withdrew from consideration.

Conservative Republicans had accused Fiske of scuttling some of Ronald Reagan's judicial nominees when he headed a key American Bar Association committee.

Ayer, a native of San Mateo, Calif., will return to the Washington office of a Cleveland law firm - Jones, Day, Reavis and Pogue. His top assistant, Associate Deputy Attorney General Peter Nowinski, also quit Friday.

WASHINGTON (MAY 11) UPI - The government announced a voluntary recall Friday of about 3,000 ''Big Bird Trike'' toys because they have small screws that can become detached and pose a choking hazard to children.

The Big Bird Trike, made by Illco Toy Company Inc., was sold by Lionel Leisure Inc., of Philadelphia at the company's Lionel Kiddie City, Lionel Playworld and Lionel Toy Warehouse stores.

Lionel, in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, is voluntarily recalling the toy, the commission said.

The toy, model No. 8820R, is blue with two green wheels on the back and one green wheel on the front with the words ''Big Bird'' just above the tire. Big Bird, the character made famous on TV's Sesame Street, is bright yellow with orange legs. When the toy is wound up, Big Bird pedals the trike while moving his head and tail.

Although no injuries have been associated with the $9 toy, parents are urged to return it to the store where purchased for a refund, the commission said.

AUSTIN, TX (MAY 11) UPI - The University of Texas, responding to complaints about limited seating for President Bush's May 19 commencement address, said Friday the event will be moved to the campus football stadium.

The ceremony had been scheduled for the Frank C. Erwin Special Events Center, which holds 15,605, forcing officials to limit the number of people who could attend. The football stadium will provide room for nearly 40,000.

Graduates were issued tickets for themselves and two guests each at the Erwin Center, but many complained that the limited number would prevent both parents and a spouse or other relatives from attending.

There were suggestions the White House had pressed to have the event indoors for security reasons, but deputy press secretary Alixe Glen told reporters aboard Air Force One en route to Texas Friday for a commencement appearance at Texas A&I University at Kingsville that was not the case.

''The White House made it clear we were happy either way. ... It was up to the university where the site of the commencement would be,'' Glen said before the shift to the football stadium was announced.

University President William Cunningham said moving the ceremonies to Memorial Stadium will allow all the degree candidates, their families and some members of the general public to hear he president's address.

''We are delighted that we were able to collaborate with the White House in a special effort to permit a greater degree of participation,'' Cunningham said.

About 5,000 degree candidates, both undergraduate and graduate, are eligible to participate in the ceremony. More than 4,800 graduates have told university officials they plan to attend and have asked for more than 32,000 tickets for themselves, family and friends.

More than 37,000 seats in the upper and lower sides of the west side of the stadium will be available for the event.

But, if the weather turns bad, the ceremony will be moved back to the Erwin Center, with tickets required for admission.

NEW YORK (MAY 11) UPI - Stocks staged their biggest rally of 1990 in the heaviest trading of the year Friday as a plunge in interest rates left the Dow industrials within easy striking distance of their all-time highs.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 5.63 Thursday, surged 63.07 - the biggest gain since it jumped 88 points in the aftermath of last October's minicrash - to close at 2801.58.

The key blue-chip index ended above 2800 for the first time since Jan. 3, the day after setting its record high of 2810.15. The Dow's largest gain of the year had been 56.95 points on Jan. 2 in hitting that record high.

It was a banner day for volume as well, the busiest session since Dec. 15, when ''triple witching hour'' expirations of futures and options swelled volume to 240 million shares.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index jumped 4.10 to 192.24 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index soared 8.18 to 352.00. The price of an average share surged 75 cents.

Advances pummeled declines 1,278-334 among the 1,990 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 234,040,000 shares, compared with 158,460,000 shares traded Thursday.

Wall Street was poised to rally Friday after two government economic reports released before the opening gave investors new confidence that interest rates have seen their highs for now.

Dragged down by weak automobile sales, retail sales fell 0.6 percent in April, the Commerce Department reported. Excluding autos, retail sales were unchanged.

The numbers were weaker than anticipated. Most economists had predicted flat retail sales in April, with the more optimistic in their ranks expecting a 0.5 percent advance.

Lower prices for volatile energy and food products, especially vegetables, helped push wholesale prices for finished goods down 0.3 percent in April, the government reported.

Economists had anticipated no change in wholesale prices for the month.

The reports sparked a rally in the bond and then the stock markets as investors felt reassured that interest rates had peaked. They felt the data showed that inflation was under control and that the economy was not in danger of overheating or prompting the Federal Reserve to tighten credit.

In late trading, the yield on the new 30-year bond had plunged to 8.64 percent, down 0.2 point from the yield at which they were sold Thursday in the quarterly refunding.

''Bonds went through the roof and everything else followed,'' said Dennis Jarrett, chief market strategist at Kidder, Peabody & Co.

''Portfolio managers took this as confirmation that interest rates have peaked. We had a good number of programs throughout the day, but by far this was the best day we've had in 1990,'' he said.

After midday, repeated waves of computerized program buying, used to profit on price differences between stocks and stock-index futures, gave the rally with the fuel it needed to push the Dow up near record highs.

''It seemed that portfolio managers were saying, 'We'd better start putting more money to work,''' Jarrett said.

Jarrett called the broad market's performance ''fabulous,'' with advances leading declines by better than 4 to 1.

As for where the market goes from here, analysts said that next week could bring some profit taking and consolidation but that new all-time highs in the Dow could come at any time with the index just 10 points shy of a record.

''We have to watch out it's not a fake-out like in January, when they turned on us with a vengeance,'' said Jarrett.

On the trading floor, Varity was the most active issue, up 3/8 to 3 1/8.

France Growth Fund, a new issue, followed, up 5/8 from its opening bid to 13 5/8.

Consumer and financial issues helped set the pace. Philip Morris was third up 7/8 to 44 1/4 and Federal National Mortgage Association was fourth, surging 2 to 38 3/4 on the improved rate outlook.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T rose 7/8 to 42 1/8, IBM rallied 1 5/8 to 114 and Boeing surged 2 5/8 to 78. Other consumer stocks that rallied were Eastman Kodak, up 1 5/8 to 40 5/8; Merck, up 1 7/8 to 77 3/8; Woolworth, up 2 1/2 to 62 7/8; and Coca-Cola, up 3 5/8 to 83 1/2.

Elsewhere, ITT extended its rally, up 2 1/4 to 57 after reportedly indicating Thursday that it was willing to discuss the sale of its stake in Alcatel with the giant French electronics manufacturer that owns the rest.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 273,905,864 shares, compared with 196,254,320 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed sharply higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index rose 3.58 to close at 352.50. The price of an average share rose 13 cents. Advances led declines 396-213 among the 847 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 19,147,540 shares, compared with 15,559,500 traded Thursday.

Western Digital led the Amex issues, unchanged at 12 1/4.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index jumped 4.90 to close at 438.10.

JERUSALEM (MAY 11) UPI - Austrian President Kurt Waldheim apologized in an interview published Friday for misleading Israelis about his past, but again denied that he had been involved in the Nazi deportations of Jews.

''I most certainly express sorrow for those omissions, which were not lies because the accusations against me are without foundation,'' he told the daily Hebrew newspaper Ha'aretz.

Waldheim was referring to his biography in English in which he left out information about his war record.

''I did not forsee that the issue would develop in this tragic direction

'' he told an interviewer. ''If I would have forseen this, I would have revealed everything because I had nothing to hide.''

Waldheim, a former U.N. secretary-general, has repeatedly denied any wrongdoing while serving as a German army lieutenant in the Balkins during World War II. Jewish organizations have accused Waldheim of complicity in the deportation of Jews to death camps and execution of anti-Nazi partisans.

An international commission found Waldheim, 72, did not commit any war crimes but said he hid details about his wartime activities.

''I was far from Salonika (Greece) during those five months in which 45,000 Jews were sent to camps in Germany and Poland,'' he said. ''I was not present in the area because of a study vacation. ... I can look you in the eye ... and say to you: I never knew anything about it.''

Because of the allegations, the United States banned Waldheim from entering the country, and Israel withdrew its ambassador to Vienna. In the interview, Waldheim called on Israel to return its ambassador and improve relations.

Waldheim said the accusations against him were the result of his activities as U.N. head, which included a call for Palestinian self-determination.

The Austrian president said he maintains contacts with Syria in an effort to obtain the release of Israeli soldiers held in Lebanon.

(MAY 11) UPI - The price of U.S. crude oil slipped slightly Friday as gasoline skidded almost 2 cents a gallon, but crude still managed to end the week up nearly $1 a barrel on indications Saudi Arabia was moving to ease the world glut.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for June delivery was down 7 cents on the day at $18.95 a barrel but finished up 97 cents on the week.

Trading volume Friday was a light 65,334 contracts. The WTI trading range was narrow - a high of $19.01 and a low of $18.83 a barrel.

Unleaded gasoline for June delivery fell 1.79 cents to 61.89 cents a gallon on the Merc but ended the week 0.77 cent higher.

Prompt delivery unleaded dropped 2.05 cents to 64.15 cents a gallon on the New York Harbor cash market but was still up 2.50 cents on the week.

Unleaded gasoline fell 3.3 cents on the U.S. Gulf Coast cash market on top of Thursday's 3.8 cent loss.

The combined losses wiped out the 6.8 cent gain made Wednesday in response to a temporary tightness in the Gulf Coast market.

''Friday's crude market was dead in the sense the trading range was very narrow and volume was light,'' said Randall Rothenberg of Dean Witter Reynolds' International Energy Futures Group in New York.

There was downward price pressure on crude and gasoline because the ''crack spread'' between the price of gasoline and the crude from which it is made had risen to about $8 a barrel, the trader said.

''That's probably as good a value as you'll see going into the driving season'' as refineries begin to rev up for gasoline production, Rothenberg said.

The crack spread ended Friday at $6.92 a barrel. A month ago it was $5.96 a barrel.

Rothenberg said the rise in the crack spread was probably the result of some refineries being slow in returning to full production from their annual maintenance ''turnarounds'' from heating oil to gasoline output.

U.S. crude prices shot up 71 cents Wednesday amid indications Saudi Arabia the swing-producer of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, would soon begin to deliver on a promised production cutback.

Two of the four members of the Saudi Arab-American Oil Co. consortium, which get its oil from Saudi Arabia, were asked by the Saudis for the best ways to implement a reduction in deliveries.

As a result, one trader said he expected Merc crude prices would begin to firm up in about a month.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast crude cash market, WTI lost 5 cents Friday to $18.95 a barrel but was ahead 95 cents on the week.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent was unchanged Friday at $17.25 a barrel but finished $1.60 a barrel higher than a week ago.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai Light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - was quoted at $14.80 a barrel, down 12 cents on the day but up 60 cents on the week.

Heating oil for June delivery declined 0.79 cent to 50.92 cents a gallon on the Merc, 0.97 cent above last Friday.

WASHINGTON (MAY 11) UPI - Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., charged Friday that China has mounted an organized campaign to control Chinese students in the United States and urged the Justice Department to begin an immediate investigation.

Kennedy said official Chinese government documents received by the Senate Immigration subcommittee Thursday ''confirm a calculated practice on the part of the Beijing government to harass Chinese students in America who dare to advocate democracy for their country.''

The disclosure of the anti-student campaign came as President Bush considers whether to retain China's most-favored-nation trade status. He must notify Congress June 3.

Bush and many members of Congress have been at odds over the U.S. policy towards China since the crushing of the pro-democracy protests in Beijing last year.

Bush, despite severe criticism from Capitol Hill, has adopted a conciliatory position in hopes of not isolating China.

He also vetoed legislation - which Congress failed to overturn - which would have given the students in the United States special immigration status. Bush, however, issued an executive order to protect them.

There are an estimated 50,000 Chinese students in the United States and Canada.

Kennedy said the immigration subcommittee held hearings Jan. 23 at which Chinese students testified they and some of their classmates were harassed and intimidated by Chinese officials.

''Our hearings revealed instances in which students leaders had their careers threatened, their families in China harassed and their activities in the United States monitored and challenged through a variety of means '' Kennedy said.

In a letter to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh asking for the investigation, Kennedy said the documents received by the subcommitee ''show for the first time the extent to which this harassment is an organized campaign directed from Beijing.

''They confirm that the examples of intimidation brought to the attention of the subcommitee are not isolated instances, but are part of a well-organized program to control the Chinese student population,'' he said.

Kennedy added, ''The documents outline an aggressive strategy designed at the highest levels of the Chinese government for the establishment of front groups on U.S. campuses to control Chinese students and to affect U.S. China policy and congressional actions.''

''The documents detail the manner in which every Chinese student in America is identified and monitored, and embassy officials are directed to take specific steps against the government's most active opponents,'' he said.

He noted that Xu Lin, a Chinese diplomat who defected, said he was instructed by his superiors to warn students that discussions with senators about their immigration status could place their families in China in danger.

Kennedy said these actions were a ''serious breach of the diplomatic status of these officials'' and added he was ''particularily concerned that Chinese diplomats were routinely permitted to visit U.S. campuses over the past few months to conduct supposedly normal consular functions when in fact such visits were used to monitor and harass Chinese students - actions which may violate U.S. law.''

BEIJING (MAY 11) UPI - Chinese President Yang Shangkun, at a welcoming banquet for visiting Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, criticized Israel Friday for putting ''new obstacles in the path of peace'' in the Middle East.

Mubarak flew into Beijing earlier in the day for a three-day official visit, his fourth to China and second as Egyptian president.

Yang presided over a red-carpet welcome in Tiananmen Square outside the Great Hall of the People for Mubarak, who told Yang at a meeting afterward he was ''delighted to see the situation in China was stable.''

At the banquet, Yang praised what he called a ''trend of uniting for strength'' among Arab nations, but he criticized Israel. China has been sharply critical of Israel's settlements policy and tough stance toward the Palestinian uprising.

''The Israeli government, disregarding the demand for peace from the people in the Middle East, including the Israeli people, has put new obstacles in the path of peace,'' Yang said. ''This has brought a new factor of instability to the Middle East situation.''

China has maintained political solidarity with the Palestinians and the Arab states, even while pursuing a quiet expansion in trade and other unofficial economic ties with Israel.

Mubarak pledged ''further strengthening unity and cooperation'' between China and Egypt, and said the two countries would ''analyze and assess'' changes in the international scene.

Mubarak's delegation includes Egypt's foreign minister and minister of planning. On Saturday, he is to meet with Premier Li Peng, Communist Party General Secretary Jiang Zemin and with the Beijing Arab and African diplomatic communities.

China is one of Egypt's major military suppliers. Cairo newspapers reported before Mubarak left that the Egyptian government hopes to reschedule some $70 million in military debts to Beijing and increase exports to swap for technology and more arms.

The official Chinese press reported Thursday that trade between China and Egypt was $14.5 million in the first quarter of this year. Total trade last year was $65.2 million.

Mubarak will later visit the Soviet Union, North Korea, Oman and Britain as part of his eight-day tour that began Thursday.

Meanwhile, Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat arrived in Beijing for a brief stopover after a visit to North Korea. Premier Li met with Arafat and hosted a banquet for him, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

INDIANAPOLIS (MAY 11) UPI - Circle Express Inc. was charged Friday by the federal government with lying to the Securities and Exchange Commission about its earnings.

The government also accused former Circle Express chief executive officer Arthur Belford of misappropriating corporate assets through the misuse of company credit cards and the personal use of company property.

The charges against the trucking company and its former executive were brought by U.S Attorney Deborah Daniels through an information-an accusation under oath-as opposed to a grand jury indictment.

Daniels said FBI agents found that Circle Express had originally reported earnings for 1987 of $1,545,000 or 33 cents a share. However, the company later disclosed its earnings for that year were only $326,000, or about 7 cents a share.

The information claims that former officers and directors of Circle provided false financial information to the SEC in the company's 1986 annual report and its report for the second quarter of 1987.

The misstatements were partly the result of manipulations of insurance reserves, the government alleged.

A former officer of the company, Merle Bright, previously was charged with issuing false statements to the SEC in connection with manipulating insurance reserves.

The information claims that Belford misappropriated a substantial amount of corporate assets through the misuse of company credit cards, personal use of the company airplane and company condominium and use of company funds to satisfy a personal obligation.

Belford previously was charged with conspiracy to issue false statements to the SEC.

Bright and Belford could each face a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000, Assistant U.S. Attorney Linda Chapman said.

The company could be subject to a fine of up to $500,000 if convicted.

The statement from Daniels said the FBI is continuing to investigate persons and organizations involved in the events that led to what the government believes was a massive deception of the investing public that resulted in huge losses for investors in Circle Express.

The company has come under new management and all former officers and directors have been replaced. The new management recently announced Circle Express plans to restructure its debt to get the company on a firmer financial footing.

SEATTLE (MAY 11) UPI - The world's largest supplier of titanium nuts and bolts for holding commercial and military aircraft together and two company officers pleaded guilty Friday to selling untested and defective parts.

Donald S. Parker, VSI vice president, pleaded guilty on behalf of the company to one conspiracy count and three charges of mail fraud.

Sentencing for all of the defendants was set for Aug. 20.

''These kinds of practices employed by VSI increase the risks by those who travel on aircraft,'' said U.S. Attorney Mike McKay, who added that the company developed ''a tradition of cheating'' on its testing reports over a 14-year period to ''cut corners and line it's pockets.''

The company agreed to pay $3.5 million in fines and court costs under the criminal settlement and announced it would pay $14.5 million to settle a civil suit filed in federal court in Los Angeles.

Three whistle-blowers, former employees of VSI, who told government investigators of wrongdoing by supervisors, stand to receive in excess of $2.1 million as their share of the civil settlement amount. Division of the money among the three has yet to be determined by a federal district court in Los Angeles.

''The company wants to put all of this behind it,'' said Parker, who insisted the company ''did not ship unsafe parts.''

However, McKay and Assistant U.S. Attorney Bruce Carter, who was in charge of government case, said defective parts were shipped from VSI to various companies, including Boeing, General Dynamic Corp., and Northrup Corp. The number of untested bolts used on both military and commercial aircraft during the 14-year period is in the ''hundreds of millions,'' Carter said.

Ryan and Marderian, who were fired by the company after the case came to light, agreed to cooperate in the government's continuing investigation of VSI and other companies. Each man faces up to five years in prison and up to $250,000 in fines.

VSI, also known as Voi-Shan, faces penalties that have not yet been determined.

The government contended VSI, a subsidiary of Fairchild Industries, falsified and omitted tests on parts used in jetliners and military planes for nearly 15 years.

The Culver City, Calif.,- based company systematically generated fraudulent testing documents for products that had never been tested and, in some cases, for bolts the company knew were defective, the U.S. Attorney's office contended.

The charges culminate a two-year investigation by NORDECON, a special government task force formed to probe fraud in defense contracts in the military and aerospace industries.

Fairchild nuts and bolts, also referred to as fasteners, are installed on almost every military and commercial aircraft, including jets built by the Boeing Co.

Task force personnel raided the VSI plant in Chatsworth, Calif., in February 1989 and seized 50 boxes of test reports. Investigators, led by Carter, uncovered the widespread use of a fictitious ''Inspector 11'' to sign off on hundreds of fraudulent test documents.

The Boeing Company reportedly received two shipments of more than 200 Voi-Shan titanium fasteners approved with test reports certified by the phantom ''Inspector 11.''

The shipments were among the many destined exclusively for the B-2 Stealth bomber project in 1988 and early 1989. Boeing makes primary structures for the bomber, including the outboard section, the aft-center section, fuel system, weapons-delivery system and the landing gear. Boeing has used Voi-Shan parts on military and commercial aircraft for 40 years.

Boeing officials said the company has tested all lots of parts received from Voi-Shan over the past 15 years and retested all lots that could be traced to Inspector 11. No problems were found, officials said.

Carter said that NORDECON has not traced any aircraft accidents directly to substandard parts made by Voi-Shan. But government authorities said shipping defective or untested bolts increased the possibile risk to airline passengers and military personnel.

Carter said more charges are expected in the aerospace and defense contracting industry. He declined to say whether the current investigation continues to focus on Voi-Shan or other aerospace-parts suppliers.

Parker blamed the falsification of testing records on Ryan, Marderian and other supervisors at the Chatsworth plant. A look at the court record, he said, indicates that ''people at the factory took steps to cover (the fraud) up.''

No evidence has been found to implicate executives higher up in VSI, Parker said.

ANCHORAGE, AK (MAY 11) UPI - The Coast Guard said Friday it wants Exxon to finish cleaning the still-oily shores of Alaska by Aug. 15.

The federal on-scene coordinator of the Exxon Valdez oil spill cleanup, Coast Guard Rear Adm. David Ciancaglini, changed Exxon's work plan to require that the oil company take additional steps to protect the environment during the second year of cleaning up oil spilled when its tanker ran aground last year.

Ciancaglini ordered Exxon not to leave treated beaches in a disturbed condition. He told the company that once its crews have removed oil from a beach, they should return it to its earlier shoreline profile.

He also ordered the company to develop a program that protects cultural resources of these shores, which are highly valued and sometimes owned by Alaska natives who first populated the region and depend on the land and sea for food. Other shores are inside national parks.

Exxon launched its second year of cleanup earlier this month in Prince William Sound, and Ciancaglini ordered the oil company to expand its cleanup to oily shores in the Gulf of Alaska no later than June 1.

Ciancaglini ordered Exxon to comply with a list of conditions established by the state of Alaska for Exxon to spray a chemical on oiled beaches to speed up the degradation of oil that cannot be successfully washed off or picked up.

''I must take into account a host of considerations including eagle nesting activities, spawning of a variety of species of fish, wildlife considerations, land manager rules and restrictions, weather and much more '' Ciancaglini said. ''I believe that Exxon's plan, modified by me, addresses these concerns as well as the inputs of the various agencies and communities affected.''

Ciancaglini approved an Exxon cleanup plan, submitted in late April, with nine conditions. The final one ordered Exxon to ''conduct all activities using the least intrusive technique to accomplish the job and produce a net environmental benefit.''

In a letter to Exxon spill cleanup manager Otto Harrison, Cianacglini said Exxon should ''atttempt to initially complete cleanup activities by 15 August 1990'' and immediately conduct a late summer assessment of how clean the beaches are and include state, federal and local representatives.

When Exxon ended its $2 billion 5 1/2-month cleanup last Sept. 15, oil remained on Alaska shores, making it necessary to resume the cleanup this spring.

The Exxon Valdez had just filled up with oil and was bound for Long Beach, Calif., when it hit Bligh Reef, 25 miles south of the Valdez oil terminal, broke up and in a few hours gushed nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil into the pristine waters of Prince William Sound.

The worst spill in U.S. history coated almost 1,200 miles of shore, killed tens of thousands of animals, ruined fishing and required an army of 12,000 people to fight the effects of the spill and work to clean it up.

Exxon's renewed cleanup, modest in comparison, was to employ 1,100 people, 300 of them on shoreline detail. But with the resumed cleanup just a week old, Exxon cleanup official Randy Buckley said 100 people were at work cleaning up beaches.

Oil remains on more 358 miles of shoreline, most of it lightly oiled, but 50 miles of widely scattered shores have heavy or moderate amounts of oil, according to Exxon and government surveys.

NEW YORK (MAY 11) UPI - The trial jury considering the fate of the accused ringleader of last summer's Bensonhurst racial killing asked the judge for a change of clothes and permission to attend Sunday church services, indicating a verdict could be days away.

The state Supreme Court panel in Brooklyn also asked Justice Thaddeus Owens for crossword puzzles and the latest sports scores.

The jury notes squashed speculation the panel was near a verdict, based on its earlier request for a definition of the second-degree murder charge facing Keith Mondello, the accused ringleader in the slaying of a black teenager that inflamed racial tensions citywide.

''I thought 20 minutes and they'll come back with a conviction, and now they want clean clothes,'' said Stephen Murphy, attorney for the 19-year-old Mondello, who is charged with whipping up a white mob into an attack in which Yusuf Hawkins, 16, was shot dead.

The jury also asked for a definition of first-degree manslaughter, which indicated it was considering that less serious count as an option to the second-degree murder charge.

As the jury for Mondello spent its fourth day in deliberations, a separate jury for accused triggerman Joseph Fama, 19, heard repeats of testimony.

Both Fama and Mondello are charged with second-degree murder for the Aug. 23 killing. There are two juries in the trial because Mondello gave statements to police fingering Fama as the killer.

Wednesday, Mondello's jury asked for explanations of four verdicts they can consider - second-degree ''with intent'' and second-degree ''depraved indifference,'' as well as first- and second-degree manslaughter - and for a separate definition of ''intent.''

In a second-degree murder verdict involving ''depraved indifference to human life,'' intention to kill does not have to be proved. The charge carries a sentence of 25 years to life.

Fama's jury, in its third day of deliberations, appeared to be struggling with the testimony of witnesses incriminating him as the gunman.

They asked for readbacks of testimony of a neighborhood woman, Irene DeSerio, who said she saw Fama at the head of the mob before the attack, holding something to his side.

The prosecution's star witness, Frank Tighe, a neighborhood buddy of Fama's with a history of mental problems and hallucinations, testified he saw Fama point the gun at Hawkins and fire four times.

Hawkins and three black friends had caught the subway from East New York to Brooklyn to look at a used car and were mistaken for a group of blacks and Hispanics rumored to be headed for the Bensonhurst neighborhood.

His slaying exposed deep racial divisions in New York City and triggered months of demonstrations and protests.

Mondello and Fama are the first of eight young men to be tried for the slaying.

WASHINGTON (UPI)- The State Department blamed the Soviet Union Friday for blocking an ''Open Skies'' agreement to open up NATO and Warsaw Pact countries to aerial military surveillance.

Secetary of State James Baker is scheduled to leave Monday for a three-day series of meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnaze in what was supposed to be a push to settle arms control issues before the May 30-June 3 Washington summit.

Richard Boucher, a State Department spokesman, said the Soviets ''have blocked consensus'' on issues involved in the Open Skies conference, which opened in Ottawa in February and gave promise of an early agreement in a follow-up meeting this week in Budapest.

But Boucher said, ''The negotiations in Budapest did not, as we had hoped, reach agreement. ... Key issues remain to be decided.''

The Budapest conference has been postponed because of disagreements, a State Department spokesman said.

Those issues, according to the department, include questions about the ownership of the aircraft to fly over the territory, what kind of equipment would be permitted on such aircraft, the number of overflights, and whether these could include non-participating countries, such as Switzerland or China.

The Soviets have also raised questions, according to Boucher, about the number of flights to be permitted.

Boucher said, ''The Soviets, who favor a less intrusive regime, have blocked consensus on most of these issues.''

The Open Skies concept, proposed by President Bush in May 1989, is an elaboration on a 1955 idea put forward by President Eisenhower. The Eisenhower proposal was rejected immediately by the Soviet government under Nikita Khruschev, but the Bush proposal was accepted, as a general principle, by the Soviet government of Mikhail Gorbachev this year.

But, in late spring, the Soviets appeared to reverse their willingness to go along with foreign planes flying over Soviet territory and photographing sensitive military installations, U.S officials said.

Under the guidelines proposed by the United States and Canada in Ottawa, turbo-prop planes, flying with only short notice over suspect military installations, would guarantee that no surprise military buildup was taking place.

FAIRFAX, VA (MAY 11) UPI - A former American University president was charged Friday with two misdemeanor counts of making indecent telephone calls reportedly traced to his university office, Fairfax County police said.

Richard Berendzen, 51, of Washington, D.C., was formally charged Friday when he met with police at his lawyer's office in Fairfax County, said Commonwealth's Attorney Robert F. Horan Jr.

Berenzden is accused of making harassing and sexually indecent calls to a county woman, and then to her husband, on March 28 and March 29. He was released on his written promise to appear at trial June 28 in General District Court in Fairfax County.

The charges of ''using indecent language while engaging in coversation over the telephone'' are misdemeanors and are each punishable by up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine, said police spokesman Michael Proffitt.

Berendzen, a respected educator credited with helping the image of American University in his 10 years as president, resigned unexpectedly in early April. His resignation became public April 10, at which time school officials attributed his departure simply to ''exhaustion.''

Two weeks later it was revealed that police were investigating allegations that Berendzen made obscene telephone calls from his office, and the school acknowledged Berendzen had been forced from his job amid allegations of ''improper behavior.''

Lia Vannheisser, a spokeswoman at American, said Friday the university would have no comment ''since he's no longer with the university.''

Neither Berendzen nor his attorney, Gerard Treanor, were immediately available for comment Friday.

The investigation began after a woman who advertised to do babysitting complained about receiving obscene calls. The woman is married to a Fairfax County police investigator, and the calls were eventually traced to American University, and then allegedly to Berendzen's private office.

WASHINGTON (MAY 11) UPI - The founder and former chairman of Ultimate Corp. said Friday that he may mount an effort to acquire the East Hanover, N.J., computer company, setting the scene for a possible battle for control with a major holder of Ultimate stock.

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Theodore Sabarese said he is ''currently considering engaging in one or more transactions to acquire control of the company ... through an offer to purchase shares of common stock or a merger or other business combination.''

Sabarese said he may also propose a new slate of nominees for election to Ultimate's board of directors.

His filing came just two days after Norman Elowitz, chief executive officer of Honey Fashions Ltd. in New York City, said in an SEC filing that he was thinking of making an offer for Ultimate's outstanding stock.

Elowitz expressed Wednesday his interest in the company and announced he had bought an additional 100,000 shares of Ultimate stock, bringing his stake to 686,000 shares, representing 7.2 percent of the company's 9.4 million shares outstanding.

Elowitz made a $10-a-share offer for Ultimate last November that was rejected by the board. He employed as his investment banker France's Parabis Corp.

Ultimate has taken steps to guarantee any takeover bid will be a friendly one. The company in April sent a letter to shareholders announcing a rights plan designed to ''protect shareholders in the event of an unsolicited attempt to acquire the company.''

Under it, if an outside investor acquires 10 percent of the company's outstanding common stock or announces an offer to acquire 20 percent or more, shareholders can exercise rights to buy newly issued shares of common stock at $25 a share. This would cause ''substantial dilution'' to the suitor, the company said in the letter.

The plan, however, would not interfere with a friendly merger.

Elowitz stresses his desire to work with Ultimate's board. ''I have stipulated from the beginning I am only interestd in a friendly offer,'' he said.

Sabarese left the company last June. An Ultimate spokesman attributed his departure to Sabarese's filing for personal bankruptcy.

In his SEC filing, Sabarese said his decision on whether to bid for Ultimate will be based on several factors, such as the company's prospects market activity in Ultimate stock and the availability of financing.

The filing also said Sabarese is currently holding discussions with a number of parties, including investment banking firms, on obtaining debt or equity financing for the purchase.

Sabarese recently held 626,400 shares, or 6.6 percent, of Ultimate's common stock but last week concluded an agreement approved by a U.S. Bankruptcy Judge that will transfer 575,000 shares of these to Midlantic National Bank, one of his creditors.

The price of Ultimate stock closed up 62.5 cents to $7 a share in New York Stock Exchange trading Friday.

Ultimate, which markets a proprietary computer operating system it has developed along with different software packages, has subsidiaries in France, Canada and Australia and revenues of about $173 million.

SEATTLE (MAY 11) UPI - The New York Yankees Friday traded Dave Winfield to California for a player to be named, but the 12-time All-Star outfielder has refused to report to the Angels.

According to a Yankees spokesman, New York will play with 24 men on its roster until an arbitrator decides Winfield's fate. As a player with 10 years in the majors and five with his current team, Winfield can veto any trade.

The Yankees said the Angels are on a list of seven teams Winfield said he would accept a trade with, and they claim the list supercedes the 10-and-5 rule. Winfield, however, said the list was only for teams he would consider going to.

''There's nothing in the contract,'' Winfield said. ''Those are teams I would consider going to, not teams I would agree to go to.''

Winfield said New York Manager Bucky Dent and General Manager Harding Petersen informed him of the trade at 3:15 p.m. PDT, 45 minutes before the club announced the deal at a news conference at the Kingdome.

''They said you're traded to California,'' Winfield said. ''I said I'm not going. Everything's in limbo right now. I'm not going to California, nothing against the Angels. They're wonderful people. It's a nice city, a nice team, but I'll make the determination of where and when I go.''

The name of the Angels player will be withheld until the Winfield issue is decided. In fact, the Angels refused to confirm the trade. California spokesman Tim Mead told UPI: ''As far as we're concerned we have not announced a deal so there is no deal.''

The Yankees announced the deal hours before they opened a three-game series against the Seattle Mariners Friday night.

Winfield has fueded bitterly with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner during many of his 10 years in New York. He sat out the 1989 season because of a back injury, and was off to a slow start this year.

Winfield, 38, has 359 career homers and took a .287 lifetime average into this season, but is hitting just .213 with two homers and six RBI in 61 at-bats. Winfield has started only against left-handers since Claudell Washington was acquired from California April 29. Washington has played in left field against righthanders.

Winfield was also upset this week when he learned the Yankees left him off the All-Star ballot, calling for the firing for whoever was responsible.

That person was Pedersen, who met earlier in the week with Winfield to try and resolve the situation.

Before signing with the Yankees as a free agent Dec. 15, 1980, Winfield spent eight years with the San Diego Padres.

COLLEGE STATION, TX (MAY 11) UPI - The economic future of the United States depends on a sweeping commitment to improving education, Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher told Texas A&M graduates Friday.

Mosbacher said to compete in the competitive global market, President Bush has proposed a broad plan that ''requires the cooperation of every segment of society.''

Included in the proposal is about $71 billion in federal research and development projects, the secretary said.

Mosbacher, a Houston oilman before his appointment to the Cabinet, spoke to about 1,100 students receiving graduate degrees and undergraduate degrees in liberal arts and education.

The commerce secretary reminded the graduates that recent world events have created a larger global marketplace in which they can play an active role.

''Increasingly, foreign governments are looking toward free enterprise,'' he said, ''and the United States is committed to securing an open and fair world trading system and is determined to being prepared to respond to the new opportunities.''

BOSTON (MAY 11) UPI - A 5-year-old girl who was kidnapped for 37 days flew to her hometown Friday, one day after authorities found her living in a trailer in Florida with her alleged abductor.

The child, Nicole Ravesi of Milford, Mass., appeared to be in good condition when she arrived at Logan International Airport accompanied by her parents. Her mother, Debra Ravesi, said Nicole believes she was on vacation with her babysitter.

Authorities found the child living with the suspect, Kenneth Cole, 24, of Holliston, Mass., in a trailer at a fishing camp on the Florida panhandle after the camp's owner recognized Cole from a local news report. The kidnapping also was featured on ''America's Most Wanted,'' which authorities largely credited for her recovery.

Cole was being held in a medium security federal facility in Tallahassee. Officials said he would likely be returned to Massachusetts to face federal kidnapping charges.

Frank Ravesi, speaking at a news conference at the airport moments after landing with his daughter, said he was more suspicious of people following the ordeal.

''We probably wouldn't let anyone get as close to our family as we did before,'' he said.

An FBI spokesman said an initial examination indicated the girl was not physically harmed.

Debra Ravesi said her daughter simply ''thinks she was on vacation with a friend.''

Frank Ravesi confirmed that officials with the state Department of Social Services accompanied the family to Florida to retrieve the girl Thursday night.

Media reports had said the department was preparing to cite the family for negligence after they allowed a close relationship to develop between Cole and Nicole when the girl was kidnapped.

The department could not be reached for immediate comment.

Cole was once employed as a school bus driver with Debra Ravesi. Letters found in his room several days after the April 3 abduction indicated he had become obsessed with the girl and wanted to kidnap her because the Ravesi family was planning to move, police said.

Police said they believe Cole kidnapped the girl by luring her into his mother's car at a Milford parking lot. The car was later found in a Providence train station.

In late February, the Ravesi family had obtained a restraining order against Cole, claiming he had shown inordinate affection toward the girl. The order had expired and was never renewed.

Cole apparently disguised Nicole as a boy and had her call him ''dad'' during their travels.

PASADENA, CA (MAY 11) UPI - An apparently obsessed fan charged with threatening to kill ''Tonight Show'' host Johnny Carson was committed Friday to Patton State Hospital until he regains his mental competency to stand trial.

Ken Gause, 36, of Milwaukee, Wis., was declared mentally incompetent last month by Superior Court Judge Charles C. Lee. He then underwent an evaulation by county mental health officials who recommended that he be incarcerated at Patton, said Deputy District Attorney Robert Cohen.

Gause will be held at the facility until he regains his mental competency. Cohen said Gause cannot be held at Patton for longer than six years, the maximum sentence he faces if convicted of the two charges against him - making terrorist threats and sending threatening letters.

But if he has not regained his mental competency by the end of six years and it is determined that he still poses a danger to the public, further proceedings can be instituted to keep him at the hospital longer, Cohen said.

The judge will evaluate a status report on Gause's condition Aug. 24.

''Mr. Carson is happy that he's (Gause) getting the help he needs,'' Cohen said. ''He's always wanted him to get help.''

Gause was arrested Dec. 7 at NBC's Burbank studios after walking into the main lobby and demanding to speak to Carson. Authorities found a makeshift weapon in his possession at the time of his arrest.

Police said that over two years, Gause has sent numerous letters and tape recordings to Carson, threatening to kill him.

NBC security guards were expecting Gause because in one of his threatening letters to Carson, he said he would be visiting the studio in December.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 11) UPI - L.A. Gear plans to push a less aloof, more friendly Michael Jackson this summer in its blockbuster campaign for Jackson's signature line of sneakers and clothes, an executive said Friday.

''People are going to see Michael in a more casual way in these ads, rather than strictly as an entertainer,'' said Adam Bleibtrau, executive producer of the campaign. ''We're going for a combination of fun and fashion.''

The campaign is critical for L.A. Gear, which built itself into the nation's third-largest athletic shoemaker, behind Nike and Reebok, by selling flashy sneakers to teenage girls. Its marketing campaigns have been widely praised for taking advantage of the Southern California image as a fun-filled fantasy land of healthy-looking beautiful models.

The company, which had $11 million in sales five years ago, is expected to top $1 billion in sales this year. But when it announced last September the Jackson endorsement deal, worth a reported $20 million, some analysts accused the company of over-reaching.

''I think that the public will see Michael being a little more relaxed,'' Bleibtrau said.

The ads may also feature a wide variety of supporting players, including dozens of children, teenagers and two of Jackson's pet chimpanzees, Max and Alexander.

''Michael has always had a tremendously broad appeal, and we're trying to capture that,'' Bleibtrau said.

(MAY 11) UPI - President Bush still isn't saying whether he will seriously consider raising taxes as an option to reduce the deficit.

A bi-partisan panel of administration and congressional representatives will meet on Tuesday to discuss a plan to slash the mounting deficit and come to terms with the budget conundrum.

Bush, however, remains tight-lipped... even amid growing criticism... about his own budget goals.

He says he will make good on assurances to congressional leaders to put all his cards on the negotiating table, but says, right now, he's NOT going to show his hand because he has NOT seen other hands being laid down on Capital Hill.

The president emphasises that he will discuss any and all possible solutions to the budget crisis, including higher taxes.

Some reports say White House Chief of Staff John Sununu is in trouble for hinting that Bush is uncompromising about his campaign pledge to NOT raise taxes. Bush today dismissed the remarks as ''silly'' and ''stupid.''

President Bush set a timetable today for an American visit to Mars.

Bush says he wants to see American astronauts touch down on the red planet within 30 years... by the year 2019. Having made the forecast, Bush failed to provide details on how the expensive venture would be financed and when the project should get started.

Speaking in Kingsville, Texas, Bush also failed to say whether he thought the U-S should work with other nations to achieve the Mars touchdown. His comment at the Texas A-and-I University commencement ceremony came as a follow-up to an earlier statement that U-S astronauts should go to Mars.

Said Bush- ''Today we're NO longer just asking for the Moon. We've been there. We're looking further, to carry the American adventure to where-ever opportunity, curiosity and need will take us.''

ANCHORAGE, AK (MAY 11) UPI - The Coast Guard seized a Japanese fishing vessel Friday for allegedly operating in U.S. waters without permission and was escorting the ship to an Alaska port, authorities said.

This is the second time the Koei Maru No. 20 has been spotted fishing inside American waters, according to Coast Guard officials at the Alaska operations center in Juneau.

The last time this Japanese vessel was seen fishing in the U.S. zone was exactly one year to the day before the vessel was seized for conducting new illegal fishing operations in American waters, Coast Guard spokesman Ed Moreth said.

No Coast Guard law enforcement vessels were on hand when the alleged violation occurred one year ago, but government lawyers developed a case which they still have a file on, Lt. Susan Hargis said.

But this time the Coast Guard says it caught the Japanese fishing 2 miles inside the U.S. exclusive economic zone Thursday night. The vessel was taken into custody Friday afternoon north of the Aleutian Island chain in the Bering Sea west of the Alaska mainland.

A Coast Guard boarding party reported that it found 320 metric tons of pollock on the Japaness stern trawler.

The Coast Guard cutter Storis was escorting the Koei Maru No. 20 to the Aleutian Islands fishing port of Dutch Harbor where it was due Sunday.

Normally, the Coast Guard takes seized vessels to its base on Kodiak Island, but Hargis said the cutter was taking the ship to the nearest available port so the cutter could return to enforcement duty in the Bering Sea where surveillance flights recently have spotted six foreign vessels fishing in U.S. waters.

The Japanese ship is the second foreign fishing vessel to be seized in U.S. waters off Alaska in the last two weeks. The cutter Yocona seized the Soviet trawler Ilya Ilyin April 26 in the Bering Sea and took it to Kodiak where the Soviet vessel remains in custody with its crew detained on board.

The U.S. attorney for Alaska filed a complaint May 2 against the Soviets seeking forfeiture of the vessel for violation of the Magnuson Fisheries Conservation and Management Act. Action is pending against the Japanese vessel.

Foreign flag vessels are prohibited from fishing in U.S. waters.

Fleets are known to operate in an area of international waters known as the doughnut hole, surrounded by U.S. and Soviet waters. American fishermen and the Coast Guard have accused these vessels of working near the eastern edge of the international zone to stage forays across the line into U.S. waters.

(MAY 11) UPI - Floodwaters in Texas and Arkansas are reported to have weakened levees along the course of the raging Red River.

Officials say levees along the river have turned ''soft and mushy.'' Parts of a levee at Ogden, Arkansas, broke late yesterday... prompting the evacuation of seven homes and a church after the Red River crested about seven feet above flood stage. Authorities say six or seven more families had to leave flooded homes after more of the leeve broke.

The levee break is said to be 40 to 50 yards wide, with anywhere from two to four feet of water pouring through. At another point, up to 20-thousand head of cattle were stranded. The Arkansas National Guard used a mobile bridge to transport feed to the cattle.. but scrapped a plan to move them to safety aboard the bridge.

Said Guard Sergeant Brit Ball, ''These cattle are scared and we're NOT cowboys. We'll probably save more this way.''

The Senate kicked off debate today on financing future political campaigns.

Observers say the debate is expected to be long and difficult. Both Democrats and Republicans believe the present system needs to be revamped, but note that sharp differences exist on how to achieve a comprehensive overhaul.

Although the issue is complex, the differences between the two parties center on a few points. These include campaign spending limits, public financing and so-called ''soft'' money, which involves certain spending and contributions that are NOT reported.

NO votes were taken today and it's expected that while the senators will continue the debate for the next few weeks, the real action will take place away from the Senate floor. This is expected to involve a small group of negotiators who will try to achieve a compromise accord.

(MAY 11) UPI - Defense lawyers are arguing that six new drug counts against Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry will interfere with Barry's right to a speedy trial.

The lawyers, however, don't say whether they will seek a court delay to prepare to fight the additional charges filed against Barry yesterday by a federal grand jury.

The latest indictment alleges that Barry bought and used cocaine and crack with more than 10 unnamed co-conspirators dating back to 1984... half of his time in office... and possessed illegal drugs on many occasions from November 1987 to January 1990.

Barry's attorney, R. Kenneth Mundy, says he's already battled serious time constraints in preparing to meet the eight complex charges in the first indictment.

Mundy says yesterday's new allegation ''violates'' an understanding he had with prosecutors that there would be NO last-minute charges.

Barry is scheduled for arraignment on those counts on Tuesday.

Federal researchers are reporting on a new drug linked to the fight against AIDS.

They say the recently approved drug appears to offer a better way of protecting AIDS patients against a life-threatening infection of the brain and nervous system. Tests of the drug show it to be at least as effective as a previous drug used.

Researchers at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease say the new drug is also less toxic than the previous drug.

On a related front, federal health officials reported on the nation's first AIDS virus field study. They say it indicates that the AIDS virus may be far less common in some communities than previously estimated.

They note, for instance that Dallas County, Texas, was projected to have between 56-hundred and 16-thousand adults with immuno-deficiency virus ... or H-I-V... the virus that causes AIDS.

But the field survey showed instead a projection of between four-thousand and 75-hundred cases. The Dallas survey was designed to test the reliability of a planned nation-wide canvas that will cover a three-year period.

(MAY 11) UPI - Aspiring writer Linda Vernon has won the ninth annual Bulwer-Lytton Fiction contest for the worst piece of writing.

The San Jose-sponsored contest celebrates the overbearing literary efforts of the early English author Edward Bulwer-Lytton, who is best known for penning the lengthy sentence that begins, ''It was a dark and stormy night....''

Entrants are challenged to compose intentionally bad opening sentences to imaginery novels.

A housewife and mother of three, Vernon says she doesn't know how she came up with the award-winning sentence. She says she sat down at her electric typewriter and quickly banged out this entry...

''Dolores breezed along the surface of her life like a flat stone forever skipping along smooth water, rippling reality sporadically but oblivious to it consistently, until she finally lost momentum, sank and, due to an overdose of fluoride as a child which caused her to suffer from chronic apathy, doomed herself to lie forever on the floor of her life as useless as an appendix and as lonely as a 500-pound barbell in a steroid-free fitness center.''

(MAY 11) UPI - Flooding continues in Texas and Arkansas... entertainer Sammy Davis Junior near death... officials probe Philippine Airline explosion... and Interior Secretary angers conservationists. U-P-I has the top stories and more, next:

Rain is predicted over much of the United States this weekend, and NOwhere is it needed less than the flooded regions of Texas and Arkansas.

Thunderstorms have caused a flash flood watch to be posted for parts of both states as residents cope with the overflowing Red River. To make matters worse, an emergency official warns levees along the river are ''saturated, soft and mushy.''

The Federal Emergency Management Agency today raised to 25 the number of Texas counties designated as disaster areas. In Arkansas, Governor Bill Clinton asked for a federal disaster declaration for the entire state.

As many as 20-thousand head of cattle are stranded by the flooding in Arkansas. The National Guard used a mobile bridge to transport feed to the cattle.

Friends say entertainer Sammy Davis Junior may be on his death bed. Davis reportedly is down to 60 or 70 pounds suffering from throat cancer.

Comedian Jerry Lewis said today- ''We're going to lose him.''

Lewis says he has been in daily contact with Davis's family. Now, he says, ''It's a matter of days or perhaps hours.''

The heavy-smoking, 64-year-old song and dance man was diagnosed with throat cancer last fall. He was released from a Los Angeles hospital six weeks ago, but his condition at his home in Hollywood Hills has steadily worsened.

The prognosis is better for Elizabeth Taylor despite news today that she will remain hospitalized with new illnesses.

Taylor was hospitalized in April with a sinus infection and high fever, which developed into viral pneumonia.

Hospital officials say at least 87 others were injured, including two people in serious condition. An airline spokesman says the Boeing 737 was being towed to the runway for a domestic flight when there was an explosion in the midsection of the passenger cabin.

The president of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce was killed. So were five women and a four-year-old girl.

The Philippine Transport Secretary went to the scene and said investigators are probing the possibility that the explosion was caused by a bomb timed to go off in flight.

The takeoff was delayed by another flight's departure. The transport secretary said the explosion could have killed more people had it occurred in the air.

(MAY 11) UPI - F-B-I Director William Sessions is defending his agency against recent allegations of racism within the bureau's ranks.

Several former and current F-B-I employees recently told a House Judiciary subcommittee that institutional discrimination by the agency has gotten worse since a 1988 Texas class action suit.

In that case, an El Paso judge ruled that the F-B-I was guilty of systematic prejudice against Hispanic agents and must work to promote them.

Since then, a number of agents who participated in the suit have said they have been punished in retaliation.

Sessions told reporters today he has made many key changes at the bureau, but NEVERtheless will investigate the charges.

He said to aggressively recruit minority agents, the F-B-I must be perceived as- in his words- ''a ''good place to work.''

(MAY 11) UPI - NASA engineers are continuing to get the Hubble Space Telescope ready for its picture-taking debut next week.

Technicans today corrected a math error that pointed the telescope in the worng direction, and hope to finish tests of the observatory's fine guidance sensors this weekend.

Work on the Hubble continues as a newly-released government report calls for an urgent upgrading of the nation's spacecraft fleet.

An Office of Technology assessment study says that NASA will face another space shuttle disaster within the next few years unless the program gets money for a major facelift.

The report says the space program has made major strides toward recovering from the Challenger explosion, but is at a critical point for planning for the future.

Experts say Congress must outline a long-term strategy for the program, and consider buying one or more shuttles... at about two-BILLION dollars a piece.

The report also draws attention to President Bush's goal announced today of putting Americans on Mars by the year 2019... in time to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the first manned lunar landing.

Government reports say a slowdown in the nation's economy is easing inflation and controlling interest rates.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics say lower energy and food costs resulted in an overall dip in wholesale prices during April. Prices dropped three-tenths of one percent after falling two-tenths of a percent in March.

The Commerce Department's Census Bureau says slower automobile sales caused a retail sales drop of six-tenths of one percent in April, to 148-BILLION dollars.

The data, much better than expected by most analysts, confirmed an economic slowdown suggested last week by higher unemployment figures released by the Labor Department.

LINCOLN, NE (MAY 12) BUSINESS WIRE - The chairman and chief executive officer of U S WEST Inc. Saturday urged University of Nebraska graduates to ''lay aside the nonsense you hear about concentrating on yourself'' and take a broader view of life.

In his commencement address to the university's 120th graduating class, Jack A. MacAllister said in his experience the most successful people are those with curiosity, commitment and a sense of caring.

''They are the men and women who know the importance of learning, the value of family, the need for quality in their work, and the urgency of reaching out to a society that hurts,'' he said.

MacAllister, who spent many years of his 40-year career in Nebraska, including seven as president of Northwestern Bell, told of a recent trip to talk with U S WEST business partners around the world.

''I learned not only about our ventures, but about bringing down walls that separate people from their dreams of freedom and opportunity.

''There is an increasing awareness of the importance of responding to the needs of the people,'' he said.

MacAllister told the graduates they were fortunate to have attended a university that understands that importance, ''a university whose commitment is to both academic leadership and community service.''

COLUMBIA, SOUTH CAROLINA, (MAY 12) - President George Bush, saying U.S. aid was needed to entrench democracy in Eastern Europe, Saturday announced creation of a volunteer "Citizens Democracy Corps" to spur and coordinate private sector initiatives in that part of the world.

He also announced that the U.S. Export-Import Bank would begin extending medium-term (five to seven years) export credits and loan guarantees to Poland to buy U.S. technology and services. Until now Eximbank offered only short-term trade credit insurance.

Speaking at a graduation ceremony at the University of South Carolina here,

Mr. Bush told some 2,000 students, "We sometimes hear today that with freedom's great triumph, America's work is done. Nothing could be further from the truth."

"For Eastern Europe constitution-builders, the work has only now begun... Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary stand now, in the spring of 1990, as America stood in the summer of 1787. Who will be their Washingtons, their Hamiltons and Madisons," he added.

Calling the United States "a shining example," the president said: "We've learned through hard experience that the only alternative to the tyranny of man is the rule of law...That is why we must export our experience, our two centuries of accumulated wisdom on the workings of free government."

The proposed corps would match Eastern European requests for help with U.S. private sector groups in the fields of constitutional law, parliamentary procedures, English language teaching, public health, environment protection, banking and commerce as well as journalism.

The U.S. Government is to provide an initial outlay of 300,000 dollars in fiscal 1991, which begins next October. The corps would then generate its own finances.

MEXICO CITY, (MAY 12) - The Chamber of Deputies Saturday overwhelmingly endorsed a bill that would end state control of the banking sector.

The bill, introduced by President Carlos Salinas last week, received necessary two-thirds majority -- 339 of the 500 deputies.

The conservative opposition National Action Party joined hands with the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party to privatize the banking sector, nationalized since 1982. The leftist opposition voted against.

The bill, under which the state would retain a stake in the banking sector, is part of the policy of economic liberalization introduced by Mr. Salinas since he took office in December 1988.

The banks were nationalized by then president Jose Lopez Portillo at a time when Mexico was undergoing a serious economic crisis and three months before he handed over power to his successor, Miguel de la Madrid.

A few months later, Mr. de la Madrid allowed private capital to return to the banking sector, but limited its participation to 33 per cent.

LONDON, MAY 12 - Crude oil was leaking from a tanker in the English Channel on Saturday following a collision with a fishing trawler off Devon in southwest England, coast guard officials said.

The coast guard officials in Brixham said that about 1,000 tonnes of crude had leaked from the 274,000-ton tanker, the Liberian-registered Rose Bay, following the collision with the fishing vessel, the Dionne Marie.

They said a pollution-control aircraft had been sent to the scene to determine the extent of the spill.

The accident took place 20 kilometers (12 miles) off the coast of Devon.

There were no injuries. The Rose Bay was heading to Rotterdam from the Gulf when it collided with the Dionne Marie.

The Dionne Marie was able to make it into port but at least one of the tanks of the Rose Bay had been damaged, officials said.

NEW YORK (MAY 11) UPI - In the most important speech of his young administration, Mayor David Dinkins Friday night made an unprecedented and emotional plea for racial harmony broadcast live on TV and radio stations throughout the city.

''This city is sick of violence. And we're aching, and we must heal the pain,'' said Dinkins, whose leadership has been placed under the spotlight by a number of recent racially charged events.

Dinkins criticized the whites responsible for the anti-black racism that led to Brooklyn's Bensonhurst killing of a black teenager last summer, and the blacks for the anti-Asian ''bigotry'' he said was fueling a boycott of two Korean-owned stores in Flatbush.

''Let us not permit the prejudices of a few - in Flatbush, in Bensonhurst or anywhere else - to silence the good will of the rest of us,'' he said.

The mayor stressed he was making a ''personal commitment'' to ease tensions and to directly intervene to mediate an end to the store boycott.

But he also made a direct appeal to the people of the city.

''Right now, each of you must look into your own hearts, in your own families. Look honestly at yourselves, and your own communities, and ask whether you can be swayed by prejudice and what you're going to do about it,'' he said.

''No matter how much government can do, government cannot substitute for the content of our character.''

Some 500 political, community and religious leaders packed the Council chambers at City Hall to witness the hastily planned event carried live by all five local television stations and by several radio stations.

Another 300 jammed the neighboring Board of Estimate Chambers and 200 more crowded the Blue Room downstairs.

Dinkins had made a special appeal to broadcast executives for the valuable 30 minutes of evening air time, marking the first occasion a mayor had made such a request in recent memory.

Plans for the unprecedented speech drew fire, however, from an Orthodox Jewish Councilman, Noach Dear of Brooklyn, who asked the mayor to postpone it because Orthodox Jews were not allowed to watch TV or listen to the radio Fridays after sundown.

POTOSI, MO (MAY 11) UPI - A junior high school dropout who spent 10 years on death row was executed by lethal injection Friday for killing a divorced mother he met in a bar and took back to her apartment.

Winford Stokes, 39, was pronounced dead at 9:39 p.m. at Potosi Correctional Center, said Dale Riley, assistant director of the Division of Adult Institutions in Missouri.

''Stokes made no last statements. He was calm throughout the entire process,'' Riley said.

The execution came two hours after the Supreme Court vacated a stay granted by a lower court earlier in the week.

Stokes, sentenced to prison in the fatal shooting of a widow in 1977 and a bar owner in 1969, was placed on death row Jan. 17, 1980, for the murder of Pamela R. Benda, 33, a divorced mother of three. Stokes met her in a bar and they went to her apartment.

The execution was the 125th in the United States since capital punishment was reinstated by the Supreme Court in 1976, and the second in Missouri this year.

''The death warrant (was) read at 9:31 p.m.,'' Riley said. ''The first lethal dosage administered at 9:36 p.m. death was pronounced at 9:39 p.m.

Riley said the execution equipment worked without malfunctions. During the execution of a man in Florida May 4, the electric chair apparatus worked improperly, causing flames to shoot up from the headgear.

''There were no absolutely glitches in the process,'' Riley said of Stokes' execution. ''Everything proceeded exactly as scheduled.''

The state had 12 witnesses, Riley said. Stokes requested no one to witness his death.

The St. Louis native ordered a last meal of fried catfish, French fries, cole slaw and a 2-liter bottle of Pepsi, but did not ask for any dessert.

Riley said Stokes asked for a sedative and received one at 7:20 p.m. His wife Evette and his mother-in-law visited him earlier in the day, but they left at 6 p.m. and were not present for the execution.

Riley said the death row inmate seemed in a good mood earlier Friday, had asked for cigarettes and Pepsi Cola to be brought to his isolation cell, and spent the morning watching television.

Stokes had been scheduled for death at 12:01 a.m. Friday, but a stay was issued Wednesday by U.S. District Judge George Gunn Jr. in St. Louis - the same day the Supreme Court rejected an appeal by the condemned man.

State Attorney General William Webster's office filed a petition with the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals asking that the stay be lifted.

A three-judge panel upheld the stay earlier Friday, and the full court declined early in the evening to overturn Gunn's decision.

But the Supreme Court issued an order at 7:25 p.m. that the stay be lifted said Mary Jenkins, a spokeswoman for the state Attorney General's office.

Benda, a mother of three, was strangled and stabbed, and her nude body was found Feb. 21, 1978, on the bedroom floor of her apartment in University City, a suburb of St. Louis.

Benda, employed as a waitress at the Washington University Faculty Club, met Stokes in a bar, and the two went to her apartment. Her body was found with a pillow case over her head and an apron wrapped around her neck.

One month before he was convicted in Benda's murder, Stokes pleaded guilty to the 1977 fatal shooting of Marie Montgomery, 77, a St. Louis widow. He received a 50-year prison sentence on a second-degree murder charge in that case.

Stokes previously had served six years in prison after being convicted of manslaughter and other charges in the fatal shooting of a St. Louis tavern owner in 1969.

Stokes was one of 10 children and attended school only through the eighth grade.

After Webster's office filed the petition for the stay to be vacated, Stokes had prepared for possible execution early Friday morning. He was served a dinner of sirloin steak, broccoli with cheese sauce, a salad with dressing, strawberry shortcake and a 2-liter bottle of cola Thursday night Riley said.

The prisoner also was given a sedative and visited with his wife and mother-in-law, Riley said. He remained calm and was not upset about the proceedings, Riley said. He did not request a visit from a chaplain.

The three-judge panel of the 8th Circuit Court conferred via telephone conference call Thursday night and announced at 10:45 p.m. they would issue their decision Friday.

PHILADELPHIA (MAY 11) UPI - The Philadelphia 76ers thought they were on their way to a resounding victory over the Chicago Bulls.

Instead, they had to hang on for dear life Friday night to post a 118-112 triumph that cut the Bulls' lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series to 2-1.

Philadelphia's defense got its running game going in the first half and the 76ers led by as many as 27 points in the second quarter.

Philadelphia had a 20-point advantage entering the final period when Michael Jordan and four Chicago subs staged a furious rally.

The Bulls closed within 113-110 on a three-point basket by Jordan with 54.4 seconds to go and, after a Philadelphia turnover, could have gotten closer.

But Jordan missed a jumper, Charles Barkley grabbed the rebound and Philadelphia survived to host Game 4 of the best-of-seven series on Sunday afternoon.

''We came out early and played good defense and got them down,'' said Philadelphia guard Hersey Hawkins, who scored 27 points on 9-of-14 shooting. ''I thought that helped us for the rest of the game.

''No matter what happened in the fourth quarter, we beat this team pretty good.''

Denial seemed to be the way the 76ers chose to deal with the unthinkable - the prospect of losing a game in which they held a huge lead.

''We're just happy the game is over,'' said Charles Barkley, who led the 76ers with 34 points, 20 rebounds and eight assists. ''We didn't play very well down the stretch. As long as we won, that's all I'm concerned about. I was really surprised the game was so close.''

For that, he could thank Jordan - who scored 24 of his 49 points in the final quarter - and subs B.J. Armstrong, Craig Hodges, Stacey King and Ed Nealy.

''We got back and had a chance to win,'' Chicago Coach Phil Jackson said. ''I can't ask for more from my guys. It was three games in one. We won the fourth quarter and they won the other three.''

The 76ers had a 93-69 lead with 10:45 to play in the game and, three minutes later, Chicago was within 98-87 on a three-point play by Jordan.

Philadelphia seemed safe again with a 106-91 lead with 5:48 to go but Jordan led the Bulls right back to within 111-101 with 2:45 left.

Jordan then hit a jumper, jammed home an alley-oop pass and, after a follow shot by Nealy, sank his fourth three-point basket of the game to bring the Bulls within 113-110.

Although they could get no closer, the Bulls took some comfort in their effort.

''We never give up,'' Jordan said. ''We really got ourselves out of whack in the first half but we got ourselves back in the second. We kept fighting. We got closer. We made our shots and they made mistakes.''

Ron Anderson came off the bench to score 17 points for Philadelphia, Johnny Dawkins added 16 and Rick Mahorn and Mike Gminski notched 10 each.

Scottie Pippen, who played despite the death of his father on Thursday, had 20 points for Chicago but Bill Cartwright, who averaged 12 points in the Bulls' pair of victories, was held scoreless.

In the first half, Philadelphia scored 27 fast-break points, compared to only nine for Chicago, as the 76ers held a 24-11 rebounding edge.

''Our defense was so good, we got out to the open floor,'' Philadelphia Coach Jim Lynam said. ''We ran with every miss in the first half.''

They stopped running in the fourth quarter and instead, turned the ball over against Chicago's trap, missed some easy shots and did not convert from the free-throw line.

''That was about as poor execution as you could get - we missed foul shots we missed layups and we turned the ball over,'' Lynam said.

And they came close to turning over the game.

PITTSBURGH (MAY 12) UPI - Credit-card fraud is running rampant in a Pennsylvania prison.

Inmates at State Correctional Institution in Pittsburgh charged $100,000 in television sets, video recorders and other merchandise this year to unknowing credit-card holders in a scam uncovered in November.

The scam started by one inmate was uncovered six months ago but authorities were unable to get a handle on it as other prisoners tried their hands at the scheme, police said.

''It probably spread by word of mouth,'' said police Sgt. Mark Ninehouser, in charge of the city's burglary section. ''Now it's become a big problem.''

Inmates ordered VCRs, TV sets and other items and charged them to the credit cards of people on the outside, police said. At least $100,000 worth of merchandise has been charged from inside the prison this year through the unauthorized use of credit cards, police said.

The prisoners use the credit card numbers of customers who charged at hotels, restaurants and other businesses, police said. They get the numbers by posing as bank executives.

The inmates place their orders by using outside accomplices to keep the calls from being traced to the prison, police said. The accomplices are allowed to order merchandise for themselves for their help, police said.

''One we know of got a washer and dryer out of it,'' said Ninehouser.

Police said they have made 30 arrests in four months and more arrests, including a number of inmates, are forthcoming.

''Slowly but surely we're zeroing in on this thing,'' said assistant Chief Mayer DeRoy. ''It represents a good bit of credit card fraud we have here.''

Most of the items ordered by the inmates have been sent to the homes of the accomplices, but some VCRs, compact disc players, baseball gloves and an order for 20 pairs of athletic shoes were sent to the prison, police said.

(MAY 12) UPI - The state of Missouri executed 39-year-old Winford Stokes Friday night for the 1977 murder of a divorced mother of three. The assistant director of the Division of Adult Institutions in Potosi, Missouri, says the junior high-school drop-out made NO last statement and was calm during the lethal injection. Stokes was convicted of killing Pamela Benda after he met her in a bar and then went to her apartment.

In Australia, officials say 11 people died in the crash of an executive jet. The plane went down in the mountainous region of northern Queensland, 800 miles northwest of Brisbane. The 10 passengers were local government officials from five Queensland towns and cities. A weather bureau spokesman says there was a storm at the time of the crash and flying conditions were ''terrible.''

The world's largest supplier of titanium aircraft parts pleaded guilty Friday to selling UNtested and defective nuts and bolts. Two company officers of the V-S-I Corporation admitted to one count of conspiracy to defraud the government before a U-S District judge in Seattle. U-S Attorney Mike McKay says the company developed a ''tradition of cheating... to cut corners and line its pockets.'' Both commercial and military aircraft use nuts and bolts supplied by V-S-I.

(MAY 12) UPI - Entertainer Sammy Davis Junior is said to be near death at his Hollywood Hills, California, home. The legendary song-and-dance man only weighs about 60 pounds now and sleeps most of the time. Davis was released from the hospital six weeks ago after undergoing treatment for throat cancer and has worsened steadily. Jerry Lewis visited his friend three weeks ago and has been in daily contact with Davis' family. Lewis says- quote- ''We're going to lose him.''

A man apparently obsessed with ''Tonight Show'' host Johnny Carson has been committed to Patton State Hospital in Pasadena, California. 36-year-old Ken Gause will remain at Patton until he regains his mental competency to stand trial for making terrorist threats and sending threatening letters to Carson. The longest Gause can remain incarcerated is six years and then he will be re-evaluated to determine if he still poses a threat to the public.

Spring traditionally is a time for re-birth, but Alaskan state game officials say the spring thaw has revealed widespread death in the moose population. Fish and Game Department officials say an extremely harsh winter and heavy snow contributed to a high death rate among moose. Severe restrictions have been placed on moose hunting from Anchorage to Mount McKinley.

(MAY 11) UPI - For Dwight Gooden, there's nothing like a little expert advice to break out of a slump.

Following the suggestions of two Hall of Fame pitchers, Gooden struck out a National League-high 15 batters Friday night, leading the New York Mets to a 9-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

''I talked to both Jim Palmer and Bob Gibson this week and tried to be more aggressive,'' said Gooden, 2-3. ''My high fastball was hard to hit, especially when I got ahead and got it up near the eyes. It looks good coming in and looks almost letter-high, but it would rise a bit.''

Before Friday night's game, Gooden held a 4.58 ERA in six starts. But the right-hander allowed nine hits and three runs over seven innings Friday night, walking one.

His strikeout total was one shy of his career high of 16, accomplished twice in 1984 and again in 1985. Gooden's season total of 53 strikeouts leads the major leagues. He struck out 10-plus hitters for the 40th time in his career.

''Except for the third inning, this was the best game I have pitched this year,'' Gooden said. ''I'm going to work hard between starts and try and build on this.''

Gooden also drove home four runs with an RBI groundout and a three-run triple, tying his career high set Sept. 21, 1985 against Pittsburgh.

Still, Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda wasn't impressed.

''Was I supposed to stand there and applaud Gooden? We should have beaten him,'' Lasorda said. ''We had him three times where one hit would have gotten him out of there. And in their big (five-run) third inning, Mike Marshall's forceout should have been a double play except for a throw on the wrong side of the bag.''

Los Angeles starter Mike Morgan, 4-2, lasted just three innings, giving up four hits and seven earned runs.

Trailing 3-2, the Mets blew the game open with five runs in the third inning. Kevin Elster led off with a walk and Darryl Strawberry walked one out later. Kevin McReynolds beat out an infield hit to load the bases. Mike Marshall drove home Elster when he hit into a forceout, and McReynolds scored on a double by Daryl Boston.

Sasser was intentionally walked to reload the bases, and Gooden cleared the bases with a triple to deep center field.

Elsewhere Friday night in the National League, Cincinnati outlasted Chicago 7-5, Philadelphia thumped San Francisco 10-6, Pittsburgh held off Houston 4-3, St. Louis beat Atlanta 5-2 and San Diego clipped Montreal 5-3.

In the American League, it was: Toronto 4, Detroit 2; Chicago 6, Kansas City 4; Milwaukee 6, Minnesota 3; Oakland 5, Baltimore 0; Boston 3, California 2; New York 8, Seattle 5; and Texas 4, Cleveland 4 in a game suspended because of rain.

Reds 7, Cubs 5

At Cincinnati, Chris Sabo belted a three-run double with two out in the eighth inning to lift the Reds. With the bases loaded, Sabo lined a double to the gap in left-center to clear the bases and make a loser of reliever Mitch Williams, 0-3. Norm Charlton, 2-0, worked one-third of an inning for the win. Rob Dibble pitched the ninth inning for his fifth save.

Phillies 10, Giants 6

At Philadelphia, Len Dykstra and Von Hayes each drove in three runs to lead the Phillies. Winning pitcher Ken Howell, 3-3, added to Philadelphia's 16-hit attack by driving in two runs on a second-inning single and a third-inning double. Giants starter John Burkett, 2-1, was blasted for six runs and six hits in 2 2-3 innings.

Pirates 4, Astros 3

At Pittsburgh, Doug Drabek fired a five-hitter over 8 1-3 innings for his fifth straight victory. Drabek, 6-1, has allowed just six earned runs in 36 1-3 innings over his last five starts. Bill Landrum got the final out for his fifth save. Houston starter Jim Deshaies, 1-1, allowed four runs and six hits over five innings, striking out three.

Cardinals 5, Braves 2

At St. Louis, Ozzie Smith's two-run single capped a four-run first inning and Bryn Smith pitched a five-hitter for eight innings to lead the Cardinals. Bryn Smith, 4-3, struck out five and walked three. Lee Smith worked the last inning for his first save for St. Louis since his May 4 trade from Boston. John Smoltz, 1-4, yielded all five St. Louis runs.

Padres 5, Expos 3

At San Diego, Garry Templeton's two-run eighth-inning homer helped the Padres snap Montreal's five-game winning streak. The Padres snapped a 3-3 tie when Benito Santiago singled and scored when Templeton hit the first pitch from Drew Hall, 2-4, over the left-field fence. Reliever Craig Lefferts, 2-1, was the winner.

NORFOLK, VA (MAY 12) UPI - A naval officer received a hero's tribute for alerting sleeping sailors on the USS Conyngham and leading them to safety during a shipboard fire that killed him.

Lt. Cmdr. Algernon Pope Gordon Jr. was awarded the Navy and Marine Corp Medal on Friday. The medal is awarded for acts of heroism not involving actual conflict with an opposing armed force.

The citation signed by Navy Secretary Lawrence Garrett III said Gordon disregarded his own safety to form a firefighting party and ''direct critical damage efforts which ultimately contributed to saving the ship.''

''Despite the intensity of the holocaust, Lt. Cmdr. Gordon, at great risk, re-entered the burning superstructure to ensure his shipmates were awakened and led to safety,'' Garrett said.

''Remembering his roommate was asleep below, he courageously returned through the dense smoke filled passageways to his cabin and directed his fellow officers to safety.''

Gordon, 34, a native of Montgomery, Ala., who lived in Norfolk with his wife and three children, was honored in a private memorial service at Norfolk Naval Station a day earlier.

The Navy also approved Gordon's posthumous promotion to lieutenant commander. He was to have been promoted in several weeks.

Gordon was the ship's operations officer and was responsible for coordinating the ship's communications, radar and sonar information. Navy officials have said he died of smoke inhalation.

The ship's skipper, Cmdr. William Williams, said Friday the cause of Tuesday's fire was a fuel leak in a boiler room. The blaze, which began when the boiler was being lit, killed Gordon and injured 18 while the ship was on routine maneuvers off North Carolina.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 12) UPI - South African Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu called Friday for continued economic sanctions against the apartheid government in South Africa while optimistically predicting major new political reforms within the year.

''We need for you to maintain the pressure until the removal of apartheid is irreversible,'' Tutu told Mayor Tom Bradley and the City Council during a special ceremony for the Nobel Peace Prize laureate at City Hall.

Tutu thanked the people of Los Angeles for the economic pressure he said the city's anti-apartheid ordinance has placed on the South African government and asked for continued economic sanctions against his country's political regime.

But with negotiations under way between President Frederik de Klerk and freed civil rights leader Nelson Mandela and the African National Congress Tutu predicted the ''emergence of a constituent assembly'' comprised of all racial groups in South Africa ''by the end of the year.''

''We are amazed at what has happened, but it is quite clear to me that the love and the prayers and the caring of so many people and the pressures that have been exerted ... have played an incredible role in bringing us to the point at which we have arrived,'' Tutu said.

''There is no doubt at all that the freedom for which we are striving and the freedom for which we have received support ... will come; it is inevitable.''

Tutu is in California to help raise funds for the Bishop Tutu Scholarship Fund, which he established in 1984 to provide educational resources to South African students exiled for their political activities who are attending American universities.

Tutu created the program with his Nobel Peace Prize award funds. With the support of foundations, private donors and corporations, the scholarships have grown, but the archbishop said even more money is needed to help educate the blacks who may soon be playing a much more active role in the government and the business sector.

''It is absolutely clear that the need for skilled persons will be quite critical. Apartheid has been quite horrendous in what it has done to human resources. People have not been trained to their capacity.''

NEW YORK (MAY 12) UPI - Members of the jury considering the fate of the accused ringleader in last summer's Bensonhurst racial killing braced for what could be a long weekend of deliberations.

The jury in the case of Keith Mondello sent out a note Friday to Justice Thaddeus Owens requesting a change of clothes and permission to attend Sunday church services. The panel, deliberating in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn, also asked for crossward puzzles and the latest sports scores.

The Mondello jury was scheduled to resume deliberations at 10:45 a.m. Saturday, while the jury deliberating the fate of the accused triggerman in the case, Joseph Fama, was due back in court at 10:15 a.m.

The notes from the Mondello jury seem to squash speculation it was near a verdict.

Courtroom observers had thought that an earlier request for a definition of the second-degree murder charge against Mondello, accused of leading the white mob that killed 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins, indicated the jury was close to coming to a decision.

''I thought, '20 minutes and they'll come back with a conviction,' and now they want clean clothes,'' said Stephen Murphy, attorney for the 19-year-old Mondello.

Hawkins and three black friends had caught the subway to the predominantly white Bensonhurst area to look at a used car and were mistaken for a group of blacks and Hispanics rumored to be coming to the neighborhood looking for a fight. They were attacked by a mob of bat-wielding whites.

Hawkins' slaying exposed deep racial divisions in New York City and triggered months of demonstrations and protests.

As Mondello's jury finished its fourth day of deliberations Friday, the jury for Fama, 19, heard repeats of testimony on its fifth day of meeting.

Fama and Mondello are charged with second-degree murder for the Aug. 23 killing. There are two juries in the trial because Mondello gave statements to police fingering Fama as the killer.

Mondello and Fama are the first of eight young men to be tried for the slaying.

The Mondello jury late Friday asked for a definition of first-degree manslaughter, indicating it was considering that less serious count as an option to the second-degree murder charge.

''They seem to be looking for a way to convict,'' Murphy said.

Before ending deliberations shortly after 8 p.m., the panel also asked for a readback of the testimony of Phyliss D'Agata, mother of Gina Feliciano, the neighborhood woman who the defense claims told the defendants that a mob of blacks and Hispanics was coming to beat them up.

Fama's jury appeared to be struggling with the testimony of witnesses incriminating him as the gunman.

(MAY 11) UPI - A wide band of thunderstorms and showers dumped up to 2 inches of rain on waterlogged Arkansas and Texas Saturday, threatening to worsen flooding that has already routed thousands of families from their homes and caused millions of dollars in damage.

''Things are kind of tense here,'' said Lisa Berry of the Arkansas Emergency Management Office, who is working with authorities across the state line in Texarkana, Texas.

Officials in southeast Texas said they were ready for the anticipated weekend arrival of high water from the Trinity River, as the flood crest approached Lake Livingston about 50 miles north of Houston.

''It still looks like the floodwaters will begin entering Lake Livingston Saturday or Sunday, but since we really don't have a precedent for something like this, it's very hard to predict,'' Carol Weathers of the Trinity River Authority, said late Friday.

Liberty County Emergency Management Director Jim Mitchum said most of the 7,000 people living in threatened areas around Lake Livingston Dam have already moved in with friends or relatives.

''The flooding will be very devastating to people living in the low-lying river areas,'' Mitchum said.

Saturated levees along the Red River along the Texas-Arkansas border were being patrolled by National guardsmen and civilian volunteers, officials said.

''The levees are barely holding their own along the river,'' said Berry.

A Texas National Guard helicopter was dropping hay to flood-marooned livestock along the Red River in Arkansas throughout the weekend. As many as 20,000 head of cattle were stranded by Red River flooding in Little River and Miller counties.

The number of Texas counties designated disaster areas by the Federal Emergency Management Agency climbed to 25 as Friday.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton asked for a federal disaster declaration for the entire state.

The National Weather Service said part of the Red River, which has a flood stage of about 25 feet, was expected to remain above 30 feet through Saturday. The previous record crest was 29.2 feet in 1957.

A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers in Little Rock said preliminary estimates included $25 million in damage by the Arkansas River; $25 million in damage by the Red River in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, and $15 million in damage by the White River in Arkansas.

Thunderstorms and showers also hit Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Louisiana and Mississippi. Showers were scattered in the Great Lakes region.

Elsewhere, skies were mostly sunny in the West and in the East. Temperatures were in the 40s and 50s across the most of the Midwest, East Coast and Pacific Northwest. The mercury dipped into the 30s in the northern Plains. It was in the 60s and 70s across the South.

HOUSTON (MAY 12) UPI - A tanker fire that may have been touched off by a welder's torch prompted the U.S. Coast Guard to shut down a section of the Houston Ship Channel, officials said.

''They're still making pretty good progress, from what I hear,'' Coast Guard Lt. Junior Grade Bruce Fisher said of Houston firefighters battling the blaze late Friday.

The ferryboat E.H. Thornton, moored alongside the burning Panamanian-registered Seta, was undergoing repairs when an explosion touched off the fire at about 6 p.m. Friday, officials said.

''It was a ferry boat in for repair work,'' Fisher said. ''Initial reports were that there was some welding of some sort going on.''

At least three members of the tanker's crew suffered flash burns, officials said, and were in serious condition at area hospitals.

The 370-foot tanker was empty, but its tanks still contained the residue of several caustic and explosive chemicals and other materials, Coast Guard Lt. Robert Hennesey said.

The blaze was in the ship's aft area, which contains the crew spaces, the superstructure and the pilot house, Hennesey said.

Houston Fire Department crews were battling the flames from nearby docks, said Hennessey, and two Port Authority fire boats were spraying water to keep the ship's hull and tanks cool.

Because of the danger, the Coast Guard closed the ship channel from the Interstate 610 bridge to the turning basin, a distance of about one mile, Hennesey said.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (MAY 12) UPI - Two West German state elections Sunday could indicate whether concerns about the cost of German reunification could cause trouble for Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democrats in the national election next December.

About 18 million people - 40 percent of West Germany's voters - will go to the polls to elect state parliaments in North Rhine-Westphalia and Lower Saxony.

The Social Democrats under popular Premier Johannes Rau were expected to retain their 24-year hold on North Rhine-Westphalia, the most populous of West Germany's 11 states.

Lower Saxony, where Christian Democratic Premier Ernst Albrecht held power only with the support of the small, liberal Free Democratic Party, was considered a toss-up.

The loss of Lower Saxony would be a double blow for Kohl, for defeat there could mean a switch in control of the Bundesrat, the upper house of Parliament which represents the states, from the Christian Democrats to the Social Democrats. That would make it difficult for Kohl to pass laws to finance unification or that infringe on the rights of the states.

The balloting was expected to show whether the voters' desire for unification outweighs their concern about its cost.

Public opinion polls show West Germans favor unification of the divided country but are concerned that unity will cost them money and endanger the stability of the powerful West German mark.

A poll last month for the West German news magazine Der Spiegel showed only 15 percent of West Germans favor converting the weak, almost worthless East mark into West marks at a one-to-one rate, as the agreement on the East-West German monetary union calls for. The union is scheduled to be formed July 2.

Eighty percent said they expect the economic and monetary union to bring them disadvantages.

Neverthless the poll showed that if West Germans voted now in a national election they would return Kohl's coalition government to power.

Forty-two percent said they would vote for the Christian Democrats and 9 percent for the Free Democrats, Kohl's coalition partner. The Social Democrats got 39 percent and the Greens Party 6 percent.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (MAY 12) UPI - A Philippine Air Force helicopter crashed into a hill in the southern Philippines minutes after taking off Saturday, killing all five people aboard, officials said.

A military spokesman said the Sikorsky helicopter gunship took off at 4 p.m. on a test flight from the Edwin Andrew Air Base in Zamboanga City, some 540 miles south of Manila, and hit a nearby hill shortly thereafter.

Sgt. Francisco de los Reyes said rescuers retrieved the bodies of all five people aboard - the pilot, co-pilot, a crew member and two unidentified civilians.

COLUMBIA, SC (MAY 12) UPI - President Bush lashed out at reporters who refused to jog with him Saturday, calling them ''slovenly'' for sitting on the sidelines during a presidential run.

Apparently miffed that he was able to corral only one participant, AP reporter Rita Beamish, the president gave the group of pool reporters accompanying him a tongue lashing after his early-morning workout.

Completing the jog at Williams-Brice stadium, a whopping 13 laps football field in 25 minutes and 25 seconds, Bush said: ''The rest of you lazy guys get out there and run. Arnold Schwarzenegger and I would like this message to go out: a fit America is a fine America. A fit America is a strong America. A fit America should include photo dogs as well as print reporters who slovenly sit back in the stands while some of us are out running.''

''Any questions on that one point?'' he asked derisively. ''Nothing to do about taxes, I'm talking about fitness.''

The president appeared oblivious to the fact that the reporters accompanying him had been alerted just 20 minutes before the motorcade was to depart at 7:30 a.m.

The travel pool that follows Bush is comprised usually of 10 reporters and technicians, who accompany him every time he goes out in public.

More than one reporter took offense with the Bush's remarks, with one noting that the president who prides himself on fairness, had launched the broad attack without considering that some people prefer not to jog and others practice alternate schedules (usually forced around his) and forms of exercise.

After the lecture, as usual, pool members dashed a 100 yards, with gear, to join the motorcade.

Bush was in Columbia for a commencement address at the University of South Carolina.

(MAY 12) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... the latest news from U-P-I.

President Bush is mum about taxes. Bush addressed a half-Million-dollar fundraiser for South Carolina Governor Carroll Campbell last night without uttering the word giving Republicans election-year jitters- taxes. Earlier in the day, while flying on Air Force One to and from a college graduation speech in Texas, Bush d NOT say if he's changed his mind and will O-K higher taxes to balance the budget.

The second-highest official at the Justice Department quit yesterday... less than two months after he was undercut by Attorney General Thornburgh on tough mandatory sentences for white-collar criminals. Deputy Attorney General Donald Ayer says he's returning to his old law firm.

Ayer's departure came during a larger Justice Department shake-up that includes President Bush's nomination of federal Judge Robert Bonner to head the Drug Enforcement Administration, replacing John Lawn. New officials also were named to head a number of other departments within the Justice Department.

Missouri executed a convicted killer last night. Winford Stokes received a lethal injection for strangling and stabbing a divorced mother he met in a bar and took back to her apartment. It was the third killing Stokes had been charged with. Stokes was 39 years old.

Officials in Colombia say seven police officers were killed in the first 72 hours after the Medellin cartel announced a bounty for police deaths. One of the latest victims was the chief of security for the city of Medellin. The cocaine cartel offered 42-hundred dollars to any successful hit-man.

A Baltic summit conference is coming up today. The presidents of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania plan to hold a meeting in Estonia. One item on the agenda is the signing of an accord that would re-instate a 1934 treaty that established close political and economic ties among the three Baltic states.

WASHINGTON (MAY 12) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker flies to Moscow Monday for three days of talks with Foreign Secretary Eduard Shevardnadze to salvage an arms agreement that could be signed at the May 30-June 3 superpower summit.

The two men last met in Washington in early April trying to carry out an assignment given by President Bush and President Mikhail Gorbachev at the Malta summit in December. They were told to seek an early agreement on nuclear and conventional arms agreements and to have them ready for signing at the Washington summit.

But since December, the political turbulence inside the Soviet Union - including the Lithuanian independence crisis - has picked up. The economic situation in the Soviet Union has grown more desperate, leading to new political problems for Gorbachev, who was jeered by marchers at the May Day parade in Red Square.

U.S. analysts also believe that Gorbachev has run into resistance within the armed forces from military conservatives who oppose the deep cuts that Gorbachev has proposed. The generals particularly don't like cuts in conventional forces because those troops and weapons might be needed to put down nationalist revolts inside the Soviet Union, the analysts say.

As a result, the last Baker-Shevardnadze encounter in early April in Washington produced results that were pronounced disappointing by Baker.

Some earlier agreements - including a relatively simple way to cut back sea-launched cruise missiles - came apart as the Soviets raised new demands for stricter controls and verification.

As a result, chances for any major breakthroughs at the Washington summit have faded - unless the Moscow talks can produce unexpected results.

This is the state of play, two weeks before the opening of the Washington summit:

-Strategic arms. Although there is agreement in principle to reduce long-range nuclear warheads by 50 percent, there remains an enormous amount if unresolved technical issues, including counting rules, verification procedures and how to include cruise missiles in the count. There appears to no chance of having a full-fledged treaty ready to sign at the May 30 summit, and it is now questionable whether such a treaty could be ready for a later summit this year, unleass there is a major push from the leadership.

-Conventional forces. There is general agreement on cutting back U.S. and Soviet personnel to 195,000 men each in Central Europe, but disagreements remain on how to define and count armored vehicles, as well as how to verify those cuts. Even the issue of how to destroy the eliminated weapons remains unsolved. The largest unresolved issue involves combat aircraft, which ones will be included and what the new permissible limits will be.

The Soviets have raised a new issue, saying that they want naval weapons to be dealt with at the same time, something the United States does not want to discuss at all.

Meanwhile, the conventional talks have bogged down over such details as the exact height to be required of the security fences around arms depots and whether the weight of a tank should be measured with fuel aboard, or whether it should weighed empty.

-Chemical weapons. Both sides have proposed large-scale destruction of existing stocks and a halt in production of new poison gases, but verification remains a problem. U.S. experts are skeptical of Soviet declarations of the size of their stockpiles, but verification and inspection are unresolved issues.

-Nuclear testing. Most of the issues, including on-site verification of underground tests, have been worked out. The United States would be prepared to move ahead, as a result, with ratification of two treaties signed in the 1970s, but never submitted to Congress. One limits the size of nuclear tests to the equivalent of 150,000 tons of TNT, and one regulates peaceful nuclear explosions.

-Open Skies. Two months ago, there were high hopes that there would be an agreement on allowing both NATO and Warsaw Pact countries to make periodic military surveillance flights over the other's territory. Those hopes dwindled in the last two months, again apparently because of unhappiness on the part of the Soviet military.

Other issues that remain unsettled include:

-Trade. The Soviets want Most Favored Nation tariff treatment, which could improve their prospects of selling everything from vodka to petroleum to the United States. The United States stands ready to grant MFN, but only after the Supreme Soviet puts into law eased rules on emigration. The Soviets say they are hoping to change their laws before the summit, but the Supreme Soviet is not the docile rubber-stamp it used to be and the United States is waiting for action.

-Political. The Soviets are uneasy about the speed with which the two Germanys are uniting, and they are unhappy about the way the Soviet influence is being cast aside. American officials believe that Soviet slowdown in the arms talks is, to some extent, a lever for winning more influence in the German talks.

NEW YORK (MAY 12) UPI - Jurors resumed deliberations Saturday in the twin trials of two white men accused in the allegedly racially motivated killing of a black teen as the family of the slain youth planned a protest march through the neighborhood where the boy was shot.

The jury in the trial of Keith Mondello, the accused ringleader in the so-called Bensonhurst slaying, entered their first weekend of deliberations after sending a note to the judge Friday asking for a change of clothes, crossword puzzles and permission to attend Sunday church services.

Jurors in the case against accused triggerman Joseph Fama also returned to state Supreme Court in Brooklyn for a fifth day of deliberations.

The two men, both 19, are accused in the Aug. 23 killing of Yusuf Hawkins, a 16-year-old black who was shot dead during an allegedly racially motivated attack by a gang of baseball bat-wielding white thugs in Bensonhurst.

Hawkins and three black friends had gone to the predominantly white Italian-American neighborhood to look at a used car and were mistaken for a group of blacks and Hispanics rumored to be coming to the neighborhood looking for a fight, testimony showed.

Hawkins' family was planning to stage a protest march through Bensonhurst Saturday afternoon - the latest in a series of demonstrations over the killing, which heightened racial tensions in the city and sparked some violent clashes with police.

Mayor David Dinkins on Friday night broadcast an unprecedented and emotional plea for racial harmony on television and radio stations throughout the city.

''This city is sick of violence. And we're aching, and we must heal the pain,'' said Dinkins, whose leadership has been placed under the spotlight by a number of recent racially charged events, including the Bensonhurst trial.

Dinkins criticized both whites for incidents such as the Bensonhurst killing and blacks responsible for the anti-Asian ''bigotry'' he said was fueling a boycott of two Korean-owned stores in Flatbush.

''Let us not permit the prejudices of a few - in Flatbush, in Bensonhurst or anywhere else - to silence the good will of the rest of us,'' he said.

Fama and Mondello, who have both been charged with second-degree murder, were tried before two separate juries because Mondello gave statements to police fingering Fama as the killer.

They are the first of eight young men to be tried in the slaying.

The Mondello jury late Friday asked for a definition of first-degree manslaughter, indicating it was considering that less serious option to a second-degree murder conviction.

''They seem to be looking for a way to convict,'' said Mondello's lawyer, Stephen Murphy.

Before ending deliberations shortly after 8 p.m., the panel also asked for a re-reading of the testimony of Phyliss D'Agata, mother of Gina Feliciano the neighborhood woman who the defense claims told the defendants that a mob of blacks and Hispanics was coming to beat them up.

Fama's jury appeared to be struggling with the testimony of witnesses incriminating him as the gunman.

WASHINGTON (MAY 12) UPI - When Congress passed anti-flag burning legislation last year many hoped it would end efforts by the Bush administration and others to amend the Constitution to limit the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech.

Whether that effort will prove sucessful will be up to the only branch of government that doesn't answer to the voters, the Supreme Court, which hears oral arguments Monday in its second flag burning case in two years.

A great deal is at stake. If the court overturns the law, it is certain Congress would quickly restart the process of amending the Constitution that the Flag Protection Act stopped.

If the effort is successful, it would be the first time in the nation's history that one of the most cherished of constitutional rights - freedom of speech - will be limited by an amendment.

''If we win, and we should win, we'll be confronted with a demand for an amendment to the Constitution and that is a grave danger for the case,'' said noted civil liberties attorney William Kunstler, who argued the Texas case a year ago that lead to this moment.

The road to such an amendment may also prove to be a long and hard one marked by bitter political fighting.

''Such a ruling (striking down the law) would almost certainly trigger a divisive battle in Congress and in the states over whether a constitutional amendment to permit a ban on flag burning should be passed '' a brief filed by Gov. Mario Cuomo, D-N.Y., noted with more than a little understatement.

The history of the law before the court illustrates the point.

The act was passed in anger over a June 1989 Supreme Court ruling in a case called Texas vs. Johnson that burning the flag as a political protest is a constitutionally protected form of free speech. In the 5-4 decision, two of the court's most conservative members, Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, joined with three of the most liberal to rule against the Texas anti-flag burning law.

Coming on the heels of Bush's flag-waving presidential campaign and an art display that urged viewers to stand on the flag, the ruling set off a wave of protests by politicians eager to align themselves with protecting Old Glory.

Bush pushed for an amendment to the Constitution, but Democrats and some Republicans shied away from such a drastic step and instead passed the Flag Protection Act.

The new law states, ''Whoever knowingly mutilates, defaces, physically defiles, burns, maintains on the floor or ground, or tramples upon any flag of the United States shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.''

The law was immediately challenged. An October 1989 flag burning outside a post office in Seattle, Wash., and a flag burning outside the Capitol led to two decisions by federal judges that struck down the law.

The cases were appealed directly to the Supreme Court, bypassing the appeals court.

Supporters of the law argue it will pass constitutional muster because, unlike the Texas law that banned flag desecration that ''seriously'' offends people, it is ''content neutral'' in that it bans all flag desecration not just that which might offend.

''It is the act of harming the physical integrity of the flag, rather than any message the actor might be attempting to convey, that is to be punished,'' the Senate said in a brief filed in defense of the law.

The court did give supporters of the law some hope in that belief. The court said in its opinion that the Texas law was ''not aimed at protecting the physical integrity of the flag in all circumstances, but is designed instead to protect it only against impairments that would cause serious offense to others.''

However, Dick Howard, a University of Virginia law professor and former Supreme Court clerk, said it was difficult for him to find any statute that could get around the problem of content regulation.

''The law before the court does a better job than the Texas law did and since they only have to pick up one vote this might do it,'' he said. ''They might get (Justice) Kennedy. But it's hard for me to escape the core First Amendment problem.''

He said that any statute has to turn on the symbolic value of the flag and that how one treats a symbol is speech protected by the Constitution. He said it was hard to see how this case was different from the Texas case.

Also, attempts by Congress to get around the bulk of the ruling by focusing on one or two lines may prove to be just that - attempts. The court, in no uncertain terms, said flag burning as part of political protest is protected by the First Amendment.

''If there is a bedrock principle underlying the First Amendment,'' the court said last year, ''it is that the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable. ... We have not recognized an exception to this principle even where our flag has been involved.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 12) UPI - If President Bush and congressional leaders agree to new taxes during the budget summit that begins Tuesday, their options for dipping ever deeper into the pockets of Americans appear endless.

The budget talks, aimed at cutting the rapidly rising federal deficit, will begin with all options on the table. They will include higher taxes Bush promised in 1988 to oppose and domestic cuts in programs like Medicare that Democrats would rather not make.

The Congressional Budget Office earlier this year released a 471-page book detailing hundreds of possible spending cuts and tax increases negotiators could use to trim the deficit to the legally required $64 billion target for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Bush budget director Richard Darman has estimated that the actual deficit next year could be as much as $100 billion over that target, requiring huge additional savings or revenues or - if Congress can get away with it - revising the deficit targets to require much less savings this election year.

Revenue options include everything from raising basic income tax rates for all Americans or just for the rich ones, a gasoline tax hike, new taxes on alcohol and tobacco products, eliminating business tax breaks and changing the way retirement benefits and retirement plan contributions are taxed.

Here's a sampling of the tax options the CBO presented to Congress along with the amount they would raise in one year and over five years:

Individual Income Taxes:

-Raise the current 15 percent and 28 percent rates to 16 percent and 30 percent: $18.7 billion raised next year, $178.3 billion over five years.

-Raise the current top 33 percent rate to 38 percent: $9.6 billion, $101.2 billion.

-Add a 5 percent surtax to existing rates: $13.5 billion, $129.3 billion.

-Add a new 38 percent tax rate for the richest Americans: $9.6 billion, $101.2 billion.

Corporate Income Taxes:

-Add a 5 percent surtax: $3.3 billion, $28 billion.

-Raise the current top rate of 34 percent to 35 percent: $1.4 billion, $12.4 billion.

Home Mortgage Interest Deductions:

-Limit deductions to 15 percent of interest paid; all interest on primary residences is now fully deductible: $3.6 billion, $52.9 billion.

Energy Tax Increases:

-Increase gasoline tax 12 cents a gallon: $12.1 billion, $58.5 billion.

-Impose $5-per-barrel tax on domestic and imported oil: $20 billion, $103.6 billion.

-Impose $5-per-barrel on imported oil only: $8.5 billion, $46.9 billion.

-Impose broad-based tax on all energy consumption: $14.2 billion, $80.2 billion.

Alcohol and Tobacco Taxes:

-Double the cigarette tax to 32 cents a pack: $2.8 billion, $13.8 billion.

-Increase taxes on beer, wine and distilled spirits by 25 cents per ounce on alcohol: $7.2 billion, $37.1 billion.

Environmental Taxes:

-Tax, at $1,000-per-ton the ozone-depleting emissions of Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs) from stationary sources, such as industrial and chemical plants, rather than from cars: $7 billion, $47.5 billion.

-Tax pollutants from mobile sources: $1.9 billion, $13 billion.

Investment Income:

-Impose 5 percent tax on investment income of pension, profit-sharing and individual retirement account plans: $4.4 billion, $37.1 billion.

Securities Transfer Tax:

-Add new excise tax on transfer of corporate stock and other securities: $7.8 billion, $57.7 billion.

Payroll Tax:

-For Medicare funding only, eliminate the annual earnings cap. Currently, payroll taxes are deducted on annual incomes up to $51,300. This would allow the portion of payroll taxes that fund Medicare only to be collected on incomes higher than $51.300: $3.5 billion, $47.2 billion.

Busniess Entertainment Deductions:

-Disallow deductions for half the claimed costs of business meals and entertainment expenses: $2 billion, $17 billion.

State and Lolal Tax Deductability:

-Eliminate current deductions for payment of state and local taxes: $4.4 billion, $134.2 billion.

Value Added Sales Tax.

-Impose new, 5 percent national value added sales tax, similar to that used in many foreign nations: $89.4 billion in 1992 (first year in effect) $531.5 billion over four years.

-Impose same tax but exempt food, housing and medical care costs: $52.1 billion in 1992, $309.9 billion over four years.

Business Tax Increase:

-Impose new 5 percent tax on net business receipts instead of raising tax rates: $29.7 billion, $264.8 billion.

TALLINN, ESTONIA, U.S.S.R. (MAY 12) UPI - Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia joined forces Saturday in their battle for independence from the Soviet Union, reinstating their pre-World War II Baltic Council alliance and pledging economic cooperation.

''There is a proverb that growth by drops can split the stone,'' Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said after a historic summit with the presidents of the other two Baltic republics. ''This joint drop of water is really important.''

Landsbergis joined Latvian President Anatolijs Gorbunovs and Estonian President Arnold Ruutel in signing a joint declaration reaffirming their proclamations of independence made during the last two months.

They also sent letters to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and U.S. President Bush, but refused to reveal their contents.

''Our trilateral summit meeting presents a real possibility for solving the Baltic issue,'' said Ruutel of Estonia, smallest of the three Baltic republics.

The agreement signed Saturday reaffirmed a Sept. 12, 1934, treaty between the three then independent states, all members of the League of Nations, predecessor of the United Nations.

The document also demanded that Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania be given their ''rightful seats'' in the United Nations as independent states.

The new accord reinstated the Baltic Council alliance among the three states before they were annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940 and made Soviet republics.

Ruutel said he received a telegram from Gorbachev saying the president's federation council had met and asked the Balitc republics to present proposals for the new Soviet federation that Gorbachev is seeking to build.

But Ruutel said the proposals have been made before and ''do not meet the aspirations of the Estonian people.''

The three Baltic presidents met in an Estonian government meeting hall that is part of the 18th century Toompea castle.

The castle, flying the flags of the three self-declared states, is on a hill overlooking the old section of the Estonian capital of Tallinn.

''We have to stick together always,'' Ruutel told reporters before the meeting.

The agreement signed Saturday pledged joint efforts on trade and periodic high-level conferences, with the exchanges to be coordinated by the Baltic Council.

The single-page accord provides for the exchange of diplomats but few specifics of how the republics could help one another in the face of Soviet economic sanctions.

Gorbachev cut off Lithuania's crude oil and other supplies last month to pressure it into rescinding its March 11 independence declaration. He has threatened similar sanctions against Estonia and Latvia, which passed more moderate decrees seeking negotiated breaks from Moscow.

The three republics all asked for talks on secession but have shown no signs of giving in to Gorbachev's demand to repeal their independence proclamations.

The three republics have some economic ties but they are controlled by Moscow and all transactions must go through central ministries in the Soviet capital.

FORT WORTH, TX (MAY 12) UPI - Lakes and levees built during the past 50 years are estimated to have prevented $2 billion worth of flood damage in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma this spring.

Brig. Gen. Robert C. Lee, commander of the Southwestern Division of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, said flood control projects along the Trinity, Red, Arkansas, White and Brazos river basins held floods along those waterways to a minimum following unusually heavy rains in April and May.

''The lakes built in the last 50 years along these and other river systems have flood control as a major purpose,'' Lee said. ''Citizens' desire for protection from floods provided the major incentive for their construction.''

The Highland Lakes chain along the Colorado River above Austin were credited with perhaps the largest positive impact on floodwaters. The first round of storms inundated the Brownwood area in west central Texas, but those and subsequent rains flowed ultimately and peacefully into Lake Travis near Austin, increasing the level of the lake by 19 feet in one week.

Lee said, reservoirs on the Red River helped modify the flows from more than 2.5 million acre-feet of flood waters that originated above the projects, enough to cover about 1,600 square miles of land with 2 1/2 feet of water.

He said Hugo and Texoma lakes reduced peak flows of the Red River by half.

In Arkansas, flows and river stages along the McClellan-Kerr Arkansas River Navigation System reached their highest levels since the system was completed in 1970. Lee said flows at Little Rock rose to 460,000 cubic feet per second, nearly 206 million gallons of water per minute.

''The Corps system worked properly,'' Lee said. ''The Oklahoma lakes held back flood waters that would otherwise have caused even more damage in Arkansas. In fact, in this flood, the Corps reservoirs in Oklahoma provided more flood control benefits for Arkansas than for Oklahoma.''

There was criticism last week that Oklahoma allowed too much water into Arkansas, setting up the heavy flooding down the Arkansas River. But Gary Talley, Arkansas's emergency management coordinator, said the criticism came from people who did not understand how much water there was to deal with.

''Oklahoma held as much back for as long as it could,'' Talley said.

Likewise, Corps dams along the Trinity River greatly reduced the area of flooding in north central Texas. Six lakes - Benbrook, Lavon, Ray Roberts, Bardwell, Lewisville and Joe Pool - reached record levels.

Lee said the managers of all the lakes and Corps headquarters stay in close touch during periods of rain and flooding.

''Our engineers in Tulsa don't make decisions on water releases from their lakes without talking to the people in the Little Rock district,'' Lee said. ''And the manager of Ray Roberts Lake talks with Fort Worth District experts about releasing water that will eventually flow through Dallas.''

COLUMBIA, S.C. (MAY 12) UPI - Declaring that ''America has much to contribute,'' President Bush announced Saturday creation of a Citizens Democracy Corps to support democratic change and market-oriented economic reform in Eastern Europe.

Bush said the corps will serve as a clearinghouse for U.S. private volunteer assistance in areas ranging from health, banking and publishing to constitutional law, financial services and environmental protection.

''We sometimes hear today that with freedom's great triumph, America's work is done,'' Bush said in a commencement address at the University of South Carolina. ''Nothing could be further from the truth.''

''We know the real strength of our democracy is its citizens - the collective strength of individual Americans,'' the president said. ''America has much to contribute - much it can do to help these nations move forward on the path of democracy.''

Seeking to give new momentum to the democratic march across what had long been communist-ruled Eastern Europe, Bush also announced approval by the U.S. Export-Import Bank of medium-term export credits and loan guarantees for Poland, which helped ignite the peaceful revolution of change.

Poland would have five to seven years to repay the money instead of the current one-year term.

''This action reflects our growing confidence in Poland,'' an administration official said.

Bush, saying the United States ''will work to help ensure free and fair elections in Eastern Europe,'' also announced that he will send a delegation to observe upcoming elections in Romania and Bulgaria.

The president also called upon the 35-member nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, which includes the United States, to ''reach a consensus'' on the holding of free elections, human rights and democracy.

The president has used a series of commencement addresses this spring to discuss his view of the United States' new role in a changing Europe.

Later Saturday, in a commencement address prepared for delivery at the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va., Bush promoted the new Citizens Democracy Corps. and, as he did at the University of South Carolina, called on young people to get involved.

''America's major export has always been generosity,'' the president said. ''Today, more than ever, we need to use that generosity to combat such global problems as hunger and health care, illiteracy and homelessness.''

''America is not only divenely blessed, America is divenely accountable,'' he said. ''This accountability means reducing what government must do and increasing what individuals can do.''

Bush's Citizens Democracy Corps, which administration officials said will begin operation within months, will differ from the Peace Corps began in the early 1960s by President John F. Kennedy.

While the Peace Corps is a government agency involving Americans going overseas on missions of peace and assistance, the Citizens Corps would be funded independently following an initial $300,000 federal grant. It would rely on business leaders, doctors, lawyers, teachers and other professionals to provide technical assistance.

''In the past year, one nation after another has pulled itself out from under communism, onto the threshold of democracy,'' Bush said in his South Carolina address.

''Each has endured great suffering - tremendous economic damage,'' he said. ''We've all seen the images of long lines and empty shelves.''

''But what we can't see so easily - what's beneath the surface, but no less real - is the moral damage: the deep scars on the spirit left by four decades of communist rule.''

Bush said that although the United States has committed more than $1 billion in direct economic assistance to Eastern Europe in the past year, it needs to do more.

''We must export our experience, our two centuries of accumulated wisdom on the workings of free government,'' the president said.

Administration aides said Bush will soon name a commission to head the Citizens Democracy Corps, which will seek to coordinate private sector initatives to assist Eastern as well as Central Europe.

Although the corps will receive initial federal start-up funds of about $300,000, the administration hopes that it will eventually become self-sufficient.

LONDON (MAY 12) UPI - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has written Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev urging him to resolve disputes over Lithuania's independence declaration through talks on the republic's future, officials said Saturday.

A spokesman at 10 Downing Street said Thatcher wrote the letter after meeting with Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene in London last Wednesday. The action suggests that Thatcher has given implicit British recognition to the March 11 Lithuanian declaration for the first time, a British newspaper said.

Describing the contents of Thatcher's letter, the spokesman said she appealed to Gorbachev to be flexible in his approach to Lithuania. Her comments were in line with previous statements on the issue, the spokesman said, adding that the letter was sent Thursday or Friday.

''What the prime minister said on numerous occasions is that the one way to solve differences between the Soviet Union and Lithuania is for those two countries to negotiate around a table,'' the spokesman said.

During Thatcher's 80-minute talk with Prunskiene, the two leaders agreed that Lithuania's drive to gain independence from the Soviet Union should not jeopardize Moscow's relations with the West. Prunskiene, after repeating that Vilnius wanted to reach a compromise with Moscow, said Wednesday the republic is willing to freeze and renegotiate all laws approved subsequent to its declaration of independence.

Lithuania's independence itself, however, was not up for negotiation, Prunskiene said. She said she hoped Thatcher would use her good relations with the Soviet president to press for an end to the dispute.

An unwillingness to destabilize Gorbachev has so far kept Thatcher from giving direct support to Lithuania's declaration of independence, the Independent newspaper said in a story published Saturday. Britain has never, however, recognized the annexation of Lithuania by the Soviet Union during World War II and has expressed sympathy with the republic's right to self-determination, the paper said.

Thatcher, who has a friendly political relationship with Gorbachev, is set to visit the Soviet Union next month.

WASHINGTON (MAY 13) UPI - The Knights of Columbus, a Roman Catholic men's organization, said Saturday it will give $3 million to the anti-abortion public relations campaign being mounted by the church's hierarchy.

''We are pleased to be able to assist the bishops' new public information program,'' said Supreme Knight Virgil Dechant, head of the 1.5 million-member group.

''This effort is needed to set out the facts about abortion as a violation of human rights and counter the barrage of 'pro-choice' propaganda being generated by supporters of legalized abortion,'' he said.

In April, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops announced it was hiring the public relations firm Hill & Knowlton, along with the Republican polling firm, The Wirthlin Group, to devise a public relations campaign aimed at convincing a majority of Americans that abortion should again be outlawed.

The decison, announced by Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, new chairman of the bishops' committee for anti-abortion activities, was criticized by some for misdirecting funds that could be better used to help keep Catholic schools open or to aid impoverished and aging nuns.

Officials of the bishops conference did not say how much the Hill & Knowlton contract was worth, but speculation in the advertising industry has put the figure at $5 million.

The decision by Hill & Knowlton to devise an anti-abortion campaign for the bishops also has been criticized by employees of the huge public relations firm who have signed petitions and privately protested the decision to Hill & Knowlton's management.

The public relations campaign promises to be one of the most ambitious efforts the Catholic church has undertaken in its effort to overturn the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing most abortions.

It stems from a resolution adopted last November by the bishops conference in which the bishops called abortion ''the fundamental human rights issue for all men and women of good will'' and which called on Catholic public office holders to support the church's stance opposing abortion.

''Today, thanks to the generosity of the Knights, we have taken a major step forward to move the (abortion) debate to the peaceable ground and to raise the multitude of ethical, social, economic and family concerns that surround it,'' O'Connor said in response to the $3 million announcement.

Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk of Cincinnati, president of the NCCB, said supporters of legal abortion have themselves ''launched a massive campaign to forestall any protection for this most elementary right.''

''This well-funded media campaign relies heavily on empty sloganeering to convey the unfounded impression that the majority in our country supports the unrestricted access to abortion, despite compelling evidence to the contrary,'' he said.

In addition to giving $3 million to the bishops' anti-abortion campaign, Dechant said the group's board of directors has also approved committing an additional $1 million to its own anti-abortion effort.

NEW YORK (MAY 12) UPI - New Yorkers offended by salty-tongued Andrew Dice Clay planned an afternoon protest Saturday outside the studio where the controversial comedian was to appear as guest host on NBC-TV's ''Saturday Night Live.''

The rally, organized by Rock Against Racism, the Gay and Lesbian Alliance against Defamation and the National Organization for Women, was to feature music, and an ''open mike'' session as well as invited speakers.

''We don't consider his jokes funny. We consider them hurtful,'' GLAAD deputy director Karin Schwartz said. ''They (listeners) should be cringing at the racism and homophobia in Dice Clay's jokes.''

The protest was the latest episode in a brouhaha that erupted earlier this week when ''Saturday Night Live'' cast member Nora Dunn announced she would refuse to appear on Saturday's show to protest Clay, known for his derogatory and graphic put-downs of women and minorities and explicit descriptions of violent sexual encounters.

Scheduled musical guest Sinead O'Connor also backed out, and one NBC affiliate, WETM-TV in Elmyra, N.Y., said it would not broadcast Saturday's show.

NBC spokeswoman Rosemary Keenan said Dunn's boycott marked the first time that an SNL cast member had decided not to participate in a broadcast because she found some part of it offensive.

But Keenan said ''the show will go on,'' adding that Clay had agreed to meet broadcast standards during his appearance. A decision on whether the broadcast of the live show was to be placed on a seven-second delay was to be made shortly before its 11:30 p.m. EDT air time.

''The contents and performance of all 'Saturday Night Live' broadcasts must conform to NBC standards,'' she said. ''This Saturday's program is no exception.''

Rally organizers said they were appalled that Clay would have a national forum for views they found obscene and dangerous.

Alan Thompson of Rock Against Racism said he didn't believe Clay's assertion that his views are merely a reflection of society.

''People who come to see him, they are living the character,'' he said. ''They are not taking it as a statement on society. They're taking it as a green light to hate other people, to hate anyone who's not exactly like you and your peers.''

(MAY 12) UPI - A Baltic summit establishes a united front for the region to break away from the Soviet Union... that story and other top news of the morning from the wires of United Press International.

The presidents of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are to meet today for an unprecedented Baltic summit.

Each of the Baltic states has, in one form or another, announced its desire to cut ties with Moscow. The most blatant expression of independence has come from Lithuania and has earned Lithuania Moscow's wrath.

But Soviet President Gorbachev vows each of the Baltic states faces the same fate as Lithuania if they try to detach themselves from Moscow without Soviet approval.

A spokesman for the Estonian government- which is hosting today's historic event- says the meeting among the Baltic states is of vast importance because it reveals that none of them is ''standing alone.''

The three republics are expected to sign an accord on political and economic co-operation. The pact also includes a demand by the three states for what they term their ''rightful'' seats in the United Nations.

The second-highest official at the Justice Department has resigned, and so has his top assistant.

Deputy Attorney General Donald Ayer joined Attorney General Thornburgh's team last November. Ayer quit yesterday, less than two months after being undercut on tough mandatory sentences for white-collar criminals.

Thornburgh withdrew the Justice Department's long-standing support for tough mandatory sentencing guidelines for corporations. Thornburgh backed off after a call from the White House and a strong lobbying campaign by defense contractors, oil companies and other major corporations.

Ayer bore the brunt of the policy change. But Thornburgh's personal spokesman, David Runkel, denied that Ayer's departure was related to the sentencing controversy.

Ayer was NOT available for comment except to say he'll return to the Washington office of a Cleveland law firm- Jones, Day, Reavis and Pogue.

Along with Ayer's departure came a larger Justice Department shake-up. Federal Judge Robert Bonner will head the Drug Enforcement Administration, replacing John Lawn. New officials also were named to head a number of other departments within the Justice Department.

(MAY 12) UPI - Nicaragua's new government has warned thousands of striking public employees to return to work if they don't want to be fired.

The Nicaraguan workers demand a 200 percent wage increase and object to the suspension of the Civil Service Law that protects government workers from lay-offs.

Most government workers support President Chamorro's opposition... the Sandinista Front. The National State Workers Union, which has more than 80-thousand members, declared the strike Thursday.

Labor Minister Francisco Rosales called on workers yesterday to return to their jobs and offered to negotiate their demands. But he said the government will NOT negotiate under pressure. He warned that if they continue to strike, whoever does NOT return to work will be fired.

Rosales did NOT set a deadline for the employees to return to work.

French police are questioning one neo-Nazi and seeking at least three other people in the desecration of a Jewish cemetery.

A French skinhead, a neo-Nazi extremist, was arrested yesterday in the southern city of Avignon for questioning but has NOT been charged. Officials blame right-wing extremist Jean Marie Le Pen for inciting the vandals who smashed 34 tombstones and mutilated a corpse in a cemetery.

Le Pen told a news conference that to find the authors of the crime, police must search among the communists or subversive Islamic movements.

The two chambers of the National Assembly suspended their sessions briefly to express outrage. Prime Minister Rocard, a Protestant, attended the Sabbath service at a synagogue in Paris to express his sympathy.

Police said at least four people took part in the desecration discovered Thursday. The body most recently buried in the cemetery was dug up and stabbed with an umbrella. Vandals also tried without success to remove the body of a woman from one of the other coffins they had unearthed.

(MAY 12) UPI - The U-S government has scored a victory in its legal battle with the world's largest supplier of titanium nuts and bolts. Yesterday, the company- V-S-I- and two former company officers pleaded guilty in Seattle to selling untested and defective parts.

U-S Attorney Mike McKay said V-S-I had developed ''a tradition of cheating'' on its testing reports over a 14-year-period to increase company profits.

The former officers- James Ryan and Aram Marderian- admitted to one count of conspiracy to defraud the government. The company itself admitted to one conspiracy count and three charges of mail fraud.

With its guilty plea, V-S-I, a subsidiary of Fairchild Industries, agreed to pay a three-point-five-Million-dollar fine plus court costs. V-S-I also announced that it will pay 14-and-a-half-Million dollars to settle a related civil suit filed in Los Angeles.

Under the terms of yesterday's civil suit agreement, three former employees who revealed V-S-I's wrong-doing stand to receive in excess of two-point-one-Million dollars their share of the civil amount.

A five-year-old Massachussetts girl has been reunited with her parents after she was abducted for 37 days.

Nicole Ravesi flew to her hometown of Milford yesterday, one day after Florida authorities found her living in a trailer with her alleged abductor.

Despite having been away from her parents for more than one month, Nicole apparently was NOT aware that she had been kidnapped. Her mother says Nicole thought she was on vacation with her suspected abductor, Kenneth Cole.

Officials believe Cole, an acquaintance of the Ravesi family who developed what Nicole's parents found to be an unnatural obsession with Nicole, headed south with Nicole when he learned the Ravesis were moving.

Cole, who's being held in a minimum security federal facility in Florida, had been ordered NOT to go near Nicole. However, once the restraining order expired, the Ravesi family did NOT try to have it extended.

Officials say Cole will likely be returned to Massachussetts to face charges.

An F-B-I investigator says Nicole does NOT appear to have been harmed during her captivity.

AMIABLE PARTING: British actor John Cleese, the former Monty Python trouper, managed to put a comic spin on his divorce from his second wife, American-born Barbara Trentham. ''He said their 18-month trial separation had gone so well they decided to make it permanent,'' Cleese's agent told a London newspaper. Cleese, 50, one of the stars of ''A Fish Called Wanda '' has remained on good terms with Trentham, 44, a film director who he had married in 1981, and the High Court in London approved the uncontested divorce decree on the grounds that they had lived apart for two years. Cleese and Trentham have a 5-year-old daughter, Camillia. Cleese's first marriage, to ''Fawlty Towers'' co-star Connie Booth, ended in divorce in 1978.

''People are going to see Michael in a more casual way in these ads, rather than strictly as an entertainer,'' said Adam Bleibtrau, executive producer of the campaign. ''We're going for a combination of fun and fashion.'' The campaign starts this summer and the ads may feature a variety of supporting players, including dozens of children, teenagers and two of Jackson's pet chimpanzees. ''Michael has always had a tremendously broad appeal, and we're trying to capture that '' Bleibtrau said.

Graham is hoping to be back in the pulpit for a crusade in New York in September.

LAWYERS EARS: There was something of a Mickey Mouse publicity stunt during the commencement ceremony Friday at the University of South Carolina law school. As the speaker, Disney Chairman Michael Eisner, was introduced, all 205 prospective lawyers dropped their mortarboards and donned Mickey Mouse ears obtained secretly in advance from Disney officials and stashed under their chairs. Sandy Sandidge of Columbia, a law student and organizer of the ''ears campaign,'' said the idea was to ''honor Mr. Eisner and to welcome him to our campus.'' Eisner, who received an honorary degree Saturday at the school's undergraduate commencement, challenged the graduates to find time for volunteerism.

NORFOLK, VA (MAY 12) UPI - Gov. L. Douglas Wilder, the nation's only black governor,ordered all Virginia state agencies and institutions Saturday to sell South Africa-related investments as a protest against apartheid.

The new policy, expected to have its greatest impact on university endowments and state employee pension funds, also bars Virginia agencies from future such investments.

Wilder's order, which followed behind-the-scenes maneuvering to persuade the University of Virginia to divest itself of stock in companies doing business in South Africa, was announced at a commencement address at Norfolk State University, a predominantly black school.

''The freedom sought in South Africa is no different from the freedom sought in East Germany, Poland and Lithuania,'' Wilder said. ''Our support can be no less.

''I am directing all state agencies and institutions to implement a policy of divestment in South Africa, to implement a policy that will allow no further investments in companies that are not substantially free of interests in South Africa,'' the governor said.

''In addition, I am directing those state agencies and institutions with present interests in such companies to immediately take steps to begin the divestment of those interests,'' he said.

Divestment has been a divisive issue for years on college campuses and among other institutional holders of stock in companies doing business in South Africa. A number of major companies pressured by divestment proponents have in recent years withdrawn from the South African market.

Proponents of divestment argue that such investments help prop up South Africa's apartheid regime. Opponents say that abandoning investment in South Africa hurts South African blacks economically and removes corporate leverage against the South African government.

The controversy has been sharpened by recent progress toward racial harmony in South Africa, including the freeing of Nelson Mandela, the legalization of the African National Congress and the beginning of talks between the government and ANC.

Wilder told the 1,000-member graduating class at Norfolk State that slow change was coming to South Africa ''because people of moral courage and conviction have spoken out against brutality and inhumanity. Moreover, they have backed up their words with equally powerful deeds.

''If we are to participate in the extension to all people freedom and liberties which we hold dear, we must take concrete actions which reflect our support,'' Wilder said.

Wilder, the nation's first elected black governor, has been touted since his election last year as a moderate alternative to Jesse Jackson for the Democratic Party.

In announcing the divestment policy, he pledged not to abandon Virginia's tradition of fiscal conservatism or to threaten the state's financial health.

''Through judicious investment, such steps can and will be carried out with full adherence to our fiduciary principles and fiscal responsibility '' Wilder said.

Political scientist Larry Sabato of the University of Virginia called Wilder's policy a case of ''fiscal conservatism running into social liberalism.''

''He's in a briar patch with this one, because (the state retirement system), by some estimates, has hundreds of millions of dollars invested ... with South African connections,'' Sabato said. ''(Divestiture) will be no easy task, and it could ... wind up being costly to the state.''

Sabato said it would help the governor with ''his black and liberal white constituencies,'' which have been concerned about a perceived conservative drift in his young administration. Sabato said divestiture could ''alienate his newfound conservative constituency, (but) it can't hurt him in the national Democratic Party.''

BIRMINGHAM, AL (MAY 12) UPI - Three former Ku Klux Klansmen linked to a violent clash with black marchers 11 years ago held hands and prayed with several of the march leaders Saturday in a session designed to promote brotherly love.

''I am frankly overwhelmed,'' said Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, who conducted the two-hour session with the klansmen in Birmingham. ''I really did not anticipate the experience we had today.''

Lowery and four other black leaders met with four klansmen as part of a settlement of a lawsuit stemming from a bloody confrontation between the KKK and black marchers in Decatur, Ala., in 1979. Four men - two blacks and two whites - were wounded by gunfire when the Klan tried to break up the march held on behalf of a retarded black man convicted of raping a white woman.

''All of us had a feeling that a great deal of repentence took place today '' Lowery said after the meeting. ''Some expressed sorrow about what happened and a desire to lead a respectful life.''

Lowery said he spoke to the klansmen about ''the oneness of the human family, about loving your neighbor and about self-respect being a condition for respecting others.'' He said the private meeting began and ended with prayer, with all but one of the participants joining hands at the end.

Lowery declined to name the klansman who refused to join in, but former Grand Dragon Roger Handley of Gardendale said the meeting did not change his attitude toward blacks and integration.

''It was a waste of two hours,'' Handley said. ''I told Lowery when it comes to brotherly love, go to the housing projects where all the murderers, rapists and drug dealers are.''

Other klansmen, however, said the meeting had a positive effect on them.

''I learned quite a bit. It was very productive,'' said former Klansman Doug Berryhill. ''I have no regrets.''

Former klansman Terry Tucker said the meeting helped him realize that ''a lot of things can be accomplished in this country'' if blacks and whites worked together.

Asked about Handley's comments, Lowery said, ''We think he doth protest too much.''

''I don't think anybody left that room the same,'' he said.

Derane Godfrey, another of the five former klansmen who agreed to attend the session, did not show up Saturday. An attorney for the Southern Poverty Law Center said she did not know what action would be taken against Godfrey.

NEW YORK (MAY 12) UPI - Rookie of the Year center David Robinson of San Antonio and guard Tim Hardaway, who directed the league's highest-scoring offense for Golden State, were unanimous choices for the 1990 NBA All-Rookie Team announced Saturday by the NBA.

Robinson and Hardaway received the maximum 52 points on 26 first-team votes from the 27 league coaches, who voted for first and second teams regardless of position and were not allowed to vote for their own players. Two points were awarded for a first-team vote and one for second team.

Vlade Divac of the Los Angeles Lakers (40), guard Sherman Douglas of the Miami Heat (39) and guard Pooh Richardson of the Minnesota Timberwolves (33) joined Robinson and Hardaway on the first team.

Robinson ranked 10th in the NBA in scoring, averaging 24.3 points per game. He finished second in rebounding (12.0) and third in blocked shots (3.89), helping the Spurs to a franchise-best 56-26 mark and an NBA-record turnaround with a 35-game improvement over the previous year.

Hardaway averaged 14.7 ppg, ranked ninth in the league in assists (8.7) and 10th in steals (2.09). The Warriors averaged 116.3 points per game to lead the league. This marks only the second time in NBA history a rookie guard led the highest-scoring team.

Divac, a 6-foot-11 center from Belgrade, Yugoslavia, averaged 8.5 points and 6.2 rebounds coming off the bench for the Lakers. Douglas, a second-round pick from Syracuse, started 66 of 81 games for the Heat and averaged 14.3 points and 7.6 rebounds.

Richardson came off the bench for Minnesota for the first half of the season and then started the last 48 games. He averaged 11.4 points and 6.8 rebounds.

The second team consisted of J.R. Reid of Charlotte, Sean Elliott of San Antonio, Stacey King of Chicago, Theodore Edwards of Utah and Glen Rice of Miami.

NEW YORK (MAY 13) UPI - Patrick Ewing scored a career playoff-high 45 points and Charles Oakley pulled down 20 rebounds Saturday to lead the New York Knicks to a 111-103 victory in Game 3 of their Eastern Conference semfinal series.

New York posted its first victory of the season over Detroit in pulling within 2-1 in the best-of-seven series. Game 4 is Sunday at Madison Square Garden, with Game 5 at the Palace in Auburn Hills.

Detroit put together a furious rally in the final eight minutes as it tried to overcome a 14-point deficit in the last period. In the last two minutes they made their final push but Patrick Ewing hit 4 free throws and Kiki Vandeweghe a pair in the final 1:49 to seal the triumph.

The victory also snapped Detroit's 12-game playoff winning streak, a run that began last season when the Pistons won their first NBA championship.

The Knicks, who converted 34 of 36 free throws, became the first team to score over 100 points on Detroit in the postseason. The Pistons were 21 of 35.

Ewing, who converted 17 of 18 free throws, also grabbed 13 rebounds. Vandeweghe, who had just 10 points in the first two games, finished with 16. Detroit was led by Isiah Thomas with 20 points, Joe Dumars with 19 and Bill Laimbeer with 18.

New York put together the first sustained run of the game - 8-1 - to open the final period. Trent Tucker completed the surge with a 3-pointer, giving the Knicks a 92-78 lead with 9:23 remaining. The Pistons did not score their first basket from the field in the final period until Mark Aguirre hit a jumper in the lane with 7:35 remaining.

That basket was part of an 11-2 run Detroit used to cut the deficit back to a single digit. Aguirre hit 1 of 2 free throws with 5:11 remaining to bring the Pistons within 98-91.

Detroit whittled the lead down to 107-103 with 47 seconds remaining but Thomas dribbled the ball out of bounds and had a shot blocked by Ewing on Detroit's next two possessions.

The Knicks were held to just 4 points over the first four minutes of the third period but in turn held the Pistons to 5 as both teams began to execute on defense.

Neither team was able to put together a run in the period and New York fluctuated between 4 and 8 points most of the 12 minutes. A 3-point play by Laimbeer left New York ahead 82-77 entering the final period.

Laimbeer also hit a 3-pointer at the end of the second period to pull the Pistons within 62-55 at intermission. The teams traded baskets through much of the period, with the Knicks building the lead to 10 points, their largest advantage of the half, before Laimbeer's long-range basket.

The Knicks used a 12-5 run to close the first period with a 34-27 lead. They were aided by a 4-point play in the run when Laimbeer was called for a take-down foul on Ewing. Detroit Coach Chuck Daly and assistant coach Brendan Suhr were issued technicals for arguing the call. Vandeweghe hit the two technicals and Ewing the two free throws to put the Knicks ahead 28-22 with 1:51 left.

ZACATECAS, MEXICO (MAY 12) UPI - Pope John Paul II addressed Mexican workers in a central mining state Saturday, calling for justice for those who migrate to the cities and to the United States.

In a homily in the city of Zacatecas, 315 miles northwest of Mexico City, the pope recalled that ''Jesus was the son of a carpenter'' and exalted ''the dignity of the worker.''

John Paul II referred to the high levels of migration from the state of Zacatecas, saying it does not always bring a higher standard of living.

''How many of you spend your whole lives in hard field work, perhaps receiving insufficient wages, without the hope of having some day a piece of your own land?'' the pope said.

''Many are tempted to leave for the city where, unfortunately, you will be forced to accept even more dehumanizing living conditions.''

Zacatecas, which was a prosperous silver mining center during the colonial period, was brightly decorated for the pope's brief visit, which drew tens of thousands of followers.

In Mexico City Thursday morning, John Paul II referred to the Apostolic mission as the ''nunciature,'' which is the name given to Vatican embassies in other countries.

Mexico does not have diplomatic relations with the Vatican, although President Carlos Salinas de Gortari in February named a ''personal representative'' to the Vatican.

A vatican spokesman acknowledged the slip, and the pope reiterated his desire that there would soon be an Apostolic nunciature in Mexico.

John Paul II was scheduled to return to Mexico City later Saturday, where he planned to meet in private with Mexican bishops and later address hundreds of Mexican intellectuals.

The pope's weeklong visit to Mexico, his second since 1979, ends Sunday when he will travel to the Caribbean island of Curacao in the Dutch Antilles.

In the southeastern city of Villahermosa, John Paul II on Friday called for church unity and urged people who had strayed from Roman Catholicism to return to the church.

''We lift our fervent prayers to God for church unity,'' the pope said. ''We have present the painful fact that some have broken this means of saving unity, uniting themselves to the sects; others are plagued by doubts and hesitation for lack of faith.

''All this is a call to revive your union with Christ in the church,'' he said. ''None of you, no Catholic in Mexico, can consider themselves free from this responsibility.''

SAN BERNARDINO, CA (MAY 12) UPI - Forty demonstrators were arrested on suspicion of trespassing at a medical clinic Saturday during a Mothers Day weekend blockade by Operation Rescue opponents of abortion, authorities said.

About 250 people, evenly divided between anti-abortion and abortion rights advocates, turned out at the offices of Family Planning Associates in San Bernardino, police Lt. Tom Maier said.

It was the city's largest-ever anti-abortion demonstration, he said.

By 10:40 a.m., when the demonstration ended, 40 people had been arrested on suspicion of trespassing, Maier said. The arrests cleared one doorway into the clinic, which remained open, he said.

Operation Rescue spokeswoman Colleen Crow charged that police used ''pain compliance'' holds to take demonstrators into custody.

Maier said the technique was used Saturday only when demonstrators ''refused to stand up or walk, and then (barehanded) pressure is put underneath the jaw, which will do no physical injury, but which does cause pain.''

Those arrested were bused to a nearby park, where they were to be cited and released on their promises to appear in court to face a misdemeanor trespass charge.

Only those demonstrators who refused to provide identification would be booked and jailed, Maier said. There were no other charges against the demonstrators, and none was injured.

Operation Rescue staged the demonstration to mark Mothers Day and to highlight its claim that the clinic performs between 30 and 50 abortions on Saturdays, Crow said.

SAN ANTONIO (MAY 13) UPI - Terry Cummings scored 35 points and teamed with Rod Strickland to ignite a second-quarter surge that brought the San Antonio Spurs a 115-105 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers Saturday and evened their Western Conference semifinal series at 2-2.

The Spurs used a 37-18 advantage in the second period to overcome an early nine-point deficit and piled up as much as a 23-point lead during the final quarter.

Game 5 in the best-of-seven series will be played in Portland Tuesday night, after which the teams will return to San Antonio for the sixth game Thursday evening.

Clyde Drexler scored 16 points in the first quarter as the Blazers shot 63 percent. But after leading 28-19, Portland settled for a 33-25 lead after one period and the Spurs quickly overcame that deficit by dominating the second quarter.

San Antonio went ahead with 5:34 to play in the first half on a Cummings basket and Strickland scored six straight points before Portland could stop the Spurs' run. The Spurs built a 62-51 halftime lead.

San Antonio center David Robinson added 21 points, Strickland scored 17, Willie Anderson had 14 and David Wingate 12.

Drexler led Portland with 27 points, with Jerome Kersey scoring 23, Terry Porter 18 and Buck Williams 13.

The Blazers were severely hampered by the absence of centers Kevin Duckworth and Wayne Cooper. Duckworth has missed the entire series with a broken hand and Cooper could not play Saturday because of back spasms. Cooper is expected to be ready for next Tuesday's game.

The Trail Blazers used an 18-9 run to build their largest lead of the game at 22-13, taking that advantage on a Drexler dunk with 5:22 remaining in the opening period.

San Antonio opened the second quarter with six straight points to close to within 33-31 on a jump shot by Cummings.

With Portland still leading 42-38, San Antonio went on a 14-2 streak with Strickland's third straight basket in that run coming on a steal and breakaway layup that pushed San Antonio's lead to 49-42.

San Antonio stretched its lead to as many as 17 points, 84-67, in the third quarter as Strickland and Robinson scored six points apiece.

Portland managed to hit only eight of 22 field goals in the quarter as San Antonio outscored the Trail Blazers 24-20 and led 86-71 going into the final period.

Cummings opened the fourth quarter with six points and San Antonio opened a 99-76 lead with 7:07 remaining on an Anderson three-point field goal.

Portland's late rally got the Blazers within 111-102 with 1:04 remaining.

PHOENIX (MAY 13) UPI - Tom Chambers scored 34 points and Jeff Hornacek 29 Saturday to lead the Phoenix Suns to a 117-103 victory Saturday over the Los Angeles Lakers and a 2-1 advantage in their Western Conference semifinal series.

Game 4 of the best-of-seven series is Sunday afternoon at Phoenix.

Chambers and Hornacek keyed a third-quarter rally in which the Suns outscored the Lakers 37-25 to take an 88-74 lead. The Lakers never got closer than 10 points in the final quarter.

Chambers scored 14 points and Hornacek 11 in the decisive third quarter, when the Lakers committed five turnovers, including two steals by Hornacek.

The Suns went ahead to stay 56-53 on a Kevin Johnson layup and free throw 1:13 into the second half. In the next nine minutes, Phoenix outscored the Lakers 25-11 and Hornacek's 3-point shot put the Suns ahead 83-66 with 1:48 remaining in the third.

The Lakers shot only 41 percent in the fourth quarter and never seriously threatened.

James Worthy led Los Angeles with 27 points and Magic Johnson scored 22. A.C. Green added 13 and Orlando Woolridge 12.

Chambers, who scored only nine points in the Lakers' 124-100 romp in Game 2, hit 14 of 23 field goal attempts Saturday.

Hornacek hit 10 of 16 in the best playoff scoring performance of his four-year career. His previous high was 21 points against the Lakers in the 1989 Western Conference finals.

Worthy had 10 of his points in the first quarter when the Lakers held their largest lead, eight points.

Los Angeles led 29-26 at the end of the first quarter. Phoenix, with Eddie Johnson getting all eight of his points in the second quarter, fought back to lead 51-49 at halftime.

The Suns shot 60 percent from the floor, compared with their 41 percent shooting in Game 2.

Los Angeles, which shot 57 percent in Game 2, cooled off to 48 percent.

The Lakers outrebounded the Suns 35-29 but built their advantage in the first half when they controlled the boards 20-12 and did not allow Phoenix one offensive rebound.

Kevin Johnson had 22 points, eight assists and seven rebounds for Phoenix. Center Mark West had 14 points.

BONN, West Germany (MAY 13) UPI - The West German government, acting on a tip, has interceded to block a shipment of equipment by a private firm destined for a purported second Libyan chemical warfare factory, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The newspaper, Die Welt, said the government was tipped that a West German firm had planned to ship the equipment to Libya by concealing its nature with the aid of Dutch and Panamanian firms and shipping it to Saudi Arabia for reshipment.

The West German government did not immediately comment on the newspaper report, which was attributed to ''reliable government circles.''

The government acted swiftly because of its determination to prevent ''a second Rabta,'' Die Welt said.

Die Welt said there is concern in Bonn that Libya is planning to build a second chemical warfare factory in either Sabha or Bra, about 400 miles south of Tripoli, similar to Libya's first poison gas factory at Rabta.

Two West German magazines have reported Libya is building such a plant at Sabha.

The factory at Rabta, 40 miles southwest of Tripoli, which the United States contends is a chemical weapons plant, was reported heavily damaged by fire in March.

But some intelligence reports said the fire may have been a hoax by Libya to make it appear the plant had been damaged because of fears the United States would bomb the factory.

A German firm, the Imhausen Chemie AG, previously was accused of violating export regulations by shipping equipment to the Rabta plant and its head, Juergen Hippenstikel-Imhausen, has been arrested.

WASHINGTON (MAY 13) UPI - NASA engineers began focusing the Hubble Space Telescope Saturday in preparation for taking the $1.5 billion orbiting observatory's historic first picture of the heavens this week.

As the 12-ton telescope orbited 381 miles above Earth, technicians at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., and Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., began the work of commencing a 38-hour ''bootstrap'' process of focusing the craft's mirrors.

If all goes well, the telescope's wide field planetary camera will snap the telescope's historic ''first light'' picture between Wednesday and Friday depending on whether the process needs repeating.

The subject of the picture, which is intended as a test and not to produce any new discoveries, will be a 3 billion-year-old star cluster known as NGC 3532, about 1,500 light-years from Earth in the constellation Carina. A light-year, the distance light travels in one year, is about 5.8 trillion miles.

Workers Saturday also completed an important set of tests on the telescope's guidance system, tested several instruments and turned on full power to the high-speed photometer - a high-tech light meter - and faint object camera.

The guidance system and instruments will be critical during the 15-year mission of the telescope, which is expected to revolutionize astronomy by studying stars, planets and galaxies in greater detail than ever before.

NASA had hoped to take the telescope's first picture about a week after it was deployed by the crew of the space shuttle Discovery on April 25, but problems in the painstaking start-up process put the work behind schedule.

Technicians resolved most of the glitches - including the most recent one involving the guidance system that resulted from a simple math error - but were still working on two unusual movements in the telescope.

NASA scientist Edward Weiler said he was confident the problems would be fixed and stressed they would not affect the early operation of the craft, including the ability to take the first photograph.

''I'm getting more and more excited because I'm believing more and more that it's going to happen,'' he said. ''The excitment is building up in a lot of us.''

(MAY 12) UPI - Three Baltic republics reaffirm their proclamations of independence from Moscow... Rain added to the woes of flood-ravaged residents in Arkansas and Texas... And President Bush announces a Citizens Democracy Corps... U-P-I has these stories and more topping the news, next.

The Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia are joining forces in their battle for independence from Moscow.

Leaders of the three republics met today in the Estonian capital and reinstated their pre-World War Two Baltic Council alliance. They also pledged economic co-operation.

In addition, the three leaders sent letters to President Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev appealing for recognition of Baltic independence.

They say restoration of that independence ''will strengthen peace, disarmament and co-operation in all of Europe.''

Another letter on the Lithuanian situation was sent this week to Gorbachev by England's Prime Minister Thatcher. Officials in London say Thatcher urged the Soviet leader to use negotiations to resolve the Lithuanian dispute.

The three Baltic republics were annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940. All three declared independence separately in the past two months.

(MAY 12) UPI - President Bush took his volunteerism push one step further today with announcement of a Citizens Democracy Corps to support democratic change in Europe.

Bush made the announcement at Columbia, South Carolina, in a commencement address at the University of South Carolina. He said the corps would serve as a clearing-house for private volunteer help in areas ranging from health care to financial service to environmental protection.

The president said- quoting now- ''America has much to contribute- much it can do to help these nations move forward on the path of democracy.''

The corps is the latest step in Bush's effort to support moves toward democracy in the countries of Eastern Europe, which until last year had long been communist-dominated.

The new Citizens Democracy Corps will be funded mostly independently, unlike the Peace Corps, which is a government agency.

Philippine investigators have determined that a crude bomb may have caused

Officials say the plane was delayed for three minutes when its main door jammed. The device apparently was timed to explode shortly after takeoff and the brief delay, experts say, may have averted a major air disaster.

Aviation experts say they will continue to poke through the wreckage in search for further clues.

The president made the announcement today in a commencement address at the University of South Carolina in Columbia... and promoted it later at the Reverend Jerry Falwell's Liberty University in Lynchburg, Virginia.

Administration officials say the Citizens Democracy Corps will begin operating within months. But it will differ from the Peace Corps... begun in the early 1960's by President Kennedy.

WARSAW (MAY 13) - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa delivered a strong criticism of the government of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki here Sunday, accusing it of following a poor strategy and lacking "attractive ideas."

Speaking during a meeting of Solidarity's Civic Committee, the union leader said that the Solidarity-led Mazowiecki government has only the timid support of the Polish population, "which is made to think that there are no other solutions."

He said the strategy of the government is "bad" even if its "general line" is good. "Its ideas are not attractive to the population, which doesn't see the effects," he said.

The Nobel Peace Prize laureate told the Civic Committee, a group of 200 intellectuals and unionist formed early last year, that his "ideas about democracy" were not the same as the government's.

Mr. Mazowiecki, a member of the committee, was not at the meeting Sunday, which was called to discuss the May 20 local elections. He sent his regrets saying he had to go to Krakow for a meeting with Cardinal Franciszek Macharski.

Mr. Walesa said that Poles were victims of "stagnation" and "passivity."

"We must allow anyone who has something to say to speak, to present their proposals" instead of just "supporting the government program," which he said was "bad for the government" and "dangerous for society."

KABUL (MAY 13) - Afghan government troops bombed and destroyed rebel positions near here and killed 14 guerrillas after they fired rockets at the city, killing four civilians, an official spokesman said Sunday.

The air force carried out attacks on mujahedeen guerrilla strongholds in the Paghman hills, from which at least 15 rockets were fired at the capital Saturday, killing the four civilians, spokesman Humayun Mukammel said.

Six other civilians were wounded in the mujahedeen attack.

"We had precise information and destroyed points from where the opposition fired rockets at Kabul," he said.

Diplomats said Kabul's international airport was closed for a few hours Saturday as guerrilla rockets pounded areas near the airport. No damage to planes or the terminal building was reported.

At least five rockets hit Kabul on Sunday, but the spokesman said he had no details of the attacks.

"They (the mujahedeen) have to register their presence by firing rockets, especially before an important event like the summit," Mr. Mukammel said, referring to the May 30 summit in Washington between U.S. President George Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The meeting is expected to include talks on the Afghan conflict.

Mr. Mukammel said the Kabul garrison was taking "precautionary measures" to minimise rocket attacks on the city in the coming weeks.

But he said most of rockets fired on Kabul on Saturday came from Paghman, some 20 kilometres (12 miles) northwest of the city, while a few came from the Kohi Safi mountain region in the northeast.

At least 15 Egyptian-made Sakar-30 rockets slammed into the capital on Saturday, and the barrage continued Sunday, Mr. Mukammel said.

Sakar-30 rockets can be fired up to 30 kilometres (18 miles) from the intended target. Guerrillas hiding in caves in Paghman have been pounding the city with rockets and stepped up their attacks in the past week.

BERLIN (MAY 13) - The leaders of the two Germanies are to hold their first summit Monday, the ADN news agency reported Sunday, as East and West German experts finished drafting a treaty on economic, monetary and social union.

The East German news agency said West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere would meet in East Berlin to discuss the "state treaty."

ADN did not provide any further details about the planned meeting between Mr. Kohl and Mr. De Maiziere, who leads a center-right coalition government following the March 18 legislative elections in East Germay.

A spokesman for the East German Government confirmed that a summit would be held, but could not give a date or venue. In Bonn, a West German Government spokesman would only say he did not rule out a summit.

Dieter Vogel, the West German spokesman, said earlier Sunday that experts from East and West Germany had finished drafting the agreement on monetary, economic and social union.

He said they finished their work during the night, and the draft now goes to political leaders for consideration. The spokesman said the final agreement was to be signed by the Bonn government on Friday so that monetary, economic and social union of the two Germanies can go into effect on July 1.

West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel and his East German counterpart Walter Romberg were also expected to meet in East Berlin on Monday to discuss the draft.

Sources familiar with the experts' work said several points had not been fully resolved and are to be settled outside the framework of the union treaty.

The three major areas of differences concern property rights in what is now East Germany, agricultural financing, and some transition measures relating to restructuring businesses.

MEXICO CITY (MAY 13) - Pope John Paul Ii departed Sunday for the Caribbean island of Curacao after an eight-day visit to Mexico in which he defended church pronouncements on political issues.

Crowds were on hand to cheer the chief bishop of the Roman Catholic Church as he boarded a plane at Mexico City airport for Curacao in the Dutch Antilles, hich the Pope will visit briefly before heading back to Rome and the Vatican.

A total of some 20 million people turned out to see and hear the pontiff during his eight-day sojurn in Mexico, which has no diplomatic relations with the Vatican despite the overwhelming prevalance of Catholics in its population.

On Saturday, the final full day of his visit, Pope John Paul urged Latin Americans to seek new ways outside those offered by communism and capitalism.

The church did not identify with a particular political system, he stressed. But whereas communism had proven its own failure, capitalism also failed to guarantee human dignity, he said.

As examples of capitalism's shortcomings he cited abortion, euthenasia and the high rate of suicide in Western industrial countries. It was important that Latin America find new ways that offered ''service to the people'', the Pope said.

CAIRO (MAY 13) - Human rights organisations in Egypt protested Sunday at the wave of emigration by Soviet Jews to Israel, dubbing it a serious threat to Palestinian human rights.

With a day to go before President Hosny Mubarak of Egypt starts an official visit to Moscow, the groups said Israel in its current borders could not absorb the migrants and would therefore be encouraged to start fresh ''expansionist wars''.

They appealed to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to halt this ''dangerous'' wave of migration, suggesting the Soviet Jews could migrate elsewhere.

The internationally recognised right of freedom of movement was an individual right but could not justify a mass migration that destroyed an opportunity for peace in the Middle East, they said.

The statement noted that human rights considerations had not prevented the United States restricting the issue of visas to Jews wanting to leave the Soviet Union.

Israel was exploiting the changed international situation to breach the human rights of Palestinians by setting up new settlements in the occupied territories and speaking of ''Greater Israel''.

The Egyptian groups were concerned at these ''expansionist and hostile'' intentions, they said.

TOKOZA, South Africa (MAY 13) - Police fired teargas at peaceful protestors in this township west of Johannesburg who had gathered at a rally Sunday to call for the resignation of government-backed black municipal councillors.

An Agence France-Presse reporter also saw police confiscate an African National Congress (ANC) flag and maintain a tense pesence by continually circling the stadium in "casspirs" (armoured vehicles) where the rally, attended by some 3,500 people, was held.

Organisers from the ANC-backed Tokoza Civic Association (TCO) told AFP they had refused to seek permission from the authorities for the rally.

"This is our township .... our stadium, and if we want to use it for rallies, we will," Cassil Khanyile said.

Earlier, the crowd cheered liberal Democratic Party (DP) organiser Etienne le Roux when he told them that whites supported the ANC in their quest for a non-racial democratic South Africa.

"We are your friends .... We are together with you in the struggle for all people to get a place in South Africa," he said.

Calling on people to break down racial barriers, Mr. le Roux said: "We can be Afrikaners, Xhosas, Zulus or Asians, but we are firstly South Africans."

BONN (MAY 13) - The Christian Democratic Union of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl looked to have lost power in the state of Lower Saxony as first results came in of Sunday's state legislature election.

Normally very reliable computer projections indicated the Social Democrats, along with the Greens, would have a three-seat majority.

At national level, the loss would mean the Cdu losing control of the Bundesrat - the second parliamentary chamber, where state representatives assemble.

This, in turn, could present problems for the Bonn government pushing through future legislation.

In Sunday's other state election, in North Rhine-Westphalia, West Germany's most populous state, the Social Democrats held on to their absolute majority, but with a slightly reduced lead, the computer projections said.

In North Rhine-Westphalia, stabilised computer projections gave the Social Democrats - 24 years in power there and led by the popular Johannes Rau - just under 51 per cent of the vote.

That was enough for 104 seats in the 201-seat legislature, although the party registered a loss of about 1.5 per cent in the low turn-out poll.

The Cdu - which had sent in Bonn Labour Minister Norbert Bluem as figurehead to challenge Rau - polled slightly less than in the last election in 1985, registering a post-war all-time low.

The Free Democrats also polled slightly less, but looked set to get just over five per cent - the hurdle which has to be cleared for legislature representation.

It remained to be seen whether the environmentalist Greens would manage this. Stabilised computer predictions had them hovering around five per cent.

In Lower Saxony, stabilised projections showed the Spd, headed by Gerhard Schroeder, plus the Greens - until now an opposition alliance - would be able to form a government replacing long-standing Cdu prime Minister Ernst Albrecht.

The Cdu lost just over two per cent of what it polled in the previous election while the Spd won just over two per cent more. The Free Democrats polled around the same - nearly six per cent - while the Greens lost just over one per cent, also ending at nearly six.

In both North Rhine-Westphalia and Lower Saxony - together containing about 40 per cent of all West German voters - the radical right-wing Republicans hovered between 1.5 and twe per cent of the vote, thus failing to win any seats.

The elections, coming two months after the first free election in East Germany where the Cdu won a clear victory, were seen as the first test for the mood of West German voters about Chancellor Kohl's Bonn coalition before the West German general election due December 2.

German unity eclipsed all other issues in campaigning for both elections Sunday. The Cdu, toting Kohl as ''Unity Chancellor'', had been urging a swift fusion of the two Germanys, while the Social Democrats warned of the social disadvantages and high cost.

Drama came right in the middle of campaigning with the stabbing of Oskar Lafontaine - set to be Spd challenger to Kohl in the December election - by a deranged woman at a Cologne election rally.

MAPUTO (MAY 13) - Rebels of the Mozambique National Resistance (RENAMO) massacred at least 18 people in an attack Saturday afternoon against a train travelling from South Africa to Maputo, according to police sources and survivors cited by the Mozambican news agency AIM.

Some 53 other people were treated in hospital here and four of them were in serious condition under intensive care, hospital sources said Sunday.

The train was carrying both goods wagons and passenger carriages. The passengers were mainly Mozambican migrant workers returning from the South African gold mines.

The rebels set off a remote-controlled mine under the train, and then opened fire on the panic-stricken passengers, according to the survivors.

The ambush took place at about 4 p.m. (1400 GMT) in the area of Movene, about 70 kilometres (40 miles) west of Maputo and about 15 kms (nine miles) from the South African border.

It was almost a carbon copy of the last major rebel attack on the railway line, on February 14, at almost the same spot. In the February attack 66 people were killed.

A group of miners who escaped the latest bloody ambush returned to the site in the company of Mozambican troops to try to recover their possessions. But they found that the rebels had mined the area before withdrawing.

A relief train was sent from Maputo to pick up the wounded, who started arriving at Maputo central hospital late Saturday night.

BAGHDAD (MAY 13) - Iraqi Foreign Minister Tarek Aziz left here for Rome Sunday to meet Italian officials, the Iraqi News Agency (INA) reported, a day after Italian police seized military equipment bound for Iraq.

Mr. Aziz was also to hold talks in Rome with United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar on efforts to revive negotiations with Iran to end the Gulf war.

The INA report said only that Mr. Aziz would discuss bilateral relations with Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis.

But Italian police announced Saturday that they had confiscated special steel components earmarked for Iraq that could be used in the construction of a giant gun.

Seizures of similar material have also been made over the past month in Britain, Greece and Turkey, despite assertions from Iraq that the pipes are to be used in the oil industry.

Mr. Aziz before leaving here said he and Mr. Perez de Cuellar would "consider re-activating peace negotiations (with Iran) under the auspices of the United Nations."

Iran and Iraq have been observing a U.N.-monitored cease-fire since August 1988 but have made no progress in talks -- also sponsored by the United Nations -- aimed at securing a permanent settlement.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, according to diplomatic sources in Teheran, earlier this month sent a letter to Iran proposing direct talks, outside the U.N. framework, with Iranian President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani.

Iran has responded positively to the proposal but disagrees with Mr. Hussein's suggested venue, which Arab diplomats identified as Mecca, Saudi Arabia.

They said Iran, having no diplomatic relations with Saudi Arabia, proposed instead a "neutral country."

BUCHAREST (MAY 13) - National Peasants' Party presidential candidate Ion Ratiu told 4,000 supporters at his final campaign rally here Sunday that his opposition group would not be intimidated by government threats.

Speaking at his final electoral rally in the capital, Mr. Ratiu said the NPP had been the target of "60 cases of attempted aggression or intimidation" since the campaign began for the May 20 presidential and legislative elections.

Mr. Ratiu also lashed out several times at interim head of state Ion Iliescu, a reformed communist and the presidential candidate of the ruling National Salvation Front, during his speech in a Bucharest square.

"If you want to be led by Moscow, vote Iliescu," he told the crowd.

He called the May 20 elections a "great adventure for the country because the West is with us," and said Romania must have "confidence in the West."

Mr. Ratiu said his NPP was the only party which could provide Romania with "dignity and authentic democracy."

There were no incidents at the rally.

Anti-government protestors continued meanwhile to occupy University Square in another part of the capital. The square has been occupied for more than three weeks by protesters who have declared it a "communist-free zone."

Mr. Iliescu said Saturday that the square "will have to be cleaned up" by Friday, two days before the elections.

He charged that the occupation was "a kind of electoral campaign by some poitical parties" and stressed that electoral law forbade any demonstrations two days before the poll.

Mr. Iliescu added that "he hoped to arrive at a friendly solution," and protest leaders said that contacts had begun between groups representing the demonstrators and presidential officials on working out a meeting.

The occupation of the square has snowballed into a protest movement calling for the removal from government of anyone associated with the regime of Nicolae Ceausescu, who was ousted and executed in December.

The protestors want former communists banned from running in the elections, which have been marked by opposition allegations of harassment and intimidation by supportors of Mr. Iliescu's ruling National Salvation Front.

Seventy-three people were still on hunger strike in University Square on Sunday. Some have not had food for two weeks.

"They won't have the courage to evacuate us by force, We believe in a final victory," said Claudia, 25, a secretary from Bucharest.

"I was here on December 22 to bring down the communist regime. We don't want communism anymore. We want to live in freedom," she said.

Doina Cornea, 60, a prominent dissident against the Ceausescu regime, on Friday began a solidarity hunger strike in the central town of Cluj in protest against "the dishonest electoral campaign."

LAGOS (MAY 13) - The anti-apartheid struggle in South Africa is reaching its "most critical stage", the deputy President of the African National Congress told a rally here Sunday.

Mr. Mandela told some 10,000 people massed at a football stadium that "we are moving forward to the most critical stage in our struggle", after he arrived on a four-day "state" visit to the country at the invitation of the Nigerian government.

The most critical stage is that of negotiations with the South African government, he said.

His audience at the rally included Nigerian Number Two Vice-Admiral Augustus Aikhomu, some ministers and state military governors, and government officials.

''If we have a breakthrough during these negotiations, you should know that you are part of that breakthrough'', said Mr. Mandela who praised the Nigerian government and its people for the moral, political and financial support it has given the ANC, to continue the struggle.

He said that Nigeria's assistance to the ANC, and his family and the ''warm reception'' accorded him on his arrival have amply demonstrated that ''I am not only among friends, but I have come home''.

Mr. Mandela, who last visited Nigeria in April 1962, during which he came to solicit Nigeria's support for the ANC, is scheduled on Monday to meet President Ibrahim Babangida, who met him in Windhoek last march during the independence celebration of Namibia.

Mr Mandela's visit to Nigeria is part of a tour of seven African countries which has already taken him to Zambia and Angola. Others to be visited are Algeria, Libya, Egypt and Kenya.

He and his wife, Winnie, were met at the Murtala Muhammed international airport by Vice Admiral Aikhomu and the minister of external affairs, Alhaji Rilwanu Lukman.

Before the rally, the couple drove round the stadium in a Land Rover jeep to the applause and cheering of the crowd.

This was later followed by musical performance by top Nigerian musicians who have within the last 15 years made records and called for his release, as well as other cultural dances and songs in his honour.

Before leaving Nigeria, he is to receive the Grand Commander of the Federal Republic, the nation's highest national award, a honorary doctorate degree of the university of Lagos and the 'City of Glasgow' award which Nigeria, on behalf of the Organisation of African Unity, has kept for him since 1981.

The former detainee, released in February after 27 years in jail, is also scheduled to meet Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, the first Nigerian President after independence and from whose government he sought assistance for the ANC when he first visited Nigeria in 1962.

He leaves Wednesday for Algiers after attending the Commonwealth foreign ministers' conference in Abuja, the nation's future capital.

KABUL (MAY 13) - The Afghan resistance Sunday kept up a barrage of rocket attacks on the capital Kabul, seriously wounding at least 10 civilians after government troops killed 14 guerrillas in bombing raids, officials said.

The fourteen rebels died when the air force bombed guerrilla positions in the Paghman mountain region, 20 kilometers (12 miles) northwest of here Saturday in retaliation over a rebel rocket attack which killed four civilians in Kabul on the same day, officials said.

At least 17 rockets hit the Share Naw residential area of Kabul and the Darul Aman suburb where the defence ministry is located, wounding at least 10 civilians, officials here said.

The guerrillas had fired 15 rockets at different parts of the capital Saturday.

Official spokesman Humayun Mukammel said the air force bombed guerrilla positions in Paghman from where the bulk of the rockets were fired.

"We have killed 14 and wounded nine warmongers. By doing this we have contributed to preventing international and regional terrorism," he said.

"They (the mujahedeen) have to register their presence by firing rockets, especially before an important event like the summit," Mr. Mukammel said, referring to the May 30 summit in Washington between U.S. President George Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

That meeting is expected to include talks on the Afghan conflict.

Mr. Mukammel said the Kabul garrison was taking "precautionary measures" to minimise rocket attacks on the city in the coming weeks.

But he said most of rockets fired on Kabul on Saturday came from Paghman, some 20 kilometres (12 miles) northwest of the city, while a few came from the Kohi Safi mountain region in the northeast.

At least 15 Egyptian-made Sakar-30 rockets slammed into the capital on Saturday, and the barrage continued Sunday, Mr. Mukammel said.

Sakar-30 rockets can be fired up to 30 kilometres (18 miles) from the intended target. Guerrillas hiding in stone caves in Paghman have been pounding the city with rockets and stepped up their attacks in the past week.

LAGOS (MAY 13) - One of Africa's foremost nationalist leaders and deputy president of the African National Congress (Anc), Nelson Mandela, accompanied by his wife Winnie, arrived here Sunday for a three-day visit to Nigeria.

The couple were received at the Murtala Mohammed Airport by a large group of high-ranking government officials led by Nigeria's vice president, Vice-Admiral Augustus Aikhomu.

Thousands of cheering Nigerians lined the five kilometre-route from the airport to the national stadium where Mandela addressed a rally attended by a huge crowd.

Mandela paid glowing tribute to the government and people of Nigeria for the unflinching support - moral, financial and material - they had been given to the anti-apartheid struggle in South Africa.

He explained it was such support that had served as a moral booster to the liberation fighters, pointing out that it was the greatest moment in his life to be present in Nigeria to pay the Anc's debt of gratitude to its government and people.

Mandela, who will be formally received Monday by President Ibrahim Babangida, said he would brief the Nigerian leader on the outcome of the recent talks between the Anc and South African President Frederik de Klerk.

He was also full of praise for Nigerian women for actively standing by his family while he was in jail for over 25 years, adding that the well-being of his wife and the education of his children were largely made possible through the support of Nigerian women.

SANTIAGO, May 13 (AFP) - Chile's new government Sunday pledged to crush groups that have attacked high-profile members of the former regime of General Augusto Pinochet.

"We are resolved to stop them.... We will do everything possible to destroy them," said Enrique Correa, secretary general of the presidency.

Thursday, two young men in high school uniforms shot and killed Luis Fontaine, a retired police colonel acquitted in the March 1985 murder of three communist leaders and the 1986 torture-death of a student in police custody.

Those were among the most notorious human rights cases that surfaced under the Pinochet regime.

In calls Saturday to news organizations, an informant claimed responsibility in the Fontaine killing for a group calling itself Martyrs of '73. The name refers to the year Gen. Pinochet took power in a bloody coup.

The day of the killing, several far-right and far-left organizations claimed responsibility, including the communist Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front.

A faction of the front has said it was behind a March 21 shooting that left General Gustavo Leigh, who served as a member of the Pinochet military junta, wounded.

Gen. Pinochet surrendered power March 11 to the elected government of President Patricio Aylwin.

Mr. Correa said, "We are going to show that in a democracy, the government has the major moral, social and political right to stop terrorism."

KATHMANDU (MAY 13) - Nepal's King Birendra and Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai will meet here Monday in a bid to avert a crisis over the king's unilateral appointment of a panel to draft a constitution, the prime minister said late Sunday.

Mr. Bhattarai told Agence France-Presse he was to have an audience with the king at the Royal Palace "in an apparent bid to defuse" the looming political crisis.

The prime minister said he had been unable to meet with the monarch Sunday as originally planned.

Top Nepali Congress leader Ganesh Man Singh meanwhile addressed an estimated 50,000 people gathered in Pokhara, 225 kilometers (141 miles) west of Kathmandu, to demand that the seven-member constituent panel named by the king Friday be dissolved immediately.

He appealed to the king to name a new commission representing the will of the people to draw up a new constitution for this poverty-stricken Himalayan nation of 20 million inhabitants.

Earlier in the day, students held a public rally at an open air theater in the center of the capital to denounce the king's appointment of a panel to draft a constitution without the consent of the month-old coalition government.

Police were deployed around the Royal Palace to avert possible violence and Royal Army soldiers were also seen in the area.

Mr. Bhattarai's Nepali Congress Party, the leading partner in the coalition government, installed April 18 after the king bowed to pro-democracy protests, had Saturday appealed to the king to name a new constituent panel in consultation with the government.

KUWAIT (MAY 13) UPI - Police officials Saturday freed on bail 10 pro-democracy activists detained five days for holding unauthorized political meetings prior to a national election, government sources said.

The oil-rich emirate next month will stage the Persian Gulf's first open elections since the beginning of the 8-year-long Iran-Iraq war. But some activists have called for a boycott of the polls and for the revival of the emirate's old Parliament, dissolved in 1986.

Gulf-based Western diplomats said the Kuwaiti poll was important because it marked the beginning of a new wave of popular representation within the conservative gulf states, and could eventually have a spin-off effect on countries such as Saudi Arabia, an absolute monarchy.

The government has said the June 10 election will select a four-year transitional national council that will eventually pave the way for a national Parliament.

The emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber al Ahmad al Sabah, will retain the right to veto legislation and will directly appoint 25 of the proposed council's 75 members.

Eight of the men were arrested Tuesday after a prominent former deputy, Ahmad al Khatib, addressed the gathering. Six others, including the owner of the diwaniyah, or meeting house, were arrested for preventing security officers from carrying out their duty, the interior ministry said.

Two other activists were arrested on Monday and Wednesday for printing and distributing leaflets criticizing the transitional national council.

More than 560 people have registered their names to run in next month's poll, but the so-called ''Group of 32,'' who include lawmakers of the Parliament dissolved in 1986, have described the election as unconstitutional.

The activists have called for the restoration of the old Parliament, and not for the creation of a new council that lacks political clout because its laws can be vetoed.

But a senior member of Kuwait's ruling family rejected the charge.

''The emiri decree (setting up the council) is 100 percent constitutional '' Deputy Premier Sheikh Sabah al Ahmad al Sabah told reporters. ''The great number of candidates provides clear evidence that citizens have responded to the Emir's call for the creation of a four-year council.''

MIAMI BEACH, FL (MAY 13) UPI - A fire sparked by a faulty electrical cord killed an 84-year-old man Saturday at a hotel a few blocks from the site of a devastating blaze that claimed nine lives last month, officials said.

The afternoon fire at the Lombardy Inn also injured three people and forced firemen to evacuate the lodging, which catered to year-round residents and is near the ruins of the gutted Fontana Hotel in the resort and retirement city.

Flames early April 6 swept through the Fontana and killed nine residents.

Neither the Fontana nor the Lombardy were equipped with a sprinkler system.

The Lombardy fire ignited after a cord connecting an air conditioning wall unit short-circuited in a first-floor room, said Sgt. James Mazer, a spokesman for the Miami Beach Fire Department.

''The cause has been ruled accidental,'' Mazer said. ''The fatality occurred on the second floor immediately above where we believe the fire originated.''

The victim was identified as Cosimo Mitrotti, 84, a Panamanian native who checked into the hotel April 19. Mitrotti apparently died of smoke inhalation.

Three other hotel residents were in stable condition at area hospitals, where they were treated for smoke inhalation.

The fire started at 2:24 p.m.

''I saw the kids run by and they said the place was on fire. I stepped into the hall and there was smoke so I ran out,'' said resident Valerie Cole.

Though the Lombardy Inn fire was confined to three rooms, 23 of the 59 residents registered were put up in an area hotel for the night by the Red Cross.

The hotel's fire alarm system alerted occupants to the blaze, but the building was not equipped with a sprinkler system, said Assistant Fire Chief John Reed. Under state law, hotels have until October 1991 to install sprinkler systems.

Many of the occupants of the Lombardy Inn, like those of the Fontana Hotel lived at the hotel year-round.

''It's not a hotel catering to tourists,'' said Mazer. ''As opposed to the Fontana, which had a good deal of elderly, this is a complete mix right down the line - families with children, young people.''

MEXICO CITY, Mexico (MAY 13) UPI - Pope John Paul II called on Mexican bishops Saturday to use the press and ''mass media'' to spread the Christian doctrine and not to shy away from moral judgments that have political connotations.

In apparent response to criticisms that his weeklong visit to Mexico is politically motivated, John Paul II told bishops at the Episcopal Conference headquarters just north of Mexico City that ''the church is not mixed up in any way with the political community nor is it tied to any political system.

''It would show great misunderstanding of the nature of the church if anyone tried to identify it with a system, or, if you wish, a political party,'' the pope said at the meeting, which was not open to the press.

He said the church's role is to ''carry out its mission among men without obstruction and give its moral judgment even on subjects referring to the political order.''

''It is not undue meddling in an alien field,'' the pope told the bishops, but ''wishes to be a service to the whole community.''

John Paul II has been criticized for making statements about Mexico's constitution, which does not recognize the church and bans the clergy from taking part in education or politics. On Thursday the pope called for the law to be changed regarding the clergy's right to run schools.

John Paul II said he was pleased with the ''climate of better understanding and collaboration'' between the government and the church in Mexico, and repeated his praise for President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, who in February named a personal representative to the Vatican.

John Paul II said the bishops should ''take advantage of the variety of means at their disposal in the current age to announce the Christian doctrine.''

''You are very aware of the need in our days to use the mass media so that the message of Christ reaches every place and the church is more present among men,'' he said.

In a speech to several hundred Mexican and international intellectuals Saturday night, John Paul II talked of the moves away from communism in Eastern Europe, referring to the ''deception'' of Marxism.

He expressed concern for a rising number of suicides in the world and condemned abortion.

The pope said ''the threat of total destruction appears to have been eliminated'' from the world, but warned there was still much uncertainty as to what road to take in the future, challenging his audience to ''give life to a new age.''

Earlier, in a homily in the city of Zacatecas, 315 miles northwest of Mexico City, the pope recalled that ''Jesus was the son of a carpenter'' and exalted ''the dignity of the worker.''

John Paul II referred to the high levels of migration from the state of Zacatecas, saying it does not always bring a higher standard of living.

''How many of you spend your whole lives in hard field work, perhaps receiving insufficient wages, without the hope of having some day a piece of your own land?'' the pope said.

''Many are tempted to leave for the city where, unfortunately, you will be forced to accept even more dehumanizing living conditions.''

Zacatecas, which was a prosperous silver mining center during the colonial period, was brightly decorated for the pope's brief visit, which drew tens of thousands of followers.

In Mexico City Thursday morning, John Paul II referred to the Apostolic mission as the ''nunciature,'' which is the name given to Vatican embassies in other countries.

Mexico does not have diplomatic relations with the Vatican, although President Carlos Salinas de Gortari in February named a ''personal representative'' to the Vatican.

A Vatican spokesman acknowledged the slip, and the pope reiterated his desire that there would soon be an Apostolic nunciature in Mexico.

The pope's weeklong visit to Mexico, his second since 1979, ends Sunday when he will travel to the Caribbean island of Curacao in the Dutch Antilles.

NEW YORK (MAY 13) UPI - Controversial comedian Andrew Dice Clay was heckled Saturday night during his opening monologue as guest host of ''Saturday Night Live,'' and he responded with a series of biting comebacks.

The hecklers shouted, ''go away!'' repeatedly at the comedian, whose presence on the live NBC program had sparked protests from homosexual and women's groups and led cast member Nora Dunn and singer Sinead O'Connor to refuse to appear on the show.

One NBC affiliate, WETM-TV in Elmira, N.Y., said it would not broadcast the show because station officials did not ''trust (Clay) on the air.''

Clay is known for his derogatory and graphic put-downs of women and minorities and explicit descriptions of violent sexual encounters.

Clay, smoking a cigarette and wearing a black and white leather jacket, lashed out at the hecklers, who began screaming at him at the beginning of his monologue.

''All right, snapper head, sit down, shut your mouth and pay attention,'' Clay said. ''Relax, would you. That's the type of guy that hangs out in a men's room to smell other people's crap all day long... Just because I didn't want to go out with you, pal, don't mean I don't dig you.''

The heckling subsided soon after Clay began. It was unclear whether NBC security ushered the hecklers out of the studio.

Clay later commented on the controversy over his appearance, saying: ''I couldn't get more (publicity) if I took out my penis and wrapped it around a microphone stand.''

Clay bantered with a man sitting in the front row of the audience, asking him about his relationship with his girlfriend. When the men said he was going to marry her, Clay made fun of the women wearing a white dress at her wedding.

Clay said: ''White dress? I broke the bitch when she was 15.''

Though many of the skits during the 90-minute show exploited Clay's swaggering stage demeanor and were laced with sexual references, there were no other controversial incidents.

Some of the skits included references to Dunn's and O'Connor's refusal to appear on the program, including the opening one, which featured mock front pages of New York newspapers with screaming banner headlines about the controversy over Clay.

Activist groups Saturday afternoon held a protest outside the NBC studio against Clay.

About 40 people attended the rally, organized by Rock Against Racism, the Gay and Lesbian Alliance against Defamation and the National Organization for Women, to hear invited speakers and participate in an ''open mike'' session.

''We don't consider his jokes funny. We consider them hurtful,'' GLAAD deputy director Karin Schwartz said. ''They (listeners) should be cringing at the racism and homophobia in Dice Clay's jokes.''

NBC spokeswoman Rosemary Keenan said Dunn's boycott marked the first time that an SNL cast member had decided not to participate in a broadcast because she found some part of it offensive.

Rally organizers said they were appalled that Clay would have a national forum for views they found obscene and dangerous.

Alan Thompson of Rock Against Racism said he didn't believe Clay's assertion that his views are merely a reflection of society.

''People who come to see him, they are living the character,'' he said. ''They are not taking it as a statement on society. They're taking it as a green light to hate other people, to hate anyone who's not exactly like you and your peers.''

Heaton fired a four-hitter over seven innings Saturday night to win his 11th straight decision since last season, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 3-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Heaton, 6-0, hasn't lost a game since last July 21. The 30-year-old left-hander has a 1.57 ERA during the 11-game streak.

He gives credit to the screw-knuckle-change, a pitch he picked up while experimenting during spring training.

''The last couple of years in this league guys knew I was a fastball pitcher,'' Heaton said. ''And now with this other pitch, I can throw down and away, use the fastball. It's a happy in-between instead of coming with the fastball time after time.''

Heaton walked two and struck out three as he equalled his win production for all of last year.

''So far everything is going my way,'' Heaton said. ''The guys are scoring runs for me, our defense played great behind me. The turf was slick out there and they turned some key double plays. That was the key to this game.''

The Pirates completed three double plays to stifle the Astros, who put the leadoff runner aboard in each of the first four innings. The loss was Houston's third straight and sixth of their last seven.

''They are giving us an opportunity to win, but we're just couldn't get the base hit with men on to break it open,'' Houston Manager Art Howe said. ''But that's the way it's going right now. Anyone who's been in this game long enough knows that every team goes through this kind of thing during a season.''

Scott Ruskin pitched the eighth and Ted Power closed the door in the ninth to earn his third save.

Mark Portugal, 1-4, allowed three runs and four hits over 6 1-3 innings, walking six and striking out four. He came close to achieving his fourth loss by shutout.

''They've been swinging hot bats,'' Portugal said of the Pirates, winners of eight of their last 11 outings. ''You just try not to let them beat you in one inning. We're hoping our hitters can put together some hits. Hopefully tomorrow we will.''

Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds drove home a run in the fourth inning, the sixth straight game in which he has an RBI.

--- AROUND THE NL ---

In other National League games Saturday, New York blanked Los Angeles 7-0, San Francisco beat Philadelpia 6-2, Chicago defeated Cincinnati 4-2, San Diego topped Montreal 5-2 and St. Louis outlasted Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings.

In the American League, it was: Baltimore 3, Oakland 2; Chicago 6, Kansas City 3; Minnesota 5, Milwaukee 2; Boston 7, California 1; New York 4, Seattle 1; and Cleveland beat Texas 5-4 in the completion of a suspended game before losing the regular game 2-1. Toronto at Detroit was rained out.

Mets 7, Dodgers 0

At New York, Frank Viola threw a four-hitter to become the major leagues' first seven-game winner as the Mets won their sixth game in their last seven. Viola struck out seven, bringing his season total to 52 and trailing NL leader and teammate Dwight Gooden by one. John Wetteland, 1-3, took the loss as the Dodgers dropped their sixth straight game.

Giants 6, Phillies 2

At Philadelphia, Matt Williams and Will Clark hit three-run home runs to power San Francisco. Scott Garrelts, 1-3, went five innings to pick up his first victory since last Sept. 17. Philadelphia starter Bruce Ruffin, 2-3, gave up three runs and four hits over 5 2-3 innings.

Cubs 4, Reds 2

At Cincinnati, Doug Dascenzo drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double to lift Chicago. Mike Bielecki, 2-3, struck out three and walked one in eight-plus innings, retiring 14 batters in a row at one point. Mitch Williams got the final three outs for his seventh save. Cincinnati starter Tom Browning, 3-3, had a no-hitter before giving up four runs in the seventh.

Padres 5, Expos 2

At San Diego, Bruce Hurst pitched a six-hitter and the Padres banged out 11 hits off four Montreal pitchers. The only runs Hurst, 2-4, allowed were solo homers by Andres Galarraga and Delino DeShields. Montreal starter Zane Smith, 2-3, gave up eight hits and four runs over 5 1-3 innings.

Cardinals 3, Braves 2 (10 innings)

At St. Louis, Todd Zeile walked with the bases loaded in the 10th inning to lift the Cardinals. With Vince Coleman on third, Joe Boever, 0-2, walked Terry Pendleton and Dave Collins intentionally to load the bases before walking Zeile on a 3-2 fastball. Lee Smith, 1-0, pitched two innings in picking up his first win since coming to St. Louis.

BOGOTA, Colombia (MAY 13) UPI - Three car bombs that authorities said were planted by warring cocaine cartels exploded within hours of each other in Bogota and the city of Cali, killing 23 people and wounding more than 200 others.

Two of the bombs exploded in separate shopping areas of the capital at about 4 p.m. The dynamite-rigged vehicles killed at least 16 people and wounded some 180 others, Bogota Mayor Andres Pastrana said.

A third car bomb blew up about five hours later, killing at least seven people and wounding another 25 in Cali, 200 miles southwest of Bogota, radio reports said.

The radio stations reported the car bomb was planted on a street lined with bars and nightclubs in Cali, headquarters for a cocaine cartel that authorities have said is at war with the Medellin Cartel.

''There are five or six or seven dead,'' Ernesto Gonzalez, governor of the Valle of Cauca, the state where Cali is located, told a Bogota radio station.

One of the cars in Bogota, a Dodge Dart loaded with about 130 pounds of dynamite, blew up in the parking lot of the exclusive Niza shopping mall in the northern part of the city.

The second, a Fiat 147 with about 175 pounds of dynamite, went off in a shopping area of the Quirigua neighborhood in northwestern Bogota, destroying a passing bus and killing the driver and a passenger, authorities said.

Police immediately blamed the bombs on cocaine traffickers who have been at war with the nation since last year.

''Undoubtedly these two terrorists actions are by narco-terrorists, who have simultaneously created innocent victims,'' said police Col. Jose Camelo.

At least 32 cars were destroyed in the Niza explosion, while television pictures showed a small, scorched body and the twisted wreckage of a passenger bus at the other bomb location.

Niza is in an upper-class neighborhood of expensive homes and apartments in northern Bogota.

''I felt a strong explosion, a wave knocked me 3 feet ahead, perhaps stunned, I did not know where I was,'' a witness to the Carrulla bomb told RCN. ''I saw a lot of wounded, a lot of blood.''

Five car bombs have exploded in Colombia since April 25, killing nine people. The actions have been blamed on the Medellin cartel, which has been at war with the nation since August.

A police major also was shot and killed Saturday in Bogota, while three police officers were killed Friday night in Medellin. So far, five police officers have been killed in Medellin, where cocaine traffickers have offered a reward for the murder of policemen.

National Police Maj. Miguel Morales was shot about 1 a.m. by two people on a motorcycle, a favorite method of cocaine cartel hitmen, a metropolitan police spokesman said.

Morales was a top-ranking officer in the state of Santander and was in Bogota for a meeting, police said.

Gunmen attacked a police patrol Saturday in Medellin and officers returned fire, killing one of the attackers, the radio network RCN reported.

The cartel, through its hit squad, The Extraditables, has offered a bounty of about $4,200 for each policeman killed. Bogota newspapers say more than 70 officers have been killed this year in or near Medellin, 160 miles northwest of Bogota.

The Extraditables declared war on the nation Aug. 24, 1989, after President Virgilio Barco imposed a state of siege and launched an intense offensive against the cartels.

An army operation in the Amazon jungle area of Colombia south of Bogota led to the discovery of 6 more tons of cocaine ready for shipment. The cache in a storage area protected by a minefields increased to nearly 20 tons the amount of cocaine confiscated in ''Operation Autumn.''

The cocaine was found by soldiers in various storage facilities. It had been collected from laboratories from Colombia and Bolivia and readied for shipment to the United States and Europe, army and police officials said.

''I think that this is one of the biggest blows that has been made in the world (against cocaine traffickers),'' said Gen. Luis Correa, commander of the operation involving some 600 soldiers and the air force.

(MAY 13) UPI - Greg Brock didn't realize he was about to enter the ''uh-oh'' zone.

Brock's three-base error on Gary Gaetti's pop fly in the sixth inning Saturday night, setting up the winning run in the Minnesota Twins' 5-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

With the score tied 2-2, Gaetti lofted a short fly down the right-field line off Mark Knudson, 2-1. First baseman Brock misjudged it. The ball dropped fair and rolled into foul territory as Gaetti raced to third on the miscue. Gene Larkin then stroked a sacrifice fly.

Brock couldn't be found after the game to comment, but others speculated he lost the ball in a dark spot in the notorious Metrodome roof.

And ''uh-oh'' is what the Twins' third baseman would have been saying if he hadn't hustled on what looked to be a routine out.

''Let that be a lesson to all you kids out there,'' Gaetti said. ''Always run out those pop flies. I would have been pretty embarassed if I hadn't have run that one out.''

Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said his team's fielding woes were only partly to blame for the loss.

''Our defense was a little generous, and that cost us the game,'' he said. ''But it was our failure to get the two-out hit that hurt. If we could have gotten one hit in one of those two-out situations, it might have been different.''

Minnesota starter Kevin Tapani, 4-2, gave up 10 hits over six innings, working out of trouble in all but one inning. Rick Aguilera got the final five outs to record his eighth save.

When Tapani faced the Brewers last Sunday in Milwaukee, he hurled a five-hit shutout. He couldn't duplicate the feat, but consistently pitched himself out of jams.

--- AROUND THE AL ---

Elsewhere Saturday in the American League, Baltimore nipped Oakland 3-2, Chicago beat Kansas City 6-3, Boston clobbered California 7-1, New York defeated Seattle 4-1, and Cleveland edged Texas 5-4 in the completion of Friday's suspended game but lost 2-1 in the regular contest. Toronto at Detroit was postponed by rain.

Orioles 3, Athletics 2

At Oakland, Calif., Cal Ripken homered twice, including the game-winner in the ninth inning to help Baltimore snap Oakland's five game winning streak. Ripken homered in the sixth to tie the score, then ripped the first pitch from Gene Nelson, 1-2, for his sixth homer of the year. Mark Williamson, 2-1, earned the win and Gregg Olson pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Indians 5, Rangers 4 (comp. susp. game)

Rangers 2, Indians 1 (regular game)

At Arlington, Texas, Bobby Witt scattered six hits over 8 2-3 innings and Julio Franco banged out three hits to lead Texas to a 2-1 victory. Earlier Felix Fermin singled home Sandy Alomar Jr. in the seventh inning to give the Indians a 5-4 victory in the completion of a game suspended Friday night by heavy rain.

White Sox 6, Royals 3

At Chicago, Melido Perez tossed a three-hitter over 8 2-3 innings and Ivan Calderon highlighted a 15-hit attack for the White Sox. Perez, 3-2, walked two and struck out seven before giving up three unearned runs in the ninth. Scott Radinsky recorded his second save as the White Sox won for the 10th time in their last 14 games. Royals starter Richard Dotson, 0-3, took the loss.

Red Sox 7, Angels 1

At Anaheim, Calif., Luis Rivera stroked a pair of RBI singles to help Boston hand the Angels their ninth loss in their last 10 games. Greg Harris, 4-1, tossed a four-hitter over seven innings for the win. California starter Bert Blyleven, 1-3, gave up three runs and nine hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Yankees 4, Mariners 1

At Seattle, Tim Leary threw a six-hitter and Roberto Kelly delivered a two-run triple to lead the Yankees. Leary, 2-3, struck out eight and walked two on the way to his second complete game of the season. Seattle's only run came on a solo home run by Ken Griffey Jr. with two out in the ninth. Erik Hanson, 3-2, took the loss.

NEW YORK (MAY 13) UPI - The jury considering the fate of the accused ringleader in the Bensonhurst racial killing said it was unable to reach a verdict, but the judge asked jurors to ''have a good sleep and come back'' Sunday.

The jury for Keith Mondello sent a note to Justice Thaddeus Owens shortly after 7 p.m. Saturday saying it had reached a decision on ''some of the counts, but not all of them'' in the trial involving the slaying of 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins.

A group of blacks marched Saturday through the predominantly white Bensonhurst neighborhood where Hawkins died.

The black teenager was shot dead Aug. 23 when he and his friends were confronted by a mob of white youths carrying baseball bats.

Hawkins and three friends went to the predominantly Italian-American Bensonhurst neighborhood to look at a used car. They were mistaken for a group rumored to be coming to the neighborhood looking for a fight.

The Mondello jury and the one deliberating the fate of the accused triggerman in the killing, Joseph Fama, were both due back in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn at noon on Sunday.

Stephen Murphy, the lawyer defending the 19-year-old Mondello, said he was ''pleased'' by the jury's apparent deadlock.

''Some of the jurors are on my side,'' Murphy said. ''It would only be natural that they had acquitted him on the murder charge and are hung up on one of the lesser charges.''

Lead prosecutor James Murphy was philosophical.

''These things happen,'' he said. ''Sometimes they (jurors) work their way out of it.''

The jury for the 19-year-old Fama also failed to reach a verdict Saturday and was dismissed for the night. Jury members asked for Sunday off so they could sleep late, go bowling and possibly see a movie, but Owens denied the requests.

Mondello and Fama were both charged with second-degree murder and manslaughter. They were tried before separate juries because Mondello gave statements to police fingering Fama as the killer.

They are the first of eight young men to be tried for the slaying.

The repeated requests by both juries for definitions of the manslaughter charges seemed to indicate the panels were considering the lesser charges.

Some 350 blacks led by Hawkins' parents marched for about a mile through predominantly white Bensonhurst Saturday. They were met by an equal number of whites, who lined the streets behind police barricades chanting ''Not Guilty!'' and holding signs, including one that read ''Free the boys of Bensonhurst.''

Leading the march were Moses Stewart and Diane Hawkins, parents of the slain 16-year-old. Also at the head of the procession were the Rev. Al Sharpton and lawyer Alton Maddox, both civil rights activists.

The marchers chanted ''Yusuf, Yusuf'' and walked past the spot where the teenager was killed last summer.

A white man, among a group trying to block the march, shouted, ''They can't get along with the Koreans and Italians! Get out of America!''

There were a number of scuffles, mostly between whites and the police, but there were no serious injuries. One person was issued a summons for disorderly conduct, police said.

Sharpton said later that marchers were taunted with the word ''nigger!'' and described the experience as ''the most hostile reception we've ever had.''

Asked if there would be violence following an innocent verdict, Sharpton replied, ''I will hope, but to tell you that the clouds of violence and tension are not there is to tell you a lie.''

BEIRUT, Lebanon (MAY 13) UPI - Rival Christian forces skirmished early Sunday in east Beirut following a fierce battle that killed at least 10 people and wounded 42 others, security sources said.

Sources said a fifth attempt by a mediating committee to arrange a cease-fire agreement between forces of Christian military leader Gen. Michel Aoun and Lebanese Forces militia chief Samir Geagea curbed five hours of heavy fighting Saturday, but did not halt heavy machine-gun fire that was reported all night.

Police said at least eight people were killed and 30 others wounded when the rivals shelled residential areas in the Christian enclave indiscriminately Saturday, touching off dozens of fires that covered the area in a pall of smoke.

Shells also crashed down on residential neighborhoods in the Moslem sector of the capital, killing at least two people and wounding 12 others, police said.

Observers said the struggle between Aoun and Geagea, who have been fighting since Jan. 31 for control of the Christian sector, had entered a brutal new phase with both Christian leaders intent on crushing the other.

Aoun, 54, who has controlled the Christian sector for years, has rejected an Arab League-mediated peace accord that led to the election of Syrian-backed President Elias Hrawi. Geagea, 39, has appeared to accept Hrawi and has moved to oust Aoun from power.

At least 990 people have been killed and 3,700 wounded in the ongoing power struggle.

Observers said Sunday that despite Geagea's powerful assault, Aoun was in a stronger position because he had Geagea's positions under seige.

Earlier this week, Aoun threatened to attack all ships that entered harbors under Geagea's control in an attempt to halt shipments of supplies arms and ammunition to his rival. He also closed all roads linking the Christian sector with the Moslem sectors of the capital, blocking possible aid to Geagea from Moslem sympahthizers.

MANILA, Phillipines (MAY 13) UPI - President Corazon Aquino, on the eve of talks on the future of key U.S. military facilities, ruled out Sunday any shortcut deals on a renewal of American basing rights, vowing to observe difficult procedures outlined in the Philippine Constitution.

''This government shall keep faith with the people and is determined to uphold all constitutional provisions regarding these bases,'' Aquino said in a nationally televised statement.

She said that, upon expiration of the bases pact on Sept. 16, 1991, any new extension should be in the form of a treaty, approved by the Senate and submitted to a plebiscite if necessary as outlined in the constitution.

A majority of the 23-member Senate last year endorsed a resolution calling for the dismantling of the bases, saying they represented a diminution of Philippine sovereignty.

Aquino's statement appeared designed to dispel speculation that she would agree to bypass the Senate and forge an executive arrangement extending the lease on the sprawling Subic Bay Naval Complex, Clark Air Base and four smaller U.S. facilities in the former U.S. colony.

The bases are manned by 40,000 troops, Defense Department employees and dependents and are regarded as vital in projecting American military might all the way to the Middle East.

Philippine Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus and special U.S. negotiator Richard Armitage were to begin exploratory talks on a new basing arrangement Monday at the tightly guarded Central Bank building at the edge of Manila Bay.

''We enter these talks with our national interest as the paramount consideration. Regardless of the outcome, our government has already begun to look beyond the bases,'' Aquino said. She appealed to Filipinos for support in the negotiations.

Aquino said the executive-legislative bases council, created to look into alternative uses of the bases, submitted last Tuesday plans that ''open up possibilities of major contributions to national development.''

''I have given instructions to operationalize portions of the plan which can be implemented immediately, starting with those base areas already reverted to us,'' Aquino said.

Large tracts of base lands were turned over to the Philippines in 1979, but the government has not put them to use.

''We are prepared to look toward opportunities for friendly relations and cooperation with the United States over and above the military facilities '' Aquino said.

Congressman Bonifacio Gillego said he was ''amazed at the change in the tone and tenor'' of Aquino's statement, which he said was a departure from her ''options-open policy.''

''In effect, she is saying there's life after the bases,'' Gillego said.

Some 1,500 Filipinos demanded the dismantling of the bases at a rally Sunday in Manila.

Sen. Wigberto Tanada read a statement during the four-hour rally urging Aquino ''to negotiate a treaty of friendship and cooperation'' with the United States instead of a renewal of basing rights.

The statement was signed by 77 lawmakers, churchmen, professional and civic groups. Tanada said he handed the statement to Aquino Sunday morning.

Under a 1988 agreement, Washington pledged to provide the cash-strapped Manila government $962 million in aid in the last two years of the bases pact.

U.S. officials have ruled out an increase in the compensation package, citing budgetary constraints and competing demands for aid from Eastern Europe and Central America.

Independent surveys last year revealed a majority of Filipinos support a renewal of the bases pact provided the Philippines derived benefits from it. The Philippines is saddled with a $28 billion foreign debt.

NEW YORK (MAY 13) UPI - A USAir jet made an emergency landing at LaGuardia Airport Sunday morning after a fire was discovered in a cooking galley, authorities said.

The Boeing 727 jet landed safely about 8 a.m. at LaGuardia Airport, said Officer Steven Russell, a spokesman for the Port Authority police.

No injuries were reported. It was not immediately known how many passengers were on the plane, or what its flight number or destination was.

The fire had been extinguished by the time the jet landed, Russell said.

No other information on the emergency landing was available.

KHARTOUM, Sudan (MAY 13) UPI - Sudan accused neighboring Chad Sunday of kidnapping an unspecified number of Sudanese and Libyan nationals in a recent cross-border raid and demanded their immediate return.

A Foreign Ministry statement said troops of Chadian President Hissene Habre had crossed into western Sudan and committed an ''aggression with all sorts of looting to property.''

''We call on the Chadian government to release all kidnapped Sudanese and Libyan nationals and to guarantee their safe arrival with their belongings to local authorities in Darfur, western Sudan, and to compensate Sudanese nationals who suffered damage,'' the statement said.

It gave no date for the alleged raid, nor did it explain the reference to Libyan nationals.

Last month, rebels identified by Chad as the ''Islamic Legion,'' which fought for control of the country in the early 1980s, resumed attacks on Chadian troops on the Sudanese border. They drew accusations from Habre's government that both Sudan and Libya - which controlled the Islamic Legion in the past - were funding the fighting, and that the rebels were based in western Sudan.

Both countries denied the charge, and it was not until last week that Sudan conceded that some of the fighting was taking place on its territory. Chadian troops had pursued rebels into Darfur province, 700 miles west of Khartoum, and were disrupting local civilian life, the government said May 9.

Meanwhile, Sudan's refugee commissioner, Brig. Abdul Rahman Siral Khatim, said Sunday about 10,000 people had fled across the border from Chad as a result of the conflict there.

He said the refugees had been moved away from the fighting to camps at Kutum, 145 miles east of the border. Appeals were going out for emergency food and medical aid, he said.

Between 1980 and 1987, Chad and Libya fought an on-and-off war for control of northern Chad, which ended in inconclusive victory for Chad. The Islamic Legion, which moved its camps to western Sudan as early as April 1987, has continued sporadic military action ever since.

HYDERABAD, India (MAY 13) UPI - The death toll from a typhoon that battered Andhra Pradesh state in southern India rose to 373 Sunday as hundreds of relief teams fanned out across the storm-ravaged region distributing food and water to survivors, officials said.

Relief Commissioner C. Arjun Rao said 600 rescue teams handed out some 150,000 packages of food around the state, including the worst-affected Guntur and Krishna districts, about 155 miles southeast of the state capital of Hyderabad.

Authorities also used helicopters to deliver plastic containers of drinking water to coastal areas where wells had been contaminated by seawater, Rao said.

Some 4 million people and 2,500 villages were affected by the typhoon that slammed into the Andhra Pradesh coast Wednesday night, then dissipated as it moved inland, he said.

Rao said that at least 373 people died from weather-related incidents.

Most of the relief work was expected to be completed within the next two weeks, although the rebuilding of homes and other buildings destroyed by the storm will take much longer, Rao said.

It was the worst storm to hit India since a savage typhoon killed more than 10,000 people in Andhra Pradesh in 1977.

Rao said the typhoon badly damaged two power stations in Vijayawada, cutting electrical power to about 5 million people residing in districts around the city, 150 miles southeast of Hyderabad.

The government said at least 1.5 million people were directly affected by floods in seven prosperous districts of the state.

(MAY 13) UPI - Violence is escalating in Colombia. Three car bombs exploded Saturday in Bogota and the city of Cali, killing 22 people and wounding more than 100. Two of the bombs exploded at about the same time in separate shopping areas in Bogota, killing at least 16 people.

Colombian radio says a third car bomb blew up about five hours later in Cali, 200 miles southwest of Bogota. That blast killed at least six people and wounded another 25. Cali is headquarters of a cocaine cartel believed to be at war with the Medellin cartel. Police blame all three attacks on cocaine traffickers.

A West German newspaper says government officials, acting on a tip, intercepted a shipment of equipment apparently headed for an alleged chemical weapons plant in Libya. The report says a West German firm had planned to conceal the shipment's destination by routing it through Saudi Arabia.

ANGELES, Philippines (MAY 13) UPI - Gunmen shot and killed two American servicemen Sunday night as they stepped out of a hotel just outside Clark Air Base, police and witnesses said.

U.S. Air Force Airmen John Raven, 21, and James Green, 22, were about to board a tricycle in front of the Holiday Lodge hotel in Angeles city at 8:20 p.m. when they were shot at close range, police said.

A third American in the group, Airman Ronald Moore, escaped unhurt in the attack in an area known as Liberty City, adjoining Clark 50 miles north of Manila.

Reporters at the scene said Raven and Green remained sprawled on the street in front of the hotel while 49 other American servicemen billeted there requested assistance.

The Americans were participating in the war exercise Cope Thunder. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack.

The killings took place on the eve of exploratory talks on the future of six U.S. military facilities in the Philippines, including Clark and nearby Subic Bay Naval Base. The lease on the facilities expires next year.

U.S. Embassy spokesperson Victoria Middleton declined immediate comment. She said she had not heard about the killings from official sources yet.

On May 4, U.S. Marine Gunnery Sgt. John Fredette was shot and killed outside Subic, 50 miles northwest of Manila. The incident still is under investigation.

Eight Americans have been killed in the Philippines since 1987 in attacks blamed on the communist New People's Army, the 19,000-strong armed wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines. The rebels have been battling the Manila government for 21 years.

The rebel victims have included heavily decorated Vietnam War veteran Col. James ''Nick'' Rowe, who was shot in suburban Manila.

Officials have previously said the rebels have threatened to kill Americans before the bases talks begin.

YAPHANK, NY (MAY 13) UPI - Two bodies and other debris from a small plane that disappeared during a sightseeing trip washed up early Sunday on a Fire Island beach, authorities said.

The debris was first spotted about 8 a.m. off Fire Island, directly opposite Bellport Beach, said Officer Peter Kelly, a Suffolk County police spokesman.

A woman's body was spotted about a half-hour later in shallow water and was taken by police helicopter to the U.S. Coast Guard Station at Robert Moses State Park, he said.

A second body was found floating off the beach within the next hour by a private vessel, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Al Huffman. It was not immediately known whether the second body was that of a man or a woman.

The debris included a gym bag and wreckage from the aircraft, a single-engine white, blue and gold Bellanca BL-26 Viking that took off at noon Saturday from Republic Airport in Farmingdale.

A concerned family member of one of the passengers on board the private plane telephoned authorities when the aircraft was late returning, said Mike Cavanaugh, a spokesman for the Civil Air Patrol.

The plane was carrying about two hours worth of fuel and had been scheduled to land at Republic Airport.

The plane was piloted by Russell Anderson, 52, of Bay Shore, and was carrying one other man and two women, said Officer Donald Yorie, another Suffolk County police spokesman. Anderson, an experienced pilot, was a co-owner of the aircraft.

The plane had apparently taken off for a sightseeing flight around Fire Island off Long Island's south coast, Cavanaugh said.

BEIJING (MAY 13) UPI - Senior Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping made his first public appearance in nearly three months Sunday, meeting with visiting Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and dispelling a new spate of rumors that his health had worsened.

Deng, 85, met with Mubarak for about an hour at the Great Hall of the People Sunday morning before the Egyptian leader left Beijing at the end of a three-day official visit. Mubarak left at midday for the North Korean capital, Pyongyang.

Deng's last public appearance had been on Feb. 17, when he met with Hong Kong officials visiting Beijing. His lengthy absence from public view had set off a fresh round of rumors in recent days that his health had worsened, or that he had died.

A foreign press pool has customarily been included in photo sessions that precede Deng's meetings with visiting leaders, but it was not invited Sunday. An American television crew acting as pool for Mubarak's other meetings was refused entry to the Great Hall.

But Egyptian journalists who attended the photo session, open only to them and Chinese reporters, said Deng appeared in relatively good health and showed no visible infirmities beyond the stiffness and hearing difficulties he is known to suffer.

''He walked unaided, and he spoke with no problem,'' said an Egyptian reporter traveling with Mubarak. ''We didn't see any problems with Mr. Deng.''

The official Xinhua news agency later reported that Deng and Mubarak ''warmly shook hands and hugged each other.''

''Since my retirement, I have not met visitors,'' Deng told Mubarak, according to Xinhua. ''But it is not good for me not to meet a few old friends.''

Deng, who has been China's most powerful man since the late 1970s, retired from his last official post as chairman of the government military commission in March. Although officially retired, he continues to wield vast power.

Chinese President Yang Shangkun, who spoke to reporters Sunday morning at the Beijing airport before leaving for a tour of five Latin American nations, said Deng met with Mubarak ''in his capacity as an old friend.''

Deng ''has enjoyed very good health,'' Yang said, adding it was ''natural to hear very little of him, for he is now retired.''

JERUSALEM (MAY 13) UPI - The right-wing Likud Party worked Sunday to conclude coalition negotiations but party sources said its leader, acting Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, may ask for more time to form Israel's next government.

Israeli daily newspapers reported Sunday that high-ranking Likud sources expected Shamir to ask President Chaim Herzog for an additional 21 days to form a new government. Shamir's first 21-day mandate ends Thursday.

Later Sunday Likud representatives were to meet with leaders of right-wing and religious parties to conclude coalition agreements that will give Shamir's party a majority in the Parliament.

However, the Likud Party wants to postpone a parliamentary vote on the new government until it secures the support of ultra-Orthodox religious party Agudat Israel, the leftist Al Hamishmar reported.

Likud coalition negotiating teams will try this week to convince Agudat Israel, which supports the center-left Labor Party, to abstain during the confidence vote for Shamir's government, Al Hamishmar reported.

To obtain Agudat's backing, Likud sent a letter to one of the party's spiritual leaders, Rabbi Pinhas Menahem Alter. The letter, signed by 22 Likud parliament members, guarantees to uphold all past promises given to Agudat Israel during the 1988 coalition talks.

Shamir also sent a personal letter to Rabbi Alter in which he apologized for Likud's failure to meet the guarantees given to the ultra-religious party in the past, Al Hamishmar reported.

Up to now, Agudat Israel has firmly stood by its commitment to support Labor during chairman Shimon Peres' attempts to form a new coalition. The ultra-religious party has not forgiven the Likud for breaking promises given in the past.

As of Sunday, Shamir had the support of 61 out of the 120 members in the Israeli parliament, the Knesset. Two other religious parties, Shas and Degel Hatorah, with eight Knesset seats, have indicated they will support the Likud coalition but not join in.

''To present a government with unstable support like this will be too big a risk,'' a high-ranking Likud source said.

Together with the difficulties facing the Likud from its potential coalition partners, Shamir reportedly also faced problems from within his own party over the distribution of cabinet posts in the new government.

Hard-line Likud member Ariel Sharon has said he will not join Shamir's government if he does not receive the defense ministry. The Likud is trying to convince Sharon to accept the Immigration Absorption ministry.

The prime minister's office has announced Shamir has not yet made final decisions on the distribution of ministries, and the decision will only be taken after the coalition negotiations are completed.

The 14-month-old Likud-Labor coalition collapsed March 13 because of Shamir's refusal to approve a U.S. formula for holding Palestinian-Israeli talks to advance the peace process. Two days later, Shamir's government fell in a vote of no confidence.

NEW YORK (MAY 13) UPI - About 15 black men shouting ethnic slurs attacked three Vietnamese men who they mistook for Koreans in a racially tense area of Brooklyn Sunday, leaving one seriously injured with a fractured skull, authorities said.

The attack occurred one block from the scene of an emotionally charged protest staged since January by a group of black demonstrators outside two Korean-owned markets in Flatbush.

Protesters, who say store employees beat a Haitian woman, have repeatedly maintained the boycott is aimed only at the owners of the two stores and not at Koreans in general.

Police were investigating the incident as a bias-motivated attack. Mayor David Dinkins, who on Friday called in a televised address for an end to the boycott and pleaded for racial harmony in the city, scheduled an afternoon news conference to discuss the attack.

The three Vietnamese men were sitting in a first-floor apartment about 1:30 a.m. Sunday when a bottle was thrown through the window, said Officer Anthony Mazzola, a police spokesman.

''The men went outside to see what was going on and they were surrounded by about 15 blacks,'' Mazzola said.

The group taunted the three men, whom they mistook for Koreans, with racial and ethnic slurs, Mazzola said.

''As they tried to escape, one of the men was hit on the head with a baseball bat,'' Mazzola said. ''The other two said the men in the group had knives and threw bottles at them as they ran away.''

The injured man, identified as Tuan Ana Cao, 36, was taken to Kings County Hospital, where he was listed in serious but stable condition with a compressed head fracture, officials said.

''He is conscious,'' said Ray Carmen, a hospital spokesman. ''I spoke with him and would say he is in serious but stable condition.''

The two other Vietnamese men were identified by police as Tan Van Nguyen, 34 and Tony Tran, 30. All three live at the apartment in an area heavily populated by Koreans and Vietnamese, Mazzola said.

Dinkins, New York's first black mayor, and Police Commissioner Lee Brown visited the victim in the hospital Sunday morning.

''They spent about 45 minutes at the hospital,'' Carmen said. ''They went directly to the patient and talked to him and then had a staff meeting here.''

NEWTON, MA (MAY 13) UPI - While moms across the country were getting breakfast in bed and other special treatment Sunday, one minister devoted his Mother's Day sermon to women who had no children.

''My major concern is the depression felt by women who can't have children on Mother's Day, and also the women who choose not to have children and the impact Mother's Day has on them,'' said the Rev. Gerald Krick of the First Unitarian Society in suburban Boston.

Krick said many women with no children feel like outcasts during the annual holiday and said, ''My feeling is we should not scorn women who opt not to have children and who don't have children.

''Their right to decide should be respected,'' he said.

The 56-year-old minister said the idea for his sermon came to him several years ago, after he delivered a ''traditional speech on the glories of motherhood.''

''I came back to my office and found a woman in tears,'' Krick said. ''She was deeply depressed and on the verge of suicide because of her inability to have children.''

Despite the theme of her husband's sermon, Mrs. Krick had nothing to worry about Sunday. The minister, the father of two daughters, said his family does celebrate Mother's Day.

NEW YORK (MAY 13) UPI - A bride and groom still in their ceremonial finery were robbed early Sunday by armed thieves who escaped with an estimated $13,000 worth of wedding gifts, police said.

Newlyweds Anthony and Diane Rohr had just left their wedding reception in Brooklyn and were stopped at a traffic light in the Bensonhurst section at 12:10 a.m. when they were approached by two armed men wearing ski masks, said Sgt. Edward Burns, a police spokesman.

The bride and groom were still in their formal clothes, she in a wedding gown and he in a tuxedo.

The thieves demanded the newlyweds' money and then forced them out of their car onto the street, Burns said.

The couple complied, and the thieves jumped into the car, driving off with an estimated $13,000 worth of wedding gifts in cash, checks and merchandise.

The two thieves had apparently been accompanied to the intersection by two other men in a blue Pontiac sedan, Burns said. He said it appeared the robbery had been planned.

''If they're wearing ski masks, you got to think that they had some kind of idea of what they were doing,'' he said.

SEBRING, FL (MAY 13) UPI - An 81-year-old man described by police as ''the world's oldest crack dealer'' has been arrested on cocaine charges for the fifth time in three years.

James Darby was charged with possession of cocaine after authorities said they found a matchbox containing cocaine residue on the bedroom floor of his home.

''He's a good old guy, but he just can't seem to stop,'' Sebring police Chief Robert Baker said. ''He once told us he was just supplementing his Social Security income.''

According to police records, Highlands County sheriff's investigators and Sebring police searched Darby's home Thursday night after receiving a tip that he was in possession of drugs.

Baker says his officers had information that Darby had started dealing cocaine again shortly after his release from prison earlier this year on a cocaine conviction.

Court and police records show Darby has been in and out of jail since 1987 when officers found him sitting outside a Sebring barber shop with 41 packets of crack cocaine in his pocket.

The retired citrus laborer was being held at the Highlands County Jail in lieu of $1,000 bail. Darby, who will be 82 on July 4, faces a maximum of five years in prison if convicted of the latest cocaine charge.

WASHINGTON (MAY 13) UPI - President Bush, who begins a budget summit this week with members of Congress, is ''under no obligation'' to keep his 1988 campaign pledge against raising taxes, White House chief of staff John Sununu said Sunday.

Sununu, appearing on NBC's ''Meet the Press,'' softened his public tone on the thorny budget question following published remarks last week in which he clearly defined the tax dispute along partisan lines by saying the Democrats were welcome to propose new taxes, but Bush would reject the idea.

The budget summit, proposed by Bush, was announced by the White House and congressional leaders with statements stressing there were ''no preconditions,'' including any on the politically sensitive issue of taxes.

Sununu's statements last week, widely perceived as an attempt to mollify conservative Republicans, created such a flap that the White House scrambled to assure Democrats they were not being double-crossed on Bush's pledge to consider all options.

''It's a budget summit, not a tax summit,'' said Sununu, who said the substance of his statements last week was to show the White House would ''look askance'' at a call for new taxes.

''I said everything is on the table and that means there are no preconditions,'' said Sununu of the White House position for the summit, which begins on Tuesday. ''There is no value in assuming any kind of structure coming out.''

When presented with positive figures on the key economic indicators of inflation and unemployment, and asked why Bush would risk his ''Read my lips: no new taxes'' campaign pledge now, Sununu replied: ''There is no obligation to do that.''

There is general bipartisan agreement that the federal deficit is at the root of fiscal 1991 budget mess, that it has grown too large and spending cuts alone cannot reduce it.

Some are worried that fiscal pressures, including the estimated billions it will cost to bail out the nation's troubled savings and loan industry, will drive up interest rates and strain economic growth.

The Bush administration said that it feared the savings and loan bailout could push the deficit for fiscal year 1991 to nearly $100 billion, significantly more than the $65 billion targeted under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law.

Appearing on ''ABC's This Week with David Brinkley,'' Richard Darman, director of the Office of Managment and Budget, said earlier administration deficit forecasts would have to be adjusted by lower than expected corporate profits, higher interest rates and the S&L crisis, which ''threatens to simply explode in terms of its effect on the deficit.''

Sununu said the budget problem is, to a large extent, the fault of Democratic-controlled Congress.

''The system is in a rut. ... It is important to break the logjam in Congress,'' said Sununu in an apparent effort to deflect the issue from the White House and push for reforms in how Congress and the administration craft a federal budget.

Responding to Sununu's remarks on CBS's ''Face the Nation,'' House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said, ''I don't think (criticizing Congress) serves any good purpose.''

There has been partisan bashing on who might propose new taxes during the budget summit, particularly as midterm elections are just around the corner. Panetta said if the meetings are governed by that criteria, ''the discussions will not get anywhere''

''We have to enter these discussions with a degree of trust,'' Panetta said. ''Enter them in good faith on the basis of no preconditions, on the basis that we can achieve an answer.''

For the summit, Darman said he hoped for ''a significant bipartisan agreement that would reduce this deficit.''

''I would say being realistic somewhere in the $45 to $55 billion range,'' he said. Darman said it would not be ''sensible'' for negotiators to work on a plan to cut $100 billion all at once.

WASHINGTON (MAY 13) UPI - Simcha Dinitz, head of the Jewish Agency, said that stupidity on all sides is the great danger in the current difficult period in U.S.-Israeli relations.

Dinitz, a former Israeli ambassador to the United States and now head of the agency that is responsible for absorbing Soviet immigrants into Israeli society, said in an interview with United Press International on Friday that the damage to relations is not permanent, but the situation could get out of control.

On the Israeli side, he said that the takeover by Jewish settlers of St. John's Hospice in East Jerusalem was ''an act of stupidity.'' He said it was almost universally condemned inside Israel and by American Jews.

The State Department also condemned the takeover, which was subsidized secretly by the Israeli government, as an action that was ''insensitive and provocative.'' Dinitz said the Israeli government didn't know about the settlement, but it should have - ''It was stupid.''

He feared an equally stupid act by the U.S. government - questioning Israeli sovereignty in Jerusalem as a result of the St. John's Hospice incident - could make the current damage to U.S.-Israeli relations deep and lasting.

He said, ''Every country has its panic button. Israel's is Jerusalem.''

By discussing with Arab countries the possibility of a United Nations Security Council resolution which would condemn Israeli settlements in all of Jerusalem, he said, the United States runs the risk of uniting ''everyone in Israel, from the most dovish to the most hawkish, from (Jerusalem mayor) Teddy Kollek to (former defense minister) Ariel Sharon on something that is totally unacceptable to Jews in Israel or the United States: giving up Jerusalem.''

Negotiations on the Arab resolution were suspended because of American reservations over wording that would have declared the Israeli settlements in violation of international law, but Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens protested to the American ambassador over the issue.

Dinitz said the American actions in the incident ''run the risk of offending both sides, and in 30 years of being a diplomat, I learned that is the one thing you don't do.''

He said the mistakes on both sides have confused the issue of sovereignty of Jerusalem with the questions raised by the current unprecedented wave of Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel. Last month, he said, 10,500 Soviet Jews arrived in Israel and it appears that the total, for Soviet Jews alone, this year will be over 100,000.

Israel has a total population of about 4.2 million so the increase in Israeli population would be equivalent, proportionally, to the U.S. population increasing by about 6 million immigrants every year.

Dinitz said, ''This immigration will bring about peace.''

As long as the new immigrants don't settle in the occupied West Bank and Gaza, he said, the Arabs are wrong to oppose the general flow.

''You can't have peace without negotiation, but you can't have negotiation without give-and-take. The new population will enhance our feelings of security, which will increase Israeli ability to make concessions in the negotiations,'' Dinitz said.

''If they want coexistence,'' Dinitz said, ''the Arabs should bless this emigration. But if they think of throwing us into the sea, they won't.''

A continuing disagreement between the Israelis, on one hand, and the Arabs and the United States, on the other, is whether the Israeli definition of Jerusalem will permit the Israelis to settle large parts of what used to be the West Bank.

The Israelis included about 25,000 acres of land around the 900 acres of the Old City of Jerusalem when they annexed the area in 1967. The annexation is not recognized by any other government.

In the interview, Dinitz said the U.S. government was wrong to raise the issue of Jerusalem.

But a U.S. official said that it was the Israeli government, in the form of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's call in March for a ''big Israel'' that aroused anxieties in the Arab world and within the U.S. government about the future.

Dinitz and Shamir said the proportion of new immigrants in the occupied territores would be about one-half of 1 percent of the new arrivals. But, U.S. officials, including those areas annexed as Jerusalem by Israel in 1967 believe the real proportion is about 10 percent of the new immigrants being settled in territories considered occupied.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (MAY 13) UPI - Hundreds of civilians affected by the U.S. invasion of Panama last December have run into obstacles as they seek compensation from the U.S. government for their losses, lawyers and U.S. officials say.

More than 800 claims have been filed at the U.S. Army Claims Service in Panama by civilians who were injured, lost property or whose family members were killed during the invasion that began Dec. 20.

Most of these losses, however, are considered an inevitable reality of war and are not covered under the U.S. Foreign Claims Act, according to the U.S. Army.

''We're speaking of innocents who were simply unlucky enough to have been caught in the crossfire of that invasion,'' said John Kiyonaga who, along with fellow lawyer Michael Pierce, represent 125 Panamanians seeking compensation from the United States.

A pending $420 million U.S. aid package for Panama does not include direct relief for these victims. The aid is part of a $2.3 billion emergency spending bill that has been passed in differing versions by both the House and Senate. House and Senate negotiators were to meet Monday to try to reach an agreement on the bill.

Kiyonaga said Washington has a moral obligation to compensate victims. He said invasion planners clearly anticipated numerous civilian casualties because the main target, the headquarters of former military ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega, was in a densely populated Panama City slum.

Eriberto Pitti, 39, was working as a baggage handler at Tocumen Airport, 17 miles east of Panama City, when he was killed by gunfire from U.S. troops as the invasion began. He is survived by his wife and two teenage daughters who are seeking compensation.

''A lot of innocent people died,'' said Marco Antonio Pitti, Eriberto's brother.

The U.S. Southern Command has said 202 Panamanian civilians were killed in the invasion, some by U.S. troops, some by Panamanian troops and most in crossfire. Most church and human rights groups say between 300 and 600 were killed and more than 3,000 civilians wounded. Also killed were 314 Panamanian military personnel, 23 U.S. troops and three American civilians.

The U.S. government compensated a few civilian victims of the 1983 invasion of Grenada through a $196 million fund administered by the Army Claims Service. Kiyonaga said a similar arrangement should be made in Panama.

Compensation for Grenada, however, was a political goodwill gesture by the Reagan administration rather than a legal requirement, according to Lt. Col. Jim Russell, an Army staff judge advocate.

Among the 846 cases filed at the Army Claims Service following the Panama invasion, Russell said most are combat-related and therefore not covered under the Foreign Claims Act.

Russell heads a six-member Army team that investigates claims and said deaths and injuries caused by gross negligence on the part of U.S. troops would be compensated.

For instance, Russell said the Claims Service plans to compensate the family of a 50-year-old Panamanian woman gunned down by U.S. soldiers on Jan. 25. The Army has filed murder charges against the two soldiers involved in the killing.

''These are tough calls,'' Russell said. ''When it looks like it (force) is uncalled for, we will pay the claim.''

Russell speculated that the Bush administration, instead of paying direct compensation, has chosen to let the Panamanian government address the issue through the $420 million aid package.

Kiyonaga said Bush administration officials and legislators left compensation funds out of the package in an effort to gain quick passage of the aid bill and to avoid publicity over civilian casualties.

Most of the package is programmed for repaying international debt, funding a jobs program and providing business loans, Kiyonaga said.

''No part of that money is designated to the actual victims,'' he said.

Part of an earlier $42 million U.S. aid package for Panama was earmarked for the rebuilding of homes destroyed in the invasion.

A spokeswoman for Panamanian President Guillermo Endara said the pending aid package does not include money to compensate invasion victims.

ANNAPOLIS, MD (MAY 13) UPI - Recent incidents involving testing and grading at the U.S. Naval Academy have led some faculty members to protest what they see as a drop in standards at the 145-year-old institution, a published report said Sunday.

''We think this is a national scandal,'' the Baltimore Sun quoted one unidentified professor as saying. ''We are not willing to give passing grades to people who are failing our courses.''

Last week, academy officials insisted that a final exam in an electrical engineering course be given, without changes, despite the fact that the test may have been compromised by break-ins at two faculty offices.

Three months ago, the chairman of the electrical engineering department was demoted after he apparently refused to raise the grades of a third-year midshipman enrolled in one of the department's courses.

A number of faculty members, who spoke to the Sun on the condition they remain anonymous, questioned whether the academy is adequately preparing officers for an increasingly high-tech Navy.

''Some midshipmen can't hack the course any more,'' said one veteran faculty member. ''So instead they are saying, 'Let's alter the course.'''

The professors say the problems began last year when an abnormally high number of third-year students received Ds or Fs after the first portion of a two-semester electrical engineering course required of non-engineering majors.

After that, the professors said, the administration blamed the department and began to pressure apply pressure to raise grades.

In February, the academic dean and provost, Robert Shapiro, removed Ralph Santoro, 53, as head of the electrical engineering department. Santoro had been at the academy for 25 years.

Santoro said he was removed from the chairmanship because he would not raise interim grades by almost a half a grade.

On the issue of the break-in, the same professors said the administration's decision not to authorize a new test was disconcerting.

''We were shocked and caught off guard that a compromised exam would be given,'' one of the faculty members said. ''Even if only one person was involved, why take a chance?''

The Naval Investigation Service is looking into the break-ins.

Academy officials have said nothing appeared to be taken in the break-ins, so the decision was made to go ahead with the exam.

WASHINGTON (MAY 13) UPI - Black leaders head to Capitol Hill to express their concern over what they say is the Democratic Party's ''gutlessness'' on an issue of importance to black Americans - U.S. covert aid to the rebels in Angola.

A delegation of black leaders was scheduled Monday to meet on the issue with Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California and Senate President Pro Tem Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

Randall Robinson, executive director of the TransAfrica lobbying group and a delegation member, said the group is seeking U.S. recognition of the Angolan government and end to the covert military support for Jonas Savimbi's Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA.

In an interview, Robinson said the talks were part of a continuing campaign against aid to the rebels that has already included a meeting with Secretary of State James Baker and could include acts of civil disobedience.

Robinson, accusing UNITA of human rights violations, said hundreds of thousands of people have been killed in the Angolan civil war and the southern African nation now has the world's largest per capita population of amputees.

''We, as a nation, have to bear a large responsibility for so much of the devastation of that country,'' he said. ''American policy is deplorable and indefensible. ... It is a stinging insult to African Americans.''

Robinson said Democratic leaders ''have to accept a great deal of responsiblity for the flow of arms'' because they have controlled Congress at a time when aid for UNITA was being approved.

Robinson estimated Savimbi's forces are receiving about $80 million a year in military aid from the United States. The actual figure is classified.

''It is an issue over which the right wing has had complete control for a long time,'' Robinson said. ''To some extent, this reflects the gutlessness of House and Senate Democrats who capitulated to the right wing.''

The United States has considered Savimbi to be an anti-communist freedom fighter waging war against a leftist government backed by the Soviet Union and propped up by 35,000 Cuban troops.

But Robinson said the Cubans are leaving ahead of schedule, Soviet support is diminishing and Angola is moving toward a market economy. He said U.S. policy toward Angola should be the same as that toward the nations of Eastern Europe.

''There is an enourmous difference between the way we are responding to Eastern Europe and Angola, and the distinction between the two can only be race,'' he said.

''If this were a European country, we wouldn't be behaving this way.''

In addition to Robinson, the delegation was to include Richard Hatcher, former mayor of Gary, Ind.; Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and Dorothy Height, president of the National Council of Negro Women.

NEW YORK (MAY 13) UPI - The judge in the Bensonhurst racial slaying trial warned a defense lawyer Sunday not to speculate in public on a possible acquittal as twin juries marked their fifth and sixth days in deliberations.

State Supreme Court Justice Thaddeus Owens chided Stephen Murphy, the attorney for Keith Mondello, 19, for saying his client might be acquitted of the most serious charges after the jury deciding his case announced it had reached an impasse.

''You know there are people outside demonstrating against acquittal,'' Owens said. ''You just add fuel to the fire.''

Murphy had said Saturday he was ''pleased'' when the Mondello jury, one of two panels hearing the Bensonhurst case, told Owens that it had reached an impasse. Owens dismissed the jury for the night and asked them to try again Sunday to reach a verdict.

Mondello and Joseph Fama, 19, the alleged triggerman, are the first two young men to go on trial for the Aug. 23, 1989, mob attack in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn in which 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins was fatally shot.

The black teenager was shot dead when he and his friends were confronted by a mob of white youths carrying baseball bats.

Both defendants are charged with second-degree murder, manslaughter and other less serious counts. The Mondello jury began deliberations Tuesday, and the Fama jury a day later.

Mondello and Fama were were tried before separate juries because Mondello gave statements to police fingering Fama as the killer. They are the first of eight defendants to be tried for the slaying.

The Mondello jury asked Sunday for a definition of the charge of discrimination, one of the least serious charges. In Saturday's note, jurors wrote that they had reached a decision on ''some of the counts, but not all of them.''

The jury in Fama's case listened Sunday to a re-reading of testimony from prosecution witness Frank Tighe, 20, a neighborhood buddy of Fama's with a history of mental problems and hallucinations.

Some 350 blacks marched for about a mile through predominantly white Bensonhurst Saturday. They were met by about an equal number of whites, who lined the streets behind police barricades chanting ''Not Guilty!'' and holding signs, including one that read ''Free the boys of Bensonhurst.''

Leading the march were Moses Stewart and Diane Hawkins, the parents of Yusuf Hawkins. Also at the head of the procession were the Rev. Al Sharpton and lawyer Alton Maddox, both community organizers.

The marchers chanted ''Yusuf, Yusuf'' and walked past the spot where the teenager was killed last summer.

There were a number of scuffles, mostly between whites and the police, but no serious injuries. One person was issued a summons for disorderly conduct, police said.

Sharpton said later that marchers were taunted with the cry ''Nigger!'' and described the experience as ''the most hostile reception we've ever had.''

Asked if there would be violence if there was an innocent verdict, Sharpton replied, ''I will hope, but to tell you that the clouds of violence and tension are not there is to tell you a lie.''

About 300 protesters - some arriving in buses - later chanted in front of the courthouse.

(MAY 13) UPI - Floodwaters continued to rage along rain-swollen rivers in Texas and Arkansas Sunday, swamping farmland and residential areas, forcing hundreds more from their homes and stranding starving cattle on isolated patches of high ground.

In southeast Texas, floodwaters from the Trinity and Red Rivers roared toward the Lake Livingston dam as authorities inspected levees and prepared for serious flooding about 50 miles north of Houston sometime this week.

The flood waters threatening the region resulted from days of torrential rain that inundated north Texas, gorging the Trinity River and flooding homes in the Dallas area.

Authorities inspected levees along the swollen Red River in the Texarkana area, making sure the barriers held against floodwaters that have killed at least 12 people in north Texas and Oklahoma during the past two weeks. As many as 250 volunteers have filled sandbags to build up the levees, officials said.

John Jadrosich, a spokesman for the Trinity River Authority, said Sunday the Lake Livingston dam's gates were about ''a third of the way open.''

''It's a tremendous rush of water, just a tremendous roar,'' he said. ''You get the sense of the absolute tremendous power that the water represents. In its own perverse way, it's just beautiful.''

Jim Mitchum, an emergency management director in Liberty County, Texas, said many of the nearly 7,000 people who live in the low-lying river areas have left their homes and are staying with with friends or relatives.

''Those 7,000 will be affected in some way, but not all those people will have water in their homes,'' Mitchum said Sunday. ''Some of those people will see water over the roads in their area.''

Federal Emergency Management Agency officials Saturday added Liberty and three other Texas counties to the list of declared disaster areas. Ed Laundy, FEMA's state coordinating officer, said Jones, Somervell, Taylor and Liberty will be eligible for state and federal assistance in recovering from damage caused by the storms and flooding. The four counties join 25 others that were previously declared disaster areas.

In Dallas, some residents returning home after flooding from the Trinity River subsided there reported dead fish caked to their walls and a horrible stench to match. Others found crawfish on their rugs, mud on their walls and dead animals outside their homes and in the alley.

In Lafayette County in the southwest tip of Arkansas, many residents left their homes Sunday as floodwaters from the Red River continued to pose a threat. Residents remained out of their homes in Hampsted and Little River counties, said Gary Talley, spokesman for the state Office of Emergency Service.

''My husband, he went fishing yesterday, and he said there was still cows up on the levee that hadn't been fed for days,'' said Naomi Griffiths of Ashdown, Ark., who said it was impossible to drive in the area because highways were flooded up to the road signs. ''It's the worst I've seen. ... I've never seen it like this before.

Talley said the Red River crested at 34 1/2 feet at Garland Sunday and it was expected to crest at 34.7 feet later in the day or on Monday at Spring Break. He said the Red has fallen about one-half foot from its flat crest in Fulton and continued to fall slowly.

''We won't be out of the woods for another three to four days,'' Talley said Sunday. He said flooding continued Sunday in Springhill and Fulton, Ark.

Talley said a National Guard helicopter would continue dropping hay to flood-marooned livestock along the Red River near Fulton until Monday. At least 18,500 head of cattle were stranded in Little River and Miller counties.

''Some cattle are planning to be moved,'' he said. ''We used dynamite to blast trees uprooted in the river to clear the way to enable the barge to assist in feeding and in cattle evacuation.''

Late Sunday morning, the Red River at Shreveport, La., was at 33 feet, 3 inches, above flood stage, and was expected to crest late Tuesday at its highest level since 1945, the National Weather Service said.

Major flooding continued from Pecan Point, Okla., downstream to the Arkansas-Louisiana border. Hundreds of thousands of acres of farmland remained under water and hundreds of thousands of acres of farmland will be affected in Louisiana over the next two weeks, the NWS said.

There appears to be little progress in jury deliberations in the trial of two Brooklyn teen-agers charged in the August slaying of a black teen-ager. Mondello and Joseph Fama are charged with the slaying of 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins.

TUNIS, Tunisia (MAY 13) UPI - President Zine el Abidine Ben Ali leaves Monday for an official visit to the United States, where he is expected to discuss the Middle East peace process with President Bush.

The two are also expected to discuss the current situation in the Maghreb countries of North Africa - Tunisia, Algeria, and Morocco - especially the rising Islamic tide in Algeria, according to diplomatic sources.

Presidents Bush and Ben Ali met in Washington last November when the Tunisian leader was in the United States to attend the annual session of the United Nations General Assembly.

''This visit will not fail to confirm the excellent bilateral relations based on mutual respect and the common attachment to liberty and peace that have always existed between Tunisia and the United States,'' the official Tunisian press agency Afrique Presse wrote Sunday.

Diplomatic sources in Tunis said President Ben Ali is expected to ask for increased U.S. aid for his country, as well as additional private American investment and trade.

Tunisia would also like to discuss its $6 billion debt, which represents 57 percent of its gross domestic product.

Before leaving for Washington President Ben Ali met Sunday with former President Habib Bourguiba, who maintained close relations with Washington during the 30 years he ruled Tunisia.

Citing the president's poor health, Ben Ali overthrew Bourguiba, 87, on Nov. 7, 1987. The meeting Sunday was the first between the two since the coup.

Washington was at first concerned that Bourguiba's overthrow would lead to closer relations between Tunisia and Lybian leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi. While Tunisia has strengthened relations with its Arab neighbors, including Libya, Tunis has also maintained its distance from Tripoli, diplomats said.

The recently formed ''Arab Maghreb Union'', for example, has decided to accentuate economic integration, and not the political integration among its members as Gadhafi had hoped. Ben Ali is the current president of the union.

President Ben Ali has also embarked Tunisia on a careful democratization process that has thus far avoided the emergence of a strong Islamic current as has happened in neighboring Algeria.

The government has also begun to liberalize the economy and has passed a series of laws to encourage and protect foreign investment.

The Middle East peace process was expected to take up a large part of the bilateral talks with President Bush.

President Ben Ali met Saturday with Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, whose organization is headquatered in Tunis. Following the meeting Arafat called the Tunisian leader ''the best interpreter of the opinions and points of view of the PLO and the Palestinian people.''

SEATTLE (MAY 13) UPI - A fired middle manager for Exxon Corp. said it was common for company officials to receive gifts in return for favoritism in granting lucrative boat-charter contracts during the cleanup of the Exxon Valdez oil spill in Anchorage, a Seattle newspaper reported Sunday.

A copyrighted story in The Seattle Times said Bill Alexander of Baton, Rouge, La., was fired last month for receiving gifts during the early days of the 11 million-gallon cleanup effort in Alaska.

Alexander said the practice of trading contracts for favors was widespread when the company was spending millions of dollars to hire fishing boats and other vessels to help clean up oil and haul supplies and workers.

Exxon spokesman Jan Cool denied there was widespread gift-giving, saying if more people had been involved there would have been more repercussions.

Alexander said he was singled out because he was candid when questioned during a secret, internal investigation.

''I owned up. I cooperated fully with the investigation. I told them what I knew and maybe others didn't,'' Alexander was quoted as saying.

Alexander, 42, a 15-year Exxon employee, was marine contract administrator for Exxon. He was given the job three days after the March 1989 grounding of the oil tanker and helped approve boat-chartering contracts for the company.

During last spring and summer, the company chartered hundreds of vessels to help clean up the spill in Prince William Sound. Exxon chartered boats ranging from small, local fishing vessels for $1,000 or more per day to a 350-foot factory ship chartered for 1480,000 per month.

Dennis Kelso, director of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation, told the paper he was not surprised by Alexander's firing on April 10.

''We hear rumors of kickbacks around Valdez,'' Kelso said, ''but I have no direct knowledge. It's too bad; you hope that kind of thing isn't going on.''

Jim Lewis, Exxon's internal audit supervisor in Anchorage, said the company investigation began with a much broader audit of the company's business in Valdez.

Lewis said his probe focused on gift-giving when an Exxon contractor told him he had overheard a conversation early this year that indicated ''some fishermen and other boat owners had received priority assignment of their boats'' without justification.

Lewis wouldn't disclose whether Alexander or others received favors from boat owners, saying only that he submitted a summary report of his investigation of Alexander to Exxon Shipping Co. President Gus Elmer last month.

Alexander said gifts, such as merchandise and fishing and hunting trips, were ''pretty flagrant for quite a while,'' especially during the disorganized early days of the cleanup. He said the practice tapered off and rules became more rigid later on, the paper reported.

VILNIUS, Lithuania, U.S.S.R. (MAY 13) UPI - The leaders of the three Baltic states have asked Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to hold joint talks with them and negotiate the terms of secession on a regional basis, Lithuania's president said Sunday.

The three Baltic presidents also sent letters appealing to Gorbachev and President Bush to recognize their republics' independence proclamations of the past two months.

Lithuanian leader Vytautas Landsbergis said a separate telegram to Gorbachev asked for joint talks at a site and time to be determined by the Soviet leader, who has demanded that the three defiant republics annul their declarations of independence as the price for negotiations with Moscow.

''Until the Baltic issue is resolved, the Second World War is not over because the three Baltic countries are still victims of the war,'' Landsbergis told reporters after returning to his capital from their historic Baltic summit in Tallinn.

Lithuania, the first of the tiny northern republics to declare independence, also reported a breakthrough in its bid to stop Moscow's economic blockade.

Minister of Industry Rimvidas Jasinavicius said a tanker carrying 80,000 tons of oil bought by Lithuanian-Americans - the first shipment of foreign oil since the blockade began - was headed for the Lithuanian port of Klaipeda and would arrive soon.

Klaipeda, a mainly Russian city of 200,000 people, is a major Soviet port that until recently was closed to foreigners.

He said the oil was bought on the world market for $19 a barrel, mainly with donations from Lithuanian-Americans, but he declined to say where it was purchased, under which flag the tanker was sailing or exactly when the vessel was expected to arrive in Klaipeda.

There was no immediate indication from Moscow whether Soviet officials would allow the tanker to dock and unload its cargo.

Landsbergis said he and Presidents Arnold Ruutel of Estonia and Anatolijs Gorbunovs of Latvia had sent Gorbachev a telegram urging multilateral talks.

''It is very important to coordinate the foreign policy of the three states, and one of the first steps is the appeal by the Council of Baltic States to the Council of Europe, and the telegram sent to Gorbachev,'' Landsbergis said.

With the Baltic republics intensifying their campaign to end a half-century of Soviet rule, Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene returned to Vilnius after a two-week trip to the West. While abroad, she met with President Bush and the leaders of Canada, Britain, France, and West Germany.

At the momentous summit Saturday, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia renewed a 1934 regional treaty on mutual cooperation, suspended in the Soviet Union's 1940 annexation of the three states. They created a Council of Baltic States ''to assist in the full restoration of state independence of the three republics.''

Landsbergis said the Baltic republics ''do not have any problems,'' but his vice president, Bronius Kuzmickas, acknowledged:

''There are some differences in our approaches, but this (Baltic council), I hope, will help resolve some of these differences.''

In Lithuania's bid to maintain its diplomatic counteroffensive, Foreign Minister Algirdas Saubargas planned to meet with his Belgian counterpart at a European Parliament session beginning Tuesday in Strasbourg, France, said his deputy, Valdemaras Katkus.

The foreign oil delivery would be the first to Lithuania since Gorbachev cut off crude oil shipments and supplies of most other raw materials last month to pressure the republic into rescinding its March 11 independence proclamation.

''The first stage of the blockade is over,'' Jasinavicius said. ''The blitzkrieg has failed.''

Jasinavicius said the Kleipeda port currently can receive only 1500 tons of oil a day, and that Lithuania has begun an expansion project to increase its daily capacity to 11,000 tons.

The defiant Baltic government has set a goal of meeting 15 percent of its oil needs by developing local production, 15 percent through direct contacts it claims to be establishing with other Soviet republics, and 15 percent from abroad, with reduced consumption compensating for the rest of the slack, Jasinavicius said.

In southeast Texas, floodwaters from the Trinity and Red Rivers roared toward the Lake Livingston Dam as authorities inspected levees and prepared for serious flooding about 50 miles north of Houston sometime next week.

The surging waters have forced many of the nearly seven-thousand people who live in the low-lying river areas to flee their homes.

In Lafayette County in the southwest tip of Arkansas, many residents have evacuated as floodwaters from the Red River continue to threaten.

Texas National Guard helicopters will continue to drop hay to flood-marooned cattle along the Red River near Fulton through tomorrow. Nearly 20-thousand head of cattle are reported stranded in Little River and Miller counties.

Although an emergency spokesman reports that the Red River is falling... he admits that the area will ''NOT be out of the woods for another three to four days.''

(MAY 13) UPI - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl is blaming the defeat of his conservative Christian Democrats in key elections today on what he calls a ''campaign of fear'' about re-unification.

The man convicted two years ago of being the Nazi camp guard ''Ivan the Terrible'' goes to Israel's highest court tomorrow to try and clear his name. John Demjanjuk was sentenced to hang for killing thousands of Jews at a death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland. The retired U-S autoworker says he'll introduce new evidence which proves prosecutors got the wrong man.

Four men were arrested today on a Mohawk reservation on the New York-Canadian border and questioned in the death of a tribe member during a gun fight over proposed casino gambling. Quebec police say the four were arrested in a raid in the St. Regis Indian Reservation. The four are being investigated in the death of one of two men killed in a dispute earlier this month.

(MAY 13) UPI - More people are reporting getting robbed, but fewer houses are being broken into. A preliminary report by the Justice Department indicates that robbery was up 21 percent and burglary down nine percent last year. The bureau said some of the increase for robbery may be attributable to population growth. The bureau added that overall crime ''remained relatively stable.''

A new U-N study says that Eastern Europeans are NOT having as many babies as they used to, possibly because they're worried about the future. The U-N Population agency reports the region's low birth rate may be linked to growing pessimism about the economy and an environment ruined by former regimes. The grim outlook, researchers say, is due to- quoting here- ''polluted air and poisoned water, vanishing forests and crumbling towns.''

Alan Parker's ''Come See The Paradise'' today became the Cannes Film Festival's first major critical hit. The positive reception positions the movie as a leading contender for the Palme d'Or award given to the best film shown at the extravaganza in France. Parker's last release was the controversial ''Mississippi Burning.'' His new picture tells the story of trade union activists during World War Two.

(MAY 13) UPI - Two American servicemen slain in the Philippines... Democrats want President Bush to speak up on taxes... and Americans honor mothers with brunches and telephone calls. These stories, up next, from U-P-I...

NO one has claimed responsibility for today's slaying of two American servicemen in the Philippines... but Philippine police blame the attack on Communist guerrillas.

Three youths gunned down the servicemen outside Clark Air Base... 50 miles north of Manila... as the Americans were about to board a motorized tricycle. A third American, Airman Ronald Moore, escaped UNharmed.

U-S officials declined to identify the victims, but Philippine police say they were U-S Air Force Airmen John Raven and James Green. Police say Raven and Green were assigned to a squadron in South Korea and were on temporary duty in the Philippines.

American authorities have indefinitely cancelled all leave and liberty for U-S military personnel on the islands... and have restricted all NON-essential off-base travel.

The slayings occurred on the eve of critical talks to decide the future of U-S military facilities in the Philippines.

Communist rebels had threatened to kill Americans before the talks to dramatize their opposition to the U-S bases in the Philippines.

(MAY 13) UPI - The leaders of the Soviet Union's three Baltic states want Soviet President Gorbachev to hold joint talks with them.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis says he and the other leaders have asked Gorbachev to sit down with them and negotiate the terms of seccession on a regional basis.

Landsbergis says a site and time for the talks would be decided by Gorbachev. He says the Baltic states are still victims of World War Two until this issue is resolved.

The presidents also sent letters to Gorbachev and President Bush urging them to recognize their republics' indepedence proclamations.

Lithuanian officials also report the first breakthrough in Moscow's economic blockade of the territority. They say a tanker carrying 800-thousand tons of oil bought by Lithuanian-Americans was headed for a Lithuanian port and would arrive soon.

But there was NO word from Moscow on whether the tanker would be allowed to dock and UNload its cargo.

Democrats and Republicans, preparing for Tuesday's budget summit with President Bush, are fighting about who will draw the short straw to propose new taxes.

Democrats want Bush to do it and Republicans want Congress to raise the issue.

Bush proposed the summit, but has maintained a low profile on the tax issue as he is haunted by his ''read my lips... no new taxes'' campaign pledge.

But Democrats preparing for November elections doN'T want voters to blame them for a new tax package.

They want Bush to specifically ''outline'' the mechanics of the soaring U-S deficit to the American public and offer a plan on what he'll do to solve it.

Observers expect the hot potato will get passed around on Tuesday.

Office of Management and Budget director Richard Darmen says in an interview that ''the president could start with a moment of silence and it could turn into an hour-and-a-half.''

(MAY 13) UPI - Most celebrate Mother's Day by taking mom out for a nice meal or buying her flatware, but NOT Evangeline Briley.

The co-founder of Prison Lobby International and her three daughters today passed out flowers to women entering and leaving the Central Prison in Raleigh, North Carolina.

Briley says her prison advocacy group supports women related to convicts in maximum-security cells.

Her own husband was executed in April 1985 for murder and she was left to raise three daughters on her own.

As Briley puts it- ''prison mothers are the most forgotten and unappreciated women in America.''

A-T-and-T is predicting this Mother's Day will register a record-breaking number of long-distance telephone calls. The company expects to connect 53-Million calls, breaking last year's all-time record set on Mother's Day.

There's been NO relief from floodwaters raging in Texas and Arkansas... swamping farmland and residential areas and forcing hundreds of people from their homes.

Authorities are preparing for serious flooding about 50 miles north of Houston this week by inspecting levees as the swollen Trinity and Red Rivers rushed toward the Lake Livingston dam.

As many as 200 volunteers worked to fill sandbags that would be used to build a barrier against the advancing water.

Officials say many of the seven-thousand residents in the low-lying areas along the rivers have already evacuated their homes.

Some people were allowed to return to their homes in Dallas, where damage ranged from dead fish in their homes and a terrible stench to severe water damage.

People areN'T the only ones suffering from the flood. There are reports of numerous starving cattle being stranded on isolated patches of high ground.

(MAY 13) UPI - Black leaders will go to Capitol Hill tomorrow to try to persuade Democratic leaders to withdraw their support of a policy providing covert aid to rebels in Angola.

The TransAfrica lobbying group says it wants U-S recognition of the Angolan government and an end to covert military support for UNITA rebels.

Executive director Randall Robinson says the talks are part of a continuing campaign against aid to the rebels that has already included a meeting with Secretary of State Baker and could include acts of civil disobedience.

Thousands of people have been killed in the Angolan civil war and the southern African nation now has the world's largest per capita population of amputees.

Robinson says the United States must- in his words- ''bear a large responsibility for so much of the devastation'' of Angola. And, he says, Democratic leaders must accept a good-sized portion of the blame since they controlled Congress at the time aid was approved.

A conservative think tank in Indianapolis says simply spending more money will NOT improve American education.

A briefing paper by Hudson Institute's Lewis Perelman says that money alone woN'T help because the public school system is too inefficient to use it productively.

In his paper, Perelman says that education funding is plentiful... but wasted on a system badly in need of fundamental changes. He says continued spending would only distract from the structural changes needed to achieve more learning at less cost.

Perelman says the wasted spending weakens the nation's economy and undermines the nation's global competitiveness.

According to his paper, 100-BILLION dollars of U-S education spending is lost each year to- quote- ''wasteful bureaucracy and archaic technology.''

(MAY 13) UPI - College students in Moscow and about 50 other Soviet cities today held a one-day hunger strike to mark the anniversary of Chinese students' pro-democracy sit-in at Tiananmen Square.

The Soviet students, who began their strike last night, say the fast was to protest the June 3rd Tiananmen Massacre.

The Chinese government has said 209 people were killed and thousands of others were wounded after the tanks and armored cars rolled through Beijing's streets and the square last year in the crackdown against the pro-democracy movement.

Student leaders said the death toll was 10 times as large.

The Soviet government has refrained from criticizing the crackdown. But the coverage of the student hunger strike by the state-controlled media now indicates strong disapproval of China's use of force.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl describes as ''painful'' today's defeat of his Christian Democratic party in elections in two German states. The (MAY 13) UPI - Performers Nora Dunn and Sinead O'Connor may have boycotted last night's Saturday Night Live because of raunchy guest host Andrew Dice Clay... but they were in the minority. Reportedly, 31 percent of all Americans watching T-V tuned in to catch Clay's performance, which N-B-C broadcast with a five-second delay.

The Goddess of Democracy has arrived in Taiwan. The pirate radio ship, whose crew will broadcast pro-democracy messages to mainland China, was welcomed in Taipei with firecrackers and a marching band. The ship's crew says it will resupply before sailing for international waters to begin transmissions. The Chinese government says it has sent a submarine to shadow the vessel.

New York police say about 15 black men shouting ethnic slurs attacked three Vietnamese men in a racially tense area of Brooklyn today, seriously injuring one of them. The attack occurred near a protest against Koreans who black demonstrators say were responsible for beating up a black woman in January. Mayor David Dinkins denounced the latest attack as ''mindless.''

Managers at Cincinnati Bell Telephone Company had to man the switchboards today because of a strike by union employees. WASHINGTON (MAY 18) COMTEX - The addendum to a 10-Q report filed at the SEC shows that Whitetail Inc. presented a public proxy announcing the planned disolution of Whitetail. It also announced a special shareholders meeting to be held on May 30, 1990, for the purposes of acting upon this disolution.

Principal in the disolution is the sale of Whitetail's oil and gas service segment to Beard Oil Company, in accordance with an asset purchase agreement, dated of April 12, 1990, between Beard and the company. A liquidation sale of remaining Whitetail assets, including its Whitetail Landscape Tree Farm, is expected to follow the Beard sale. Following that, complete disolution is expected, as per the Oklahoma General Corporation Act.

According to management, complete disolution of the company following the two sales should minimize expenses from the continued maintenance of business operations.

The decision to liquidate was approached after the company suffered a sizable loss in its 1989 fiscal year, whereupon the company sought-out potential puchasers or merger candidates. The proposal by the Beard Oil Company was determined by Whitetail management to be the most attractive available offer.

The executive office of Whitetail Inc. is located at 5534 North Western, Suite 104, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73118, and its telephone number is (405) 848-0213.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Increased imports from China and Taiwan in 1989 led to a resumption in the growth of textiles imported under the Multifiber Arrangement, the U.S. International Trade Commission said Thursday.

After declining - for the first time in nine years - in 1988, these imports surged 13 percent last year to 12.1 billion square meters of textiles, valued at $26.6 billion.

The Multifiber Agreement, signed by 43 countries, regulates world trade in textiles and covers virtually all U.S. imports of apparel and fabric.

The commission noted the average annual rate of increase in Multifiber Agreement imports since 1980 has been 10.6 percent. ITC numbers for increases or decreases in imports refer to square meters.

Imports from China increased 25 percent in 1989, the ITC said. For the past three years, China was the major source of Multifiber Agreement imports, accounting in 1989 for 14 percent of total Multifiber Agreement imports.

Imports from Taiwan, the No. 2 source of these imports, rose 19 percent during 1989 after declining for two years, accounting for 11 percent of total Multifiber Agreement imports.

The commission also said that 1989 imports from South Korea and Hong Kong, the other two major sources, rose by only 4 percent and 6 percent, respectively.

In contrast, 1989 imports from many smaller suppliers grew rapidly, led by Thailand, Canada, Indonesia, and the Dominican Republic, each of whose shipments rose by at least 20 percent.

On a product basis, apparel imports grew 14 percent and fabric imports advanced 24 percent in 1989. Yarn imports alone declined, falling by 15 percent.

The remainder of Multifiber Agreement textile imports, made-up and miscellaneous goods - mostly home furnishings - rose 11 percent last year.

On a fiber basis, imports of cotton and man-made fiber goods, which accounted for the great bulk of the imports, rose 10 to 15 percent to record levels. Imports of silk blend, ramie and linen goods rose by 31 percent but fell short of their 1987 high.

Wool goods imports alone declined, falling 12 percent in 1989 to their lowest level since 1983, the ITC said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Small businesses expect sluggish economic activity for the next six months, less inflation and a slight up-tick in the unemployment rate, the National Federation of Independent Business said Thursday.

In its Quarterly Economic Report for Small Business and the Economy, the group said its index of Small Business Optimism remained virtually unchanged, up 0.1 from the first quarter to 100.8, indicating sluggish economic activity for the next six months. The index has a 1978 base of 100.

The inflation outlook improved substantially from earlier in the year, with 25 percent of polled small businesses planning to raise prices in the next few months, down from 32 percent in January.

Among polled companies, 21 percent reported a job opening, unchanged from the first quarter and 4 point below the expansion-high figure of 25 percent in October 1988.

The federation said this suggests a slight up-tick in the unemployment rate over the next few months.

SAN JOSE, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Aspect Telecommunications Friday announced the availability of a gateway for its Aspect CallCenter automatic call distributor into SNA environments.

In March of 1988, Aspect announced the Application Bridge, a software and hardware product that links the Aspect CallCenter ACD and asynchronous data systems in order to provide key call center applications such as data directed call routing, synchronized screen management, and database inquiry and update.

The Aspect SNA Gateway extends the Application Bridge functions of the Aspect CallCenter automatic call distributor to SNA environments. The SNA Gateway software option works in conjunction with the standard Application Bridge interface to allow full (Advanced Program-to-Program Communications/Logical Unit 6.2) communications between the Aspect CallCenter and IBM host or mid-range computers.

The SNA Gateway utilizes IBM's standard APPC/LU6.2 protocol to provide a two way, peer-to-peer link that supports both inbound call routing and outbound automated dialing applications.

The SNA Gateway is in service at two Aspect customer sites. SunAmerica / Broad Inc. is using the Application Bridge and the SNA Gateway to implement synchronized screen management based on matching Automatic Number Identification (ANI) information with its CICS customer database residing on their IBM 3090 host computer.

Based on a successful ANI match, the IBM 3090 directs the Aspect CallCenter to route the call to a specific group of policy consultants. The CallCenter then selects the next available policy consultant from that group and notifies the IBM 3090 via the SNA Gateway, allowing the simultaneous arrival of the telephone call and the host data terminal screen to the policy consultant.

Ashton-Tate Corp. is using the Application Bridge and the SNA Gateway to provide data directed call routing in their customer support center. Callers are prompted to enter their product serial number with the Aspect CallCenter's integrated voice subsystem, and this number is sent to their customer database on the IBM AS/400 to access customer account information.

Different routing instructions are sent to the Aspect CallCenter by the IBM AS/400 depending upon the type of support agreement the customer holds for that product.

This helps us provide more effective and efficient customer service, such as matching the customer with the support technician best suited to answer particular types of questions.''

The SNA Gateway is an Aspect Telecommunications developed and supported software package which runs on an IBM Personal System/2 Model 55 SX, 70 or 80. The SNA Gateway software package purchase price is $10,000, and is available from Aspect Telecommunications within 60 days of receipt of order.

Aspect Telecommunications is a publicly held corporation traded on the NASDAQ National Market System. The company develops, markets, and supports customer-premises, application-specific telecommunications systems. The first such product is the Aspect CallCenter, an advanced, all-digital automatic call distributor. Aspect has sales and service offices across the country and in the United Kingdom.

SAN JOSE, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Aspect Telecommunications Friday announced the implementation of an Application Partnership Program.

This program is designed to foster the development of business application solutions between the Aspect CallCenter automatic call distributor and other software and hardware providers using Aspect's Application Bridge computer interface.

These business application solutions include automated outbound dialing and synchronized telephone and terminal screen management using information provided by the network such as Dialed Number Identification Service (DNIS) and Automatic Number Identification (ANI) or touch tone input from the caller.

The Aspect Application Partnership Program is open to all application software and hardware providers that can utilize the Aspect Application Bridge to provide on-line call transaction processing of both inbound and outbound telephone calls.

Charter members of the program include: telemarketing software providers

NPRI (Alexandria, Va.) and Database Systems (Phoenix); voice response unit vendors Syntellect (Phoenix); and Computer Communications Specialist Inc. (Norcross, Ga.); Aristacom International Inc. (Alameda, Calif.) and 21st Century Solutions Inc. (Palatine, Ill.) providers of integrated computing and telephony information-management solutions; and BusinessWise, provider of online telephone support system.

''Many PBX companies are designing proprietary hardware interfaces to specific computers that provide no real business solutions for their customers. Since the Aspect Application Bridge is already designed to work with most computer hardware, our focus is on working with companies that can provide our customers real application solutions,'' commented Dennis L. Haar, vice president of marketing.

''Aspect and our Application Partners are convinced that this program will generate exciting applications for our customers.''

Each program member has developed or is in the process of developing an Application Bridge interface for their product. The program members are provided the Application Bridge Implementation Guide at no charge, access to an Aspect CallCenter for testing of application software, technical training and support, and access to Aspect's customers via newsletters, application workshops and seminars.

Aspect will also sponsor an annual Application Partnership Conference that serves as a forum for on-going communication between Application Partners and Aspect's development organization.

Aspect Telecommunications is a publicly held corporation traded on the NASDAQ National Market System. The company develops, markets and supports customer-premises, application-specific telecommunications systems.

The first such product is the Aspect CallCenter, an advanced, all-digital automatic call distributor. Aspect has sales and service offices across the country and in the United Kingdom. Corporate headquarters are located at 1730 Fox Drive, San Jose, Calif. 95131. Telephone 408/441-2200.

EBENSBURG, PA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Ebensburg Power Co. began a training program this week for the 29 employees that have been hired to operate and maintain the cogeneration plant on New Germany Road in the Cambria County Industrial Park.

The plant is about 60 percent complete and is expected to begin producing electricity for Penelec and steam for Ebensburg Center at year-end.

Eighteen, or almost two-thirds, of the 29 employees hired are current or former area residents. Eight others are Babcock & Wilcox employees who have had experience operating other B&W plants with similar boilers. Only three of the employees are both new to the Ebensburg area and to B&W. Ebensburg Power Co. hired the new workforce through newspaper ads in Johnstown, Altoona and Indiana, Pa.

''Our objective from the beginning was to hire as many employees as possible from the area,'' said Robert E. Wascher, vice president of Ebensburg Power Co. ''We are pleased that we could find so many qualified power plant operating personnel from the area -- a steam electric power plant is a very complicated piece of equipment which requires operators with a high degree of technical skills and experience to operate the plant safely and efficiently,'' he said.

The Ebensburg Cogeneration Plant has some unique operating needs, since it has a circulating fluidized bed (CFB) boiler. One of the newer technologies in boiler design, a CFB boiler permits the plant to efficiently burn bony coal found in area refuse piles, and will enable the company to reclaim the unsightly areas in Revloc and Nanty Glo.

In the Ebensburg Power Co.'s training program, the new employees, who have varying degrees of experience, will receive instruction in the specific design, operation and maintenance of the cogeneration plant. The eight B&W employees will provide a nucleus of professionals experienced in the operation of B&W plants and familiar with B&W operating and maintenance procedures.

Ebensburg Power Co. is a wholly owned subsidiary of B&W, a major operating unit of McDermott International Inc.

IRVINE, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Helionetics Inc. (PSE:HLX.P/NASDAQ:HLXC) Friday announced that revenues for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990, were $2.2 million, a 43 percent increase over the $1.5 million reported for the same period a year ago.

The company experienced a loss of $683,000, or 12 cents per fully diluted share, in contrast to earnings of $148,000, or 3 cents per fully diluted share (exclusive of a nonrecurring gain of $5.5 million, or 85 cents per share, as a result of the 1989 plan of reorganization), in the first quarter of 1989.

Vincent P. Williams, president and chief executive officer, attributed the improved revenues primarily to the sales contributions of Helionetics' CPP division and XCELL subsidiary, which were acquired in the second quarter of 1989.

He said the earnings loss resulted from insufficient liquidity to purchase certain component parts and services needed to complete and ship assemblies, higher overhead costs in anticipation of larger shipments and expenses incurred in connection with the acquisition of CPP and XCELL.

Williams noted that Helionetics has initiated programs to reduce costs and streamline operations. Additionally, to alleviate its liquidity problem, the company has arranged a term loan and line of credit aggregating $1.9 million secured by the company's assets and both the personal assets and guarantee of Bernard B. Katz, chairman of the board.

Williams said that he expects that this line of credit, negotiated on March 31, 1990, will substantially improve operating results in the current quarter ending June 30, 1990.

Helionetics designs and manufactures solid-state and rotary power conditioning systems and hi-tech printed wiring boards.

PLEASANT HILL, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Giga-tronics Inc. Friday reported final sales for the twelve month period ended March 31, 1990 of $13,029,000, down 9.3 percent from the $14,367,000 reported for the comparable period last year.

Net earnings were $1,485,000, or 57 cents per share, as compared to the $2,629,000, or 90 cents per share, reported last year.

Sales for the fourth quarter ended March 31, 1990 were $2,282,000, compared to $3,511,000 reported for the comparable quarter last year. The company reported a net loss of $237,000, or 9 cents per share, compared to earnings of $807,000, or 29 cents per share, reported last year.

In releasing final numbers for fiscal 1990, Donald F. Bogue, president and chief executive officer, reiterated the reasons for the decrease in the company's net earnings as stated in the company's preliminary earnings release of April 16, 1990:

(1) Lower levels of shipments to major defense industry customers, reflecting declining levels of new orders from those customers over the last two years.

(2) Production delays on certain specially-configured equipment the company had anticipated shipping in the fourth quarter and is now expecting to ship in the first quarter of the current fiscal year.

(3) Increased reserves and write-offs for excess and obsolete inventories related to older product lines and excess manufacturing capacity.

(4) Reserves for the costs of restructuring manufacturing operations in response to the reduced sales level and in order to achieve greater manufacturing efficiencies. Notwithstanding the above, Bogue confirmed the company's expectations of returning to quarterly profitability in the near future.

During the 12 month period ended March 31, 112,000 shares of outstanding common stock were repurchased by the company. Equivalent shares outstanding for the three month and 12 month periods ended March 31 were approximately 2,570,000 and 2,599,000 respectively, as compared with 2,768,000 and 2,933,00 for the like periods last year.

The backlog of unfilled orders at March 31, 1990 was approximately $5 million compared to $6.5 million at March 31, 1989.

Giga-tronics designs, manufactures and markets a broad line of synthesized microwave signal sources, generators and sweepers for customers in the aerospace, telecommunications and defense industries around the world and is located in Pleasant Hill, Calif.

WILSONVILLE, OR (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Tektronix Inc. Friday announced a color PostScript-language compatible 300 dot-per-inch (dpi) printer with multi-tasking connectivity designed for today's mixed office environments.

The Phaser PX has a suggested retail price of $7,995 and is available now from Tektronix resellers worldwide.

The Phaser PX, the newest member of Tektronix' color PostScript-language compatible printer family, includes serial, parallel and AppleTalk ports standard. Unlike its competitors' products, the Phaser PX automatically switches among all three ports. This allows the printer to be shared across a variety of platforms and environments in a typical office which may have a combination of IBM PCs and compatibles, Apple Macintosh Personal Computer, workstations, minicomputers or mainframes.

In addition to PostScript, the Phaser PX supports Hewlett-Packard Graphics Language (HP-GL). HP-GL emulation is compatible with HP7475A plotter drivers, including extensions for 256 colors, user selectable timeouts and scaling.

The Phaser PX has the ability to dynamically switch between PostScript and HP-GL emulation. This means that one input port can be set to accept HP-GL files while the others are set to receive PostScript files.

For example, when equipped with the optional 4MB memory upgrade, the Phaser PX can simultaneously receive HP-GL input from a workstation or minicomputer through its serial port, PostScript input via the parallel port from an IBM PC and AppleTalk input from an Apple Macintosh.

The Phaser PX's PANTONE certification provides optimum process color simulation of PANTONE colors for users of PANTONE licensed software applications.

The Phaser PX is designed to address the rapidly growing market for high-quality color business graphics -- particularly overhead presentations -- regardless of computer platform. In addition, it is well suited for engineering/scientific, graphic arts and desktop publishing applications.

The Phaser PX includes an integrated PostScript language compatible controller based on the Motorola 68020 microprocessor running at 16 MHz. Its standard configuration includes 6MB of memory. A 4MB RAM memory expansion kit is available for $1,495. The additional memory provides multi-tasking capability, faster throughput and extra storage for download fonts.

Resident fonts include the same 35 trademarked typefaces that are standard with the Apple LaserWriter. Download support is provided for Adobe Type 1 and Type 3 formats. This includes fonts supplied by Bitstream, Agfa Compugraphic, Linotype, The Font Co., and others. The Phaser PX prints on coated paper as well as overhead transparency material in both standard letter and legal sizes.

The printer also includes SCSI hardware support for an optional SCSI disk for font caching. This capability will be made available in a future release of the system software.

Any existing Tektronix color thermal wax transfer printer can be upgraded to the PX's capabilities for $3,995. The upgrade kit can be installed by Tektronix authorized resellers and field service offices throughout the world.

For further customer or dealer information, write to Tektronix Inc., P.O. Box 1000, M-S 63-630, Wilsonville, Ore., 97070, or call 800/835-6100.

Tektronix is a leading manufacturer of electronic products and systems in the areas of computer graphics, test and measurement and communications. Sales in fiscal 1989 totaled $1.4 billion.

Tek has approximately 15,000 employees worldwide. GLENDALE, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Pollution Research and Control Corp. (NASDAQ:PRCC), following a special meeting of its board of directors announced it had filed a notice with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) that it was delaying its filing of Form 10-Q with the SEC for the period ended March 31, 1990.

According to Albert E. Gosselin Jr., PRCC's chairman and chief executive officer, the delay resulted from the temporary unavailability of the firm's accountant and the inability to receive timely financial information from its Environmental Information Systems (EIS) subsidiary in Austin, Texas.

''The disparity between the two separate marketing components of EIS,'' Gosselin said, ''its discontinued hardware data logger units, and ongoing

IRVINE, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Toshiba America's computer systems division Friday announced a potential diskette drive cable malfunction on some of its early T1000SE notebook-size portable PCs.

The problem, which has been eliminated in all current T1000SEs, could occur after prolonged use of the PC as the result of the routing of the cable to the diskette drive.

''The routing can be easily fixed by the user or a Toshiba authorized service provider (ASP). There is no concern for safety to the user,'' said Bill Johnson, Toshiba's vice president and general manager.

The potentially affected units are those with serial numbers starting with the following three digits: 010, 020, 030, 040 and 129.

Owners of the specified portables are asked to call Toshiba's computer-product support at 800/999-4CSD for instructions on how to inspect and correct the cable routing if needed. NEWPORT BEACH, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of Mortgage Investments Plus Inc. (ASE:MIP) Thursday declared a quarterly dividend of 10 cents per share payable on July 2, 1990, to stockholders of record on June 1, 1990.

This quarterly dividend compares with dividends of 20 cents per share paid in the last 16 quarterly periods.

In explaining the new, lower quarterly dividend rate, Carl C. Gregory III, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, said: ''The environment within which MIP operates has changed considerably over the past several months.

''Until the country's economy and financial markets send clearer signals regarding interest rates, liquidity and demand for space, the directors believe that a very conservative posture is in order.

''The funds resulting from the lower dividend and from our cost-cutting program will be used to reduce our borrowings and strengthen our balance sheet.''

CORTE MADERA, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Marin Discoveries, the 20-year old Marin based non-profit organization that believes in making environmental awareness and education a fun experience, is in danger of closing its doors due to a projected $90,000 funding short fall this year.

In order to survive, the organization must raise $30,000 during the next 30 days and $60,000 over the next 90 days.

According to Phyllis Faber, chair of the board for Marin Discoveries, ''We are devastated to find that over the past six months, gift giving patterns have changed. If we were a homeless, aids or earthquake relief cause, there would be much less of a problem.''

Faber went on to say that ''In a year where an event such as Earth Day 1990 can bring together so many thousands of people, it would be a terrible thing to lose such an environmentally dedicated organization like Marin Discoveries.''

Marin Discoveries attracts over 7,000 bay area residents a year thru its half-day to week-long environmental programs. Each class or event is designed to be both educational and fun, exposing people to different qualities of the natural environment, and how to protect and enjoy it.

Marin Discoveries offers over 600 classes a year. The organization also offers some adventure travel type trips, which are used as fundraising to support the shorter, loss producing programs.

Bill Noble, founder and board member of Marin Discoveries, said that ''To our knowledge, Marin Discoveries is a one of a kind program in the U.S., and has been looked on as a model by other communities.

''Participants in the program cover almost 80 percent of the $500,000 annual operating costs. The problem is that we are having an unprecedented amount of trouble raising the other 20 percent.''

Until last year, Marin Discoveries received significant funding from the Buck Trust. According to Faber, ''We have been working on our transition away from dependency on Marin Community Foundation Buck Trust monies. However, we have not had enough time to build other sources of funding since we were cut off by the Marin Community Foundation so abruptly last year.

''With the sudden changes we are seeing in large and personal contribution giving patterns, we must develop immediate direct community support for the program or face shutting it down.''

''We have been direct building community support, but not fast enough,'' said Noble. ''We now have over 1,100 paid memberships in our two year old membership program, and project over $27,000 in membership income this year alone. It's really frustrating to see something that I have lived with for so long be so close to financial stability and yet face a financial crisis like this, both at the same time.''

WOODINVILLE, WA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Cyanotech Corp. (OTC:CYAN) Friday announced that it had cut its losses in half from the first quarter a year ago, even though revenues are down 21 percent.

The reduction of operating losses is consistent with the company's recently announced new operating strategy of maximizing production and sales of its proven products, Spirulina and phycobiliproteins, while continuing development efforts on beta-carotene.

''We are pleased with the significant decrease in losses and plan to continue the trend by further improving production efficiencies, cutting costs and aggressively marketing our Spirulina and phycobiliproteins,'' said chief executive officer and scientific director, Dr. Gerald R. Cysewski.

First quarter revenues were $417,308, down from $525,002 in first quarter 1989. The decrease is due to a change in purchasing patterns from a major customer. The company incurred a net loss of $174,643, or 1 cent per share, compared with $358,264, or 2 cents per share, a year ago.

Cyanotech Corp., formed in 1983, identifies and grows microalgae as sources for high-value products. SAN RAFAEL, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Children's Discovery Centers of America Inc. (NASDAQ:CDCRA) Friday announced that its revenues for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990, increased 34 percent to $4,649,000 from $3,475,000 in 1989.

This revenue increase is entirely attributable to the growth in the number of new centers operated by the company as a result of its aggressive acquisition program.

The company reported a net loss for the quarter of $158,000, or 3 cents per share, compared to a profit of $151,000, or 3 cents per share, in 1989.

Revenues and operating profits in the company's Arizona region experienced declines on a year-to-year basis due to several factors, including an unusually severe competitive climate, and regulatory changes mandated by the state legislature which have increased costs.

The situation is further complicated by poor economic conditions in Arizona which are expected to improve only modestly in the year ahead. The company is monitoring its performance very closely in this market and is initiating a variety of actions to respond to the economic and competitive situation there.

Richard A. Niglio, chairman and chief executive officer of Children's Discovery Centers, said: ''Centers in the areas where we have been concentrating our growth during the past two years are performing strongly. In these markets, which today represent more than 75 percent of the company's sales, revenues were up 5 percent on a comparative center basis over last year.''

Niglio added that the company planned to continue to concentrate its acquisition efforts in these areas and expected to register continued rapid growth.

HOUSTON (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Continental Airlines has entered into an agreement to advance the delivery positions for certain of its Airbus A330 and A340 aircraft on firm order.

These aircraft are part of a previously announced order for 40 aircraft on firm order and on option.

The advanced technology A330 and A340 aircraft on firm order and on option have an aggregate purchase price of approximately $4.5 billion. As a result of the new agreement, 15 of the aircraft on firm order will be delivered by the end of 1995.

The four-engine A340 has extended-range capabilities and can fly between any two points on earth with a maximum of one stop en route. It can provide nonstop service from West Coast gateways to the entire Pacific Rim area, including Australia and New Zealand.

It can also fly from interior hubs like Houston to many Pacific points, including Honolulu or Tokyo. It would perform optimally on virtually any transatlantic segment from Newark.

Monthly average housing prices for the five-county region, when compared with the same month of the previous year, continue to rise but at a slower rate, the TRW figures show.

For example, the average price in April 1989 was 16 percent higher than the price in April 1988. The price in May 1989 was 14 percent higher than the previous May. By January 1990, the year- to-year comparison dropped to 6 percent. Last month's average was 5 percent higher than the price paid in April 1989.

Breaking out the year-to-year changes in average price by county, Riverside and San Diego counties posted 10 percent gains, San Bernardino County prices jumped 8 percent, and Los Angeles County prices grew 6 percent. In Orange County, however, April's price was almost 2 percent lower than it was in April 1989, TRW said.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - William H. Reed, president of Semiconductor Equipment and Materials International, Mountain View, Calif, has been named Export Executive of the Year by the Northern California District Export Council.

The council is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The award was presented Friday during ceremonies at the Mark Hopkins Inter-Continental Hotel.

Betty D. Neuhart, regional managing director of the International Trade Administration of the Department of Commerce, said, ''Bill Reed has the foresight and initiative to take advantage of export opportunities. He provides important leadership for U.S. high technology industries.''

SEMI is an international trade association representing the $20 billion semiconductor equipment and materials industry. Reed is the first trade association executive to win the award. He was chosen for expanding trade opportunities for SEMI's nearly 1,000 U.S. member companies, some 300 of which are located in Northern California.

During Reed's eight years at SEMI, the association has opened liason offices in Brussels, Tokyo and Seoul. He also brought SEMICON trade shows -- which are produced by SEMI -- to the People's Republic of China, South Korea, Japan and Tawain.

Under his guidance, SEMI expanded its international standards efforts, which helps products manufactured by U.S. companies compete overseas.

Reed also acts as a liason between national and international semiconductor consortia, the U.S. Department of Commerce, members of Congress and other governmental agencies.

Before joining SEMI in 1983, Reed was worldwide director of marketing and sales for Dynamit Nobel, a manufacturer of Silicon wafers. Prior to that, he spent 15 years with Monsanto Corp.

The transaction will be effective July 1, 1990. Specific details of the arrangement were not disclosed.

According to Thomas L. Reed, chairman and chief executive officer, SAZTEC, the agreement is a major move in the area of expansion for SAZTEC.

MIDVALE, UT (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Broadcast International Inc. (NASDAQ:BRIN) Friday announced the results of operations for the quarter ended March 31, 1990.

During the first quarter of 1990, the company earned $66,707 of net income (after taxes) on revenues of $2,051,574.

Commenting on the financial results, Dwight H. Egan, president of the company, said, ''The growth in revenues represents a 42 percent increase compared to the first quarter of 1989. This growth resulted from increasing our billable installations by 16 percent over the comparable 1989 quarter and from increased third-party installation activity.

''The decrease in first quarter earnings from 1989 to 1990 reflects our plan to accelerate growth through more aggressive marketing and an expanded installation and service capability. During the first quarter, we more than doubled marketing expenditures over the 1989 comparable quarter, and we installed nearly as many new systems as we installed in all of 1989.

''Installation activity should continue at this rapid pace as we install our backlog of new orders. We anticipate this increased activity will yield higher sustainable revenues and earnings in this year and beyond as more billable systems become operational.''

Broadcast International provides satellite-delivered business information and network services including background music, point-of-purchase advertising, high-speed data transmission, video and audio conferencing, and satellite installation and maintenance services. Its customers include financial data network clients and leading food, drug, home improvement and general merchandise retailers and wholesalers.

NOTES:

(1) Includes provision for federal income taxes of $6,058,255 and $5,614,705 for the three months ended March 31, 1990 and 1989, respectively; and $30,478,919 and $27,255,499 for the 12 months ended March 31, 1990 and 1989, respectively.

(2) The common stock of the company is in two Series, Series A and Series B. To the extent that cash dividends are paid on the Series B, stock dividends with an equivalent fair value must be paid during the same calendar year on the Series A, unless cash dividends are declared on Series A shares at the same time and in an equal amount as on Series B shares.

To the extent that stock dividends are declared on Series B, the same stock dividend must be declared on Series A. From the reclassification of the outstanding common stock in 1956 through 1989, only stock dividends were paid on Series A and only cash dividends were paid on the Series B.

The company declared a 1.33 percent first-quarter stock dividend on its outstanding Series A and Series B common stock. Series A is convertible into Series B at all times except between the dates of declaration and record of dividends. Series B is not convertible into Series A. The shares of both Series have identical voting rights and participate ratably in liquidation.

Earnings per share is presented for each Series separately, with historical adjustment for stock dividends for each Series. The percentage of Series A and of Series B shares has been established for each period by relating the period-end number of outstanding shares of each Series to the total of both.

The percentages have then been applied to the net income for the period to calculate the net income pools applicable to the Series A and the Series B shares, respectively.

The net income pools applicable to Series A and Series B shares have been divided by the respective period-end number of outstanding shares of each Series during each applicable period to obtain the respective Series A and Series B per-share earnings.

The resultant earnings per share of each Series have for earlier periods also been adjusted for stock dividends paid in any subsequent period or periods.

Sandler continued, ''In this era of difficulty faced by many financial institutions, World stands out as a company where depositors can feel safe about placing their life savings.'' He explained,

At March 31, World's regulatory capital ratios were: tangible - 4.42 percent; core - 5.92 percent; and risk-based - 11.82 percent.

PHOENIX (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Mariah International Inc. (OTC:Pink Sheets), a Utah corporation, and Guild Mark Industries Inc. (OTC:Pink Sheets), a Delaware corporation, in a joint release Friday announced the successful extraction, recovery and sale of approximately 5 ounces of gold from ore located at their Sheep Hill joint venture located in Flagstaff.

This successful extraction was performed on a limited production scale basis using technology developed for the joint venture by Dr. Alvin C. Johnson.

Based on repeated success using this new procedure, the companies have determined that it is feasible to convert the pilot plant at Sheep Hill into a limited processing plant that will enable the joint venture to economically process 50 to 100 tons of ore per day.

Preliminary estimates show that the limited processing plant will be self-sufficent and enable the companies to establish parameters for a much larger plant. Company officials estimate that it will take four to six months to complete the plant conversion and will use funds raised from a private placement of Mariah International common stock.

The companies also announced they had reached an agreement with the mortgage holder of the Sheep Hill property to modify and extend the mortgage payments due on the property for approximately one year.

Further, it was announced that Tony Hall had been selected by the boards of directors of both companies to serve as president of both companies. Hall replaces Douglas L. Newell, who was elected chairman of the board of directors for both companies. Prior to his appointment as president, Hall served as a director of both companies and will continue to do so.

In addition, Dan Bode was selected to establish a new investor relations department for both companies. Bode is also a director of both companies.

Mariah International Inc. and Guild Mark Industries Inc. formed a joint venture in 1988 to develop a recovery process and to mine precious metals from certain cinder properties that they own or control, primarily in Arizona.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Jan D. Timmer, chairman of the supervisory board of PolyGram NV, announced Friday that David G. Fine will succeed him as the chairman of PolyGram's supervisory board.

Fine will relinquish his position of president and chief executive officer at the end of 1990. Alain Levy, currently PolyGram's executive vice president with overall responsibility for popular music, music publishing,

France and USA, is to become the president and chief executive officer of the worldwide music group which has net sales of over $2 billion.

Fine, 61, has been planning his succession for some time. At the group's managing director's conference in the Bahamas this week, he commented, ''I believe it is opportune to hand over executive responsibility at the end of this year when the group is in a particularly strong position to take advantage of the many opportunities of the nineties.'' Levy will become president and chief executive officer on Jan. 1, 1991.

After four years as PolyGram's executive vice president, Fine became president and chief executive officer in 1987. He has led the group through three years of sustained growth culminating with the group's flotation at the end of 1989 for which year Fine was able to announce the group's best ever profit and sales figures.

Levy, 43, has been with PolyGram since 1984. One of the architects of the group's recent acquisitions, he played a leading role in the negotiations with A & M and Island Records, which PolyGram acquired in 1989. Currently he is acting as PolyGram's chief executive officer in America where he is coordinating the restructuring of PolyGram's USA operations following the 1989 acquisitions.

As PolyGram's chief executive officer in France from 1984 to 1988, Levy built the business into France's largest recorded music group, with a market share of over 33 percent and record levels of profitability.

Levy is a graduate of the Ecole des Mines in France and the Wharton School of Business in the United States where he obtained an MBA.

After seven years with CBS in America and Europe, Levy became managing director of CBS Disques (France) in 1975, where he remained until December 1984 when he was appointed chief executive officer of the PolyGram group in France. In 1988 he was appointed executive vice president of PolyGram International, assuming responsibility for PolyGram's popular music division, as well as for music publishing, France and the USA.

LOS ANGELES, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - A lawsuit filed Friday by Preferred Communications Inc., accuses Mayor Tom Bradley and several top aides of unlawfully conspiring to prevent the company from offering cable television service in Los Angeles.

The suit, which seeks compensatory and punitive damages, charges Bradley and nine other city officials with intentionally violating Preferred's First Amendment rights in order to maintain their influence and control over cable television in Los Angeles.

In January, Preferred emerged victorious from a long-running court battle with the city which has extended to the United States Supreme Court. For over six years Preferred has fought for the right, recently upheld by United States District Judge Consuelo B. Marshall, to break the monopoly awarded by Los Angeles officials to Continental Cable Company.

Currently, Continental is the only cable company allowed to operate in South Central Los Angeles. Although Judge Marshall recently ruled in Preferred's favor, declaring the city's practice of awarding such monopolies unconstitutional, Bradley and his aides have refused to allow Preferred to begin service.

''It's outrageous that these officials are shamelessly stalling even though they know their actions are unconstitutional,'' said Harold Farrow of the Walnut Creek, Calif., office of Farrow, Schildhause & Wilson, counsel for Preferred.

According to Farrow, city officials claimed for years that it was physically impossible to build a second cable system before being forced to admit that this claim was false. Following this admission, Judge Marshall ruled the city's effort to maintain a cable monopoly was unconstitutional.

''In the face of this defeat, Bradley and his cronies are continuing the charade. A small clique of city officials is conspiring to prevent Preferred from ever succeeding in breaking the cable monopoly which they created.

''Unfortunately, preserving a monopoly which serves their political interests is more important to them than obeying the Constitution,'' explained Farrow.

In its suit, Preferred is asking for an award of punitive damages against the city officials and an order prohibiting them from further interfering with Preferred's First Amendment right to provide cable television services in Los Angeles.

Named in the suit, along with Mayor Bradley are Susan Herman, William Elkins, Lance Drummond, Nina Frazier, Harvey Bookstein, Mary Ridings, Tracy Weston, Edward Perez and Mitchell Kolacinski, the city of Los Angeles and 30 unnamed co-defendents.

SACRAMENTO, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Supermail International Inc. (NASDAQ:SPML), revenues for the first quarter, ended March 31, 1990, rose approximately 55 percent over the prior year's level, while losses declined significantly, according to Christine A. Umbertino, Supermail president and chief executive officer.

The company reported a loss of $79,378, or 1 cent per share, on revenues of $901,000, as compared with a loss of $250,000, or 3 cents per share, on revenues of $580,000, for the first quarter last year.

The increase in revenues was due to several additional check-cashing locations -- largely the result of the company's acquisition program -- as well as to higher check-cashing volumes. The profit improvements were the result of a changing revenue mix, with a growing percentage of revenues coming from higher-margin check-cashing operations.

The improvements were after paying down debt and after depreciation and amortization charges, incurred in conjunction with recent acquisitions.

Umbertino said the company anticipates continued improvements in revenues and profitability in coming quarters, with the company expected to reach profitability in the near future.

Supermail International Inc. operates 20 retail money centers in California and Nevada offering a variety of financial services including check-cashing, money transfer, peso exchange, utility payments, lottery and packaging, shipping and other postal services. The company is also the

CAMPBELL, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - FastPacket company StrataCom has announced that Comdisco Disaster Recovery Services (CRDS)(NYSE:CDO), a subsidiary of Comdisco, the world's largest disaster recovery service, is building its new strategic high-speed digital backbone network using FastPacket technology.

The multimillion dollar network -- known as CDRS Net -- will enable Comdisco's customers to access spare computer equipment located throughout the United States from one local point. Work has already begun, and StrataCom IPX 32 networking systems already link four of Comdisco's disaster recovery centers.

The network, linking the company's eight U.S. disaster-recovery centers and 28 computer ''hot sites,'' is due to be completed by June 1991.

Currently Comdisco, based in Rosemont, Ill., serves its 2,100 subscribers with local disaster recovery centers -- known as hot sites -- located throughout the United States.

In the event of the loss of their own computer or communications network in the past, subscribers have had to either travel to their chosen hot site to process their work or access back-up equipment at their local recovery center from their own premises.

Now, the new network will enhance Comdisco's service by enabling subscribers to access equipment held at other remote hot sites from local Comdisco facilities using the CDRS Net, thus offering the customer greater choice and redundancy and saving time and expense.

Comdisco's new network builds on its existing 150-line T1 network. The new IPX 32s are located at Comdisco's recovery sites in San Ramon, Los Angeles Dallas, and Atlanta, linked by fiber and microwave T1s, with satellite back up for complete redundancy. Further T1 lines from the IPX will radiate out to the subscriber to provide access to the CDRS Net from the customer's own premises.

Comdisco Disaster Recovery Services, the world's largest disaster recovery and business continuity provider, serves 2,100 customers worldwide. CDRS is a wholly owned subsidiary of Comdisco Inc. Comdisco buys, sells and leases new and used computer and high technology equipment and arranges related financings.

The first-quarter is normally the company's poorest of the year, primarily because claims ratios in the Credit Insurance Division are at their highest level. An increase in the credit insurance claims ratio and a $94,000 reduction in realized investment gains are the principal reasons for the 1990 earnings decline. In addition, operating results in the Individual Life Insurance and Auto Auction Divisions were down slightly from 1989.

FORT WORTH, TX (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Paul I. Stevens, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Stevens Graphics Corporation (SVGA & SVGB/AMEX) Friday convened the annual meeting of the Company's shareholders.

All management proposals were approved including the re-election of the current Board of Directors with the addition and election of a new member, Edmund H. Damon, former Chief Executive Officer of Pantasote, Inc., an American Stock Exchange listed manufacturer.

In his address to the shareholders, Mr. Stevens stated, ''1989 was a landmark year for the Stevens Graphics Corporation, the most successful in our history. The strength of our financial foundation is the linchpin of our Company and is the basis of our sharply increased sales and earnings. Importantly, these record sales and earnings were all internally generated.''

He continued, ''Our selection this week by BusinessWeek magazine as one of the best 100 small corporations, 'a hot growth company', is substantive recognition of the results of our competitive strategy. We are very pleased with the designation.''

The Chairman also reported that the Soviet packaging press systems shipments and all other shipments are on target. In addition, Stevens emphasized the outstanding results from the Company's recent participation in DRUPA '90, the industry's premier trade show held every five years in Dusseldorf, West Germany.

''This was by far our best performance at a trade show. We have great hopes that we will be able to close significant new orders as a result of the show,'' he stated. ''We are optimistic about the business opportunities in Western and Eastern Europe and see great potential for Stevens in both regions.''

''The softness in orders that we have experienced thus far in 1990 have not had a material effect on our earnings. But, our current rate of bookings and backlog remain below levels needed to meet analysts' expectations for the fourth quarter and will need to improve to reach those expectations.

We are hopeful that our marketing efforts will cause orders to pick up. While any orders that we receive as a result of DRUPA will have little effect on the second half of 1990, we expect them to make a positive contribution to our sales and earnings performance in 1991,'' concluded Mr. Stevens.

Stevens Graphics Corporation, headquartered in Fort Worth, Texas, is the only U.S. based company that designs, manufactures, markets and services web-fed offset, gravure, flexographic, and intaglio printing and packaging systems, collators, and related pre-press, printing and post- press equipment on a worldwide basis.

The Company serves the packaging, commercial, business forms, and currency/securities segments of the U.S./North American and international printing and packaging industries. Corporate strategy is to create a larger company, by internal growth and by acquisition of industry-related companies, that provides ''complete systems solution'' lines of products.

LA MIRADA, CA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Western Lath and Steel Framing, the largest manufacturer of metal lath and steel framing systems in the Western United States and Pacific Basin, has announced plans for the construction of an $8 million facility in the Mira Loma area of Riverside County for the relocation of its corporate headquarters and main manufacturing site.

The company is currently located in La Mirada.

Larry Miller, chairman and chief executive officer of Western Metal Lath, said Oltmans Construction Co. of Whittier and Irvine is scheduled to start construction in August on a 158,000 square foot build-to-suit complex located on 10 acres of land at General Drive and Clay St. The developer is Mission West Properties of San Diego.

The plant, which will include administrative, manufacturing and warehousing activities, will be strategically located just minutes from the 60, 15 and 91 freeways.

The new Western Metal Lath headquarters is being designed by Hill Pinckert Architects of Irvine and will be a concrete tilt-up structure with dock-high loading, 24-foot interior clearance and 14,000 square feet of office space. The new facility represents a 64 percent increase in capacity over the La Mirada plant where Western Lath has been based since 1954.

Western Metal Lath manufactures products for the use of the commercial building industry. Miller states that customers have requested substantial increases in ready-to-ship inventories and more outside storage and facilities. The new facility will comply with the customers' need for faster turnaround for their trucks and allow for substantially lower inventory levels at the dealers' stocking yards.

Approximately 125 people are expected to be employed in the new Riverside County plant upon completion, scheduled for March 1991.

WOODBURY, NY (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Cablevision Systems Corp. (ASE:CVC) Friday reported results for the first quarter 1990, citing increased revenues and operating cash flows.

Cablevision's revenues for the quarter ended March 31, 1990 were $133,770,000 compared to revenues of $110,705,000 for the same period in 1989.

The 21 percent increase in revenues resulted primarily from the acquisition on Feb. 17, 1989 of cable television systems from Viacom Inc. and the acquisition on Dec. 6, 1989 of cable systems from Times Mirror

Cable Television Inc. (collectively the ''1989 Acquisitions'').

Rate increases which occurred during the fourth quarter of 1989 and the first quarter of 1990 and internal growth also contributed to the increase in revenues.

Cablevision said that operating cash flow (defined as operating profit before depreciation and amortization) increased 19 percent to $54,016,000 for the quarter due to the 1989 Acquisitions, rate increases and internal growth.

The company reported a net loss for the quarter ending March 31, 1990 of $74,002,000, or $3.38 per common share after preferred dividend requirement, as compared to a net loss of $59,097,000, or $2.73 per common share after preferred dividend requirement for the same period in 1989.

The company attributes increases in the first quarter 1990 loss to additional interest and depreciation and amortization expenses related to the 1989 Acquisitions.

Net interest expense amounted to approximately $64 million for the quarter ended March 31, 1990 (of which approximately $16 million required no current cash outlays) an increase of approximately $17 million over the comparable 1989 period.

Depreciation and amortization expense amounted to approximately $54 million for the first quarter 1990 as compared to approximately $44 million for the same period in 1989.

At March 31, 1990, the company served approximately 1,284,400 subscribers, with a penetration rate of 65.7 percent of the homes passed, representing a gain of more than 10,000 subscribers during the quarter ended March 31, 1990.

Cablevision Systems Corp. owns and operates cable television systems in 11 states and through subsidiaries owns interests in companies which produce and distribute regional and national programming and which provide advertising sales services for the cable television industry.

For financing purposes, the company is structured as a restricted group consisting of the parent company and certian of its subsidiaries (the ''Restricted Group'') and other ''Unrestricted'' subsidiaries which include A-R Cable Inc., V Cable Inc., Rainbow Programming Holding Inc. (''RPHI'') and Rainbow Advertising Sales Corp. (''Rasco'').

Each of the Restricted Group, A-R Cable Inc. and V Cable Inc. are individually and separately financed. RPHI and Rasco have no external financing and have been funded by the Restricted Group to date.

The following table presents net revenues and cash flow on an actual and on a pro forma basis for the three months ended March 31, 1990 and 1989 in terms of the groupings mentioned above.

For comparative purposes, pro forma adjustments have been applied to V Cable Inc. and the Restricted Group in 1989 to include three full months of first quarter 1989 operations for those companies acquired in the 1989 Acquisitions.

PICKERINGTON, OH (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Physicians Insurance Company of Ohio (PICO) has recorded a consolidated net income of $641,926 or 21 cents per share for the first quarter of the year, up 42 percent over $451,090 or 15 cents per share for the same period a year ago.

This is the eighth consecutive quarter in which PICO has recorded a profit from continuing operations, according to Robert L. Dion, president and CEO.

Total first-quarter revenues for the Pickerington-based insurer were $17.1 million, up slightly over the first quarter of 1989. These revenues include premium income earned, net investment income, and income from other operations.

Operating expenses for the quarter were $4.4 million, down five percent from the same period a year ago. According to Dion, this reflects PICO's operational efficiencies and corporate streamlining which have been implemented in all areas of the company.

Consolidated net written premiums for the first quarter were $9.8 million, up slightly over the comparable period a year ago. Net investment income also increased during the first quarter to $3.7 million from $3.5 million a year ago.

Shareholders' equity was $26.8 million or $8.70 per share at the end of the first quarter, up from $24.4 million or $7.91 per share a year ago. Assets increased to $222.8 million from $217.9 million for the comparable period in 1989.

The company's unpaid losses and loss adjustment expense, which reflects reserves for medical professional liability claims, increased from $128.3 million at the end of the first quarter in 1989 to $133.1 million for the comparable period this year.

Net premiums written for medical professional liability (MPL) insurance, the company's primary line of business, were $8.4 million during the first quarter, down from $8.9 million for the same period in 1989, contributing to a decline in operating income of $93,000.

Life insurance revenues written through American Physicians Life Insurance Co. were $1.4 million, up substantially from $706,000 in the first quarter of 1989. The increase is attributable, in part, to expanded forms of protection and to the increasing level of group coverages being written by the company. The life insurance subsidiary posted an operating loss of $19,600 for the quarter, in contrast to a $271,600 loss sustained during the first quarter of 1989.

NEWTON, MA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Irwin J. Gruverman, president and chief executive officer of BDC, stated, ''Our first quarter met our projected sales and profit expectations.

''Historically, this period is our high cost quarter. A 34.9 percent increase in sales dollars reduced losses by 89 percent. We completed retructuring of BDC and have focused almost all our energies in growing Microfluidics. Our new all-electric manufacturing models are just now available and generating interest and orders.

''Our new Microfluidizer Symposium series and expansion of our telemarketing and field sales supervision have had a major positive impact on customer perception, and it is our intention to translate this into improved performance this year and into the future.

''It has been gratifying to experience the increase in large equipment interest over the last few months, and we are prepared to respond to customer demand for production equipment.''

''Our cash position remains excellent, with no significant change in the past year. Expense control programs initiated last year are effective and create profit leverage for sales growth, which will be important if our sales goals are met.''

Michael T. Rumley, president of Microfluidics Corp. subsidiary, added that ''Midway through our second quarter we continue to expand our successful marketing programs aggressively and have gained confidence in the improved quality of our sales forecast. Most of our success this year has involved shipment of laboratory equipment.

''This momentum appears to be sustainable, and we hope to overlay this with significant orders for production units. We are negotiating actively with many potential buyers.''

FRAMINGHAM, MA (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Perini Corp. announced Friday that its board of directors has amended its shareholders rights plan, which was initially adopted in September 1988.

The amendments adopted by the board of directors make a number of changes to the rights plan. The terms of the rights have been modified so that the rights will separate from the company's common stock and become exercisable after a person acquires beneficial ownership of, or makes a tender offer that would result in ownership of, 20 percent or more of Perini's common stock.

A new provision has been added under which the rights would separate from the Perini common stock and become exercisable if the board of directors determined that a person who held 10 percent or more of Perini's common stock intended to or was likely to act in a manner adverse to the interests of the company and its shareholders.

A further amendment provides that, under certain circumstances and at the option of the board of directors, the company may exchange each right for Perini common stock or preferred stock.

WILTON CT (MAY 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Senior Service Corp. (NASDAQ:SENR; BSE:SNR), announced Friday that the culmination of the sales of its U.S. Book Publishing unit to Macmillan Inc. and its newspaper operation to Fifty-Five Plus Inc. have resulted in a significant increase in the company's cash position to over $12 million.

The company had sales of $9.4 million in fiscal 1989.

Commenting on the results of the divestitures, Senior Service President and Chief Executive Officer, Donald L. Luke, said, ''The cash sales, an exit from highly competitive slow growth businesses, place Senior Service in a strong position to accelerate the expansion of our specialty health care operations which are geared to largely unmet needs of Americans over 65 and represent an opportunity to grow profitably over the long term by establishing a competitive leadership position.''

Senior Service, the only public company in adult day care, is doubling the capacity of its adult day care chain and examining acquisitions which will continue its entry into the home health care field.

Both specialty health care operations service the fast growing market of Americans over 65 who need help in dealing with age-related disabilities.

Luke noted that ''Senior Service is developing businesses which fill the wide gap between hospital and nursing home care and represent substantial cost savings to the consumer.''

BERLIN (MAY 18) - A Jewish cemetery in East Berlin was daubed with anti-Semitic slogans overnight, the East German news agency ADN reported Friday.

The tomb of the playwright Bertolt Brecht and his wife Helene Weigel were similarly defaced on the night of May 4-5.

The Jewish community in East Berlin expressed its indignation at the desecrations and called for better security at Jewish graveyards.

Society could not live in freedom and democracy while Jews in Germany were tormented and discriminated against, the community said in a statement.

There has in recent days been a spate of desecration of Jewish tombs, especially in France.

LAGOS (MAY 18) - The Nigerian Bar Association called on the military government Friday to provide "speedy and fair" trials for suspects rounded up since an April 22 coup attempt by rebel troops.

The head of the bar association, Charles Idehen, also told a news conference here that the government should either try civilians currently held or release them fast "if it has no charges against them."

He called particularly for a decision on Lagos lawyer Olatunji Braithwaite, a former presidential candidate who was arrested on April 25 and has since been held by military intelligence under Decree No. 2, which provides for renewable, indefinite detention for those considered a threat to the state.

Mr. Braithwaite was detained after issuing a statement in which he called on President Ibrahim Babangida not to kill captured rebels and to take account of the "very grave allegations" made in a radio message by their representative,
Major Gideon Orkar.

Press reports citing an army monthly last weekend said the authorities had freed 127 officers and other servicemen. Shortly after the coup bid, the army said 14 officers, 200 other ranks and 200 civilians had been arrested. Rewards were offered for several wanted people, including a Lagos businessman charged with largely financing and providing logistic support for the plotters.

Before loyal troops put down the coup with an undisclosed number of dead and and injured, Major Orkar on national radio announced the overthrow of General Babangida, condemned what he likened to Moslem enslavement of the Christian and animist south of Nigeria, and declared that five northern states were "excised" from the federation.

The coup came after major reshuffles in December of the government and the policy-making Armed Forces Ruling Council, seen in some Christian army circles as strengthening the Moslem hold on power.

Earlier this month, the governor of Kaduna state in the north confirmed that some Christian leaders had been arrested there, but the government has taken pains to stress that the Christian community as such, which is on a par with Nigeria's Moslems, was not a target and not held responsible for the coup bid.

Gen. Babangida, who has been in power for more than four years and pledged to hand over to a civilian government in a carefully managed transition to democracy on October 1, 1992, said Thursday that the situation had returned to normal and told visiting African envoys that he would pursue government policy.

In another development Friday, a spokesman for Gen. Babangida announced that the independent Punch daily, closed by the State Security Services on April 29, would be allowed to publish again from the weekend.

But he did not say what would happen to Punch deputy editor Chris Mammah, arrested on April 27 for reasons that have not been officially disclosed. The paper after the coup published the full text of the rebels' radio message among other articles.

Punch, founded in 1974, is one of Lagos's most popular papers, with a staff of about 250, including some 100 journalists.

The papers of another Lagos press group, John West Publications, are still off the streets. Its owner and director, Lateef Jakande, was arrested on May 4 as he was due fly out to chair the annual meeting in Paris of the International Press Institute, and freed the following day.

The international human rights watchdog organization Amnesty International has called on the government to ensure fair trials for alleged coup plotters. Thirteen officers were executed after a 1985 coup bid against Gen. Babangida.

PESHAWAR, PAKISTAN (MAY 18) - Unidentified gunmen attacked an Austrian Relief Committee (ARC) office here and stole two vehicles used by the group for relief operations in Afghan refugee camps, police said Friday.

An ARC guard said at least four men intruded into his office overnight, gagged him and tied him up before fleeing with the committee's two vehicles, according to police.

A committee spokesman said the attackers also seized some documents including files relating to the ARC's operations in the North West Frontier Province bordering Afghanistan.

"We don't know the motive behind the attack," he said.

Police said they were investigating the incident but had made no arrests.

ARC is running relief projects in some of the 350 camps for 3.2 million Afghan refugees in Pakistan.

Some 60 relief organisations, grouped into the Agency Coordinating Body for Afghan Relief (ACBAR), expressed "concern over the growing attacks" against aid groups following an April 26 attack on Shelter Now International.

It warned that if the Pakistan government or the United Nations did not take adequate measures against elements "not representing the majority of Afghans," the humanitarian agencies might reconsider their presence in this country.

ACBAR components comprise some 6,300 Afghans, 800 Pakistanis and 350 expatriates.

In a communique this week it condemned the killing of two Afghan employees of relief agencies and the harassment of other Western agencies sponsoring programmes for women refugees.

BRASILIA (MAY 18) - Economy Minister Zelia Cardoso de Mello will meet Monday and Tuesday for preliminary discussions with the representatives of six of Brazil's major creditor banks in New York, a ministry spokesman said Friday.

Accompanied by Brazil's special envoy in charge of the foreign debt issue, Jorio Dauster, the minister will meet with representatives from Citibank, Manufacturer's Hanover, Chase Manhattan, Morgan Guaranty Trust, Chemical Bank and Banker's Trust.

Mr. Dauster said it was too early to begin negotiations and that the meetings early next week would be held strictly "to get to know the banks' representatives and to gather their ideas."

"We will only sit down at the negotiating table when we have a concrete proposal to negotiate," Mr. Dauster said.

The minister said she called for the preliminary meetings to demonstrate that Brazil, whose 114-billion-dollar foreign debt is the Third World's largest, was making efforts to put its financial house in order while maintining a certain level of economic growth.

JOHANNESBURG (MAY 18) - Nine black men are to appear before magistrates in the South African mining town of Welkom on charges of murder and assault, the South African Broadcasting Corporation reported Friday.

It said the charges were in connection with the death of two white men in Wednesday's violent clashes between black miners and security forces.

The nine men would appear in court Monday, the radio said.

It said a large number of mine workers Friday were signing an agreement renouncing violence and agreeing to go back to work.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok was in Welkom on Friday meeting union and business officials in the town in an attempt ''to stem the threat of violence'', according to another radio report.

PARIS (MAY 18) - Seventy-three percent of French people believe their country is becoming racist and 37 percent admit to having racist feelings at least occasionally, according to an opinion poll published by Figaro-Magazine.

Fifty-four percent of those surveyed considered that Jean-Marie Le Pen, leader of France's extreme right National Front party, "makes unacceptable statements" regarding immigrants.

But 29 percent thought Mr. Le Pen said out loud what they themselves believed but did not express openly.

More than two-thirds of those questioned wanted a halt to further immigration at the same time as better integration of those foreigners already living in France.

The survey found 16 percent in favour of a mass repatriation of immigrants already in the country, while 15 percent on the other hand wanted the opportunity for further immigration to be facilitated.

Fifty-two percent wanted acquisition of French citizenship to be made easier.

TOKYO, May 18 (AFP) - Japan's wholesale prices in April rose 0.6 percent from the preceding month, the fifth consecutive increase in the monthly figure but down from 0.7 percent in March, the Bank of Japan said Friday.

The latest increase took the year-on-year growth rate in wholesale prices to 2.7 percent, down from 3.9 percent the previous month, it said.

The central bank said the increase in the monthly figure reflected higher import prices stemming from the yen's decline against the dollar. Import prices jumped 2.1 percent from March and 13.3 percent from April last year while export prices grew 2.1 percent and 9.1 percent in the same period, it said.

Wholesale prices for domestic goods increased 0.1 percent from the preceding month and 0.7 percent from year earlier. The bank said the increase reflected higher prices for food, non-ferrous metals and petroleum products.

The overall wholesale price index stood at 90.9 against a 1985 base of 100.

TOKYO (MAY 18) - Japanese industry will continue to expand in the new fiscal year but at a slower pace than in the past, according to a study sponsored by the Fuji Bank.

Household consumption and investment outlays, although also growing more modestly than before, will continue to spur industrial growth, economists for the bank's research institute said in the May-June Fuji Economic Review.

But they added they were carefully watching how declining exports and labor shortages might affect the economy as a whole.

Industry will generally perform well, but some sectors are more likely than others to suffer due to rises in the cost of raw materials and interest rates.

The automobile, tourism and distribution sectors are expected to do well in response to high consumer demand, while construction will also benefit from an investment boom in the private sector.

But exports will increase slowly, the study said.

Steel sales to China, the Soviet Union and the United States will remain stagnant, while automobile exports will continue to decline because of increased production at Japanese plants abroad.

Continued strong domestic demand will encourage increased production - even if capacity in some sectors is limited by labor shortages - and more imports.

Investment outlays for factories and capital goods should remain strong during this fiscal year, beginning in April and ending in March 1991, the study said. Recent signs of inflated stock prices have nonetheless appeared in the manufacturing and mining sectors.

Economists at the institute said they were concerned that increased investment in the petrochemical, paper and automobile industries will eventually lead to overproduction, although higher interest rates should temper it somewhat.

TOKYO (MAY 18) - Japan's money supply grew at an annual rate of 13.2 percent in April, the fastest rate in 14 years, the Bank of Japan said Friday.

The increase compares with 11.6 percent in March and reversed a slowdown since February when the annual rate of money supply growth peaked at 11.8 per cent, then the fastest rate in 15 months.

A central bank official said the latest increase, the fastest since December 1976, mainly reflected inflows of funds from postal savings and an increase in new issues of commercial paper.

The broad measure of money supply, measuring M-2 plus certificates of deposit, totalled 480,300 billion yen (3,160 billion dollars) in April.

The central bank said that M-2 - cash in circulation plus demand and time deposits - rose 13.4 percent to 468,400 billion yen (3,081 billion dollars). Certificates of deposit increased 8.7 per cent to 11,900 billion yen (78,290 billion dollars), the bank said.

TRIPOLI (MAY 18) - Libya's national oil company and U.S. oil concerns are to meet soon in a European city to resume talks on a dispute over frozen U.S. oil assets in Libya, informed sources say here.

The Libyan company NOC and the five U.S. companies -- Occidental, Grace, Amerada, Marathon and CONOCO -- were reported to have virtually reached agreement last year to resolve the conflict over the freezing in 1986 of the U.S. companies' assets in Libya.

The agreement would have covered the return of the assets to the U.S. company and the supply to Libya of equipment.

But the equipment cannot now be sent, as President George Bush has renewed a U.S. embargo against Tripoli.

The embargo has slowed modernisation of Libyan oil installations and curbed new investment, but has not had a severe effect on production.

The country produces high-quality crude which last year brought in some 7.5 billion dollars, a reasonable sum although well below the 25 billion dollars seen in the heady oil crisis days of the 1970's.

Oil experts say Tripoli has shown moderation over the U.S. oil companies' operations here, noting that they have not been nationalised although the three-year deadline set by Libya to resolve the row is over.

Neither Washington nor Britain now maintains diplomatic relations with Libya, but despite this and successive U.S. trade embargoes in 1984 and 1986, there are some 1,500 to 2,000 U.S. nationals working in the oil industry here and almost 6,000 from Britain.

Oil companies from Canada, Yugoslavia, Romania and Bulgaria are currently carrying out oil exploration, and Tripoli continues to use its oil in barter trade with countries such as South Korea, Turkey, the Soviet Union, and some Italian companies.

The rest of Libya's production is largely sold on the Rotterdam spot market.

Production had soared to more tan 1.6 million barrels a day in the first quarter of this year, but is now being reduced to around the 1.233 million barrels a day agreed by the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

NEW DELHI (MAY 18) - Indian Airlines has decided to lease all of its fleet of 14 Airbus A-320's grounded since a plane crash three months ago and sell four more it has on order, a spokesman said Friday.

"The government has given the go-ahead," said a spokesman for the airline here, adding that the state-run Indian Airlines was in the process of floating global tenders for leasing the 14-strong fleet.

He said four more A-320's which India had contracted to buy would be sold.

India ordered 19 Airbus A-320 aircraft from the European consortium Airbus Industrie in 1986, and has already taken delivery of 15.

One of the planes crashed in southern Bangalore city February 14, killing 90 people.

All 14 remaining planes in the fleet were grounded after the disaster, one of the worst in India's aviation history, and the government has turned down pleas to resume their operations.

It has also opened an investigation into alleged corruption by the former government of Rajiv Gandhi in the deal.

The spokesman said Indian Airlines would dispose at a premium of the four A-320's which it was to have received in March and whose delivery was postponed because of the Bangalore crash.

But the government has taken no decision on a further 12 A-320's on which it has an option, airline sources said, adding that the 14 planes in the existing fleet would be leased out for at least six months.

The leasing and sale of the A-320's are expected to partially offset the loss of 1.4 million dollars which Indian Airlines has incurred every week since grounding the 14 Airbuses.

The February crash in Bangalore was the first involving a commercial flight of the A-320, the first in the Airbus line to be fully equipped with electronic flight controls.

The European consortium has blamed an "enormous blunder" by the pilots for the accident, saying they were not careful about their speed while landing. The theory has been questioned by Indian pilots.

SINGAPORE (MAY 18) - The Singapore International Monetary Exchange (Simex) has announced it will introduce one-year Eurodollar strip trading in June.

In a press statement issued late Thursday, Simex said the one-year Eurodollar strip, starting June 19, would enable users to simultaneously buy or sell a set of four consecutive, quarterly Eurodollar futures contracts on the basis of one price executed in a single transaction.

It said this method provided greater price and acquisition certainty and would therefore be a more precise and efficient way of trading consecutive Eurodollar contracts.

Teo Lep Quee, chairman of Simex Eurodollar Committee said: "This unique method of trading one-year Eurodollar strips will add an advantageous dimension to the Simex Eurodollar futures market."

He added it would enhance the overall efficiency of the market to meet the varied needs and trading interests of international participants.

Currently, users who wish to create one-year strips of Eurodollar future contracts have to purchase or sell the four consecutive Eurodollar contracts separately in four or more transactions, Simex said.

"In view of of the rising volume of interest rate swap transactions and a growing demand for Eurodollar strips, this trading innovation can be expected to be highly useful and beneficial to hedgers, market makers and traders of interest rate swaps," Simex said.

The trading hours of the new Eurodollar strips will be the same as those of Eurodollar futures in which such strips are based.

Simex introduced Eurodollar futures trading in the Asia-Pacific region in 1984 and since then, the three-month Eurodollar interest rate furtures contract has developed into a highly liquid market.

It is the most active of its kind outside the United States with participants from North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific.

MELBOURNE, Australia (MAY 18) - The Australian Wool Corporation (AWC) on Friday ruled out cutting the floor price for wool despite the industry's crisis.

AWC Chairman Hugh Beggs said the corporation wanted to keep the floor price at 8.70 Australian dollars (6.62 U.S.) a kilo for the 1990-91 season despite the refusal of overseas buyers to purchase fleece at this price.

Wool prices plunged following recent mild European winters, the withdrawal of China and the Soviet Union from the market and an increased use of synthetics. The price slide is worsening Australia's yawning current account deficit.

The AWC this week was forced to buy record amounts of bales on sale to protect the floor price, thus adding to its already record stockpile of 2.45 million bales.

The AWC reiterated its call for Canberra to boost the wool levy from 10 per cent to 25 percent of earnings so it could boost the funds needed to stash more wool.

Prime Minister Bob Hawke's Labor government on Thursday passed a law that limited the rise in the wool levy to 20 percent, a move analysts said was designed to pressure the AWC into cutting its floor price.

Wool growers have resisted slashing the floor price because they fear such a move could destroy the reputation of the reserve price scheme which has given them a guaranteed minimum return for about 18 years.

The Wool Council, which represents growers, meets next week to thrash out solutions to the crisis in the industry including reviewing the floor price. Any action taken by the AWC must be approved by the council.

BREST, France (MAY 18) - Cross-Channel ferry company Brittany Ferries said here Friday it was ordering a new vessel from Finnish shipyard Masa Yards.

The 27,000 ton ferry will be 161 metres (531 feet) long and 26 metres (85 feet) wide, with a top speed of 21 knots, and is to be delivered in April 1992.

It will be used on the route between Caen and Portsmouth.

The Jumbo class ferry will be able to carry 2,120 passengers, with sleeping berths for 710.

The contract for the new ferry is to be signed in Helsinki next week, but the two companies are also negotiating for construction of a second car ferry for delivery in early 1992.

The value of the two contracts would total some 1.2 billion francs (218 million dollars).

Brittany Ferries has a fleet of 13 vessels and carried more than two million cross-Channel passengers last year.

DARMSTADT, West Germany (MAY 18) - West German hair care products group Wella said Friday that its consolidated net profit rose four percent last year over the 1988 level to 73.2 million Deutsche marks (44.3 million dollars).

Sales were up nine percent at 2.42 billion Deutsche marks (1.46 billion dollars).

The results were poorer than expected, largely due to difficulties on the group's main markets, Japan and the United States, and problems with French subsidiary Rene Garraud.

The group had got off to a good start in 1990, however, with pre-tax profit up 6.9 percent and sales up 6.1 percent, a growth level the company hopes to maintain for the rest of the year.

In 1989, staffing problems and a difficult market saw Japanese sales down 10 per cent to 200 million Deutsche marks, and profit down to two million, with a further fall in sales expected this year.

Wella said it suffered significant losses in the United States, largely due to exceptional expenses, but did not give any figures. It said the U.S. operation would turn a profit this year.

French beauty products subsidiary Rene Garraud remained in the red last year, but its losses were halved over the 1988 level.

There was better news from French perfume maker Rochas, acquired in 1987, where profit was up 40 percent and expected to double this year.

But chairman Karl Heinz Krutzki said that the Japanese, U.S. and Garraud problems had curbed 1989 profit too much for the company to raise its dividend, which remained at nine Deutsche marks for the sixth year in a row.

Wella is planning a five million Deutsche mark capital raising exercise, with shareholders being offered one new share for each five old ones, and is to introduce its shares on the West Berlin, Amsterdam and Vienna stock markets in the coming months.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (MAY 18) - The West German bank Commerzbank hopes to raise its dividend this year, chairman Walter Seipp told the annual general meeting here Friday.

West Germany's third largest bank announced an unchanged dividend of nine Deutsche marks for 1989, while its chief competitors Deutsche Bank and Dresdner Bank both raised theirs by two Deutsche marks, to 14 and 12.

But the Commerzbank hopes to catch up at least partly on this gap in 1990, if the good showing since January continues until the end of the year, Mr. Seipp said.

Parent company Commerzbank AG saw its partial operating profit on client operations only rise 26.4 percent in the first four months of this year over the same period in 1989.

Total operating profit, which includes the bank's operations on its own account, was up "more than 30 percent," Mr. Seipp said.

Comparing the first four months' figures with a third of total profit for last year - the system more commonly used by West German banks, partial operating profit was up 1.2 percent.

GENEVA (MAY 18) - East German airline Interflug has said it plans to rejoin the International Air Transport Association from July 1, IATA said here Friday.

Interflug would however take part only in the organisation's Trade Association activities, covering such areas as technical, medical, legal and security matters, and would not be part of tariff coordination activities.

The July 1 date coincides with the implementation of an inter-German treaty on economic, monetary and social union under which East Germany is to adopt the West German currency and pledges to introduce a market economy.

Interflug's admission brings to 190 the number of IATA full and associate members.

ROME (MAY 18) - A killer fly native to Latin America which has appeared in Libya has created ''an explosive and very dangerous situation and must be eradicated immediately,'' U.N. Food and Agriculture Organisation director Edouard Saouma told 40 donor nations at an emergency meeting here on Friday.

He proposed an 85 million dollar project to stop the butcher blowfly from breeding by introducing hundreds of millions of laboratory-produced sterile male flies into the present population.

The large greenish-brown fly with orange eyes, of the species Hominivorax (Latin for maneating), turned up in Libya nearly a year ago, and the authorities have spent 7.5 million dollars trying to get rid of it using the traditional techniques of spraying with insecticide and controlling the movement of herds.

The fly lays its eggs in scratches on warm-blooded animals, man included, where the larvae feed, causing wounds which can prove fatal in the long run.

The current infestation covers 18,000 square kilometres (7,200 square miles) of Libyan territory 30 kilometres (18 miles) south of the capita Tripoli and 60 kilometres (36 miles) from the Tunisian border.

Mr. Saouma warned that failure to intervene now could make eradication of the parasite impossible.

If it spread to Tunisia, Egypt, Sudan and Algeria, it could cause losses annually of 250 million dollars among the 70 million head of livestock in the region, he said.

In the longer term, it could affect all sub-Saharan Africa, nondomestic animals included, southern Europe and the Middle East.

BEIRUT (MAY 18) - Moslem resistance fighters said on Friday they stormed a position held by the Israeli army and their surrogate militia in southern Lebanon, killing five soldiers and militiamen and wounding one.

A statement by the Islamic Resistance, the military arm of Hezbollah, said their fighters were observing a position of the Israeli army on ''Radar Hill'' near Shoumariyeh, west of the Beqaa Valley.

''When a number of Israeli officers and militiamen from the Southern Lebanese Army (Sla) approached the position, our fighters opened fire and killed five of the Zionists and their agents and wounded one,'' the statement said.

There was no immediate confirmation from Israel on the incident. The Moslem resistance fighters would like to force the Israeli army and the Sla militia out of the security zone in southern Lebanon.

LONDON (MAY 18) - Britain's largest investment fund manager, Globe Investment Trust, said Friday that a hostile 1.4 billion pound (1.7 billion dollars) takeover bid by British Coal's pension fund undervalued it by 18 percent.

Globe estimated its net assets at 225 pence per action as of May 11, above the 191 pence proposed by the state-owned coal company's pension fund, which already holds 34 percent of Globe capital.

Globe's board said it was recommending "total rejection" of the offer, and warned shareholders that if the takeover were successful they would lose the final dividend of four pence expected for 1989.

Globe also announced Friday that its net attributable profit rose 28 per cent last year from 27.1 million pounds to 34.7 million, with dividend -- including the four pence final dividend - up 16 percent at 5.78 pence.

Globe shares were up five pence at 196 in trading on the London stock market following Friday's announcement.

The British Coal pension fund takeover offer was launched last month at a time when the stock market was on a downtrend and Globe shares were underpriced in relation to the value of funds managed.

But the Footsie 100 shares index has since risen 4.5 percent, making an increased offer in the takeover bid almost inevitable, analysts said.

NANTERRE, France (MAY 18) - A commercial court here on Friday agreed to allow a Swiss firm to take up a lease-management contract to run French electrical retailer Nasa-Electronique, which has been put into receivership.

Nasa-Electronique made a loss of more than 251 million francs (45.6 million dollars) in the year to the end of August 1988, and 160 million francs last year, taking the cumulative deficit to more than 400 million francs (72.7 million dollars).

The Nanterre-based company was put into receivership at the end of April, and on Friday the court authorised the official receiver to go ahead with a 12-month lease-management deal for Swiss retailer Interdiscount to run the company.

Interdiscount has pledged to inject 100 million francs (18 million dollars) into Nasa, which will ensure that its 600 staff can be kept on, and will have to make proposals to turn the company round during the 12-month contract.

It would afterwards have the option to buy Nasa.

Interdiscount has an annual turnover of some two billion Swiss francs (1.4 billion dollars).

LONDON (MAY 18) - Iraq is hoping to resolve a border dispute with Kuwait by abandoning its territorial claims in exchange for Kuwaiti financial aid to develop its oil deposits, the specialist magazine Energy Compass said Friday.

Senior Iraqi officials are studying a plan whereby Iraq would drop its claim to the strategic islands of Bubiyan and Warbah and reach agreement with Kuwait on delineation of their 200 kilometer (125 miles) common border.

Energy Compass said that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein could make a symbolic gesture on the matter during an Arab summit in Baghdad on May 28.

But reports of Iraq's plans had been met with "cautious scepticism" in Kuwait, the magazine added, citing a Kuwaiti source as saying that his country would not believe such proposals until they had been seen in a tangible form.

Agreement on the border issue between Kuwait and Iraq would have major consequences for the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), of which both countries are members, Energy Compass said.

MONROVIA (MAY 18) - President Samuel Doe called on all Liberians on Friday to take up arms against rebels fighting government forces in the West African country since December 24.

Mr. Doe told county superintendents, chiefs and elders at a meeting Friday to "go and tell your people to take cutlasses, shotguns and bow and arrows and go into the bush to fight the rebels."

Dressed in his five-star commander-in-chief uniform, Mr. Doe reinstated all retired and reserve military personnel into active service, and ordered the defense ministry to intensify attacks against rebel positions.

He said the rebels, who are being led by fugitive former top civil servant Charles Taylor, have rejected his repeated appeals lay down their arms.

"If the rebels cannot surrender, I will make them surrender," Mr. Doe said.

He urged citizens of all ages to take up arms and defeat the rebels "without compromise," adding that as commander-in-chief and president he was obligated to see that "peace was restored at all cost."

Mr. Doe repeated accusations that the Ivory Coast, Burkina Faso and Libya were directly involved in the rebel insurgency. He charged that recruits from these countries were fighting alongside the rebels, and said five Libyan soldiers were killed by government forces.

Mr. Doe then appealed to citizens of Bong and Grand Bassa counties where rebels have extended their activities to cooperate with the Liberian army in rooting out the pockets of rebels in these areas.

The captial Monrovia was calm Friday with business as usual.

Roberts International Airport, 55 kilometers (35 miles) from here, was said to be functioning normally.

Conssumer, however, have had to pay double the price of some basic commodities and residents, fearing a rebel attack on the capital, have bought up stocks of canned fish, beef and beans.

Some consumers have accused businessmen of hoarding supplies and profiteering. Businessmen denied the charges, arguing that the shortage was due to a lack of foreign exchange.

KABUL (MAY 18) - The Afghan government is set to adopt sweeping constitutional changes by the end of the month to overcome a communist image and become a more democratic, free-market, Islamic society, its officials say.

A government-appointed commission has recommended fundamental changes to the 1987 constitution, allowing foreign banks and private insurance firms to open business here for the first time and deregulating import-export trade.

The constitutional privileges of President Najibullah's People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA) would be removed, allowing political pluralism in the country which had one party rule previously.

Presidential spokesman Sarwar Yourish said the recommendations will go before a loya jirga, or grand national assembly, which is likely to meet within a week to 10 days.

Mr. Yourish said the 30-member commission headed by Vice-President Abdul Raheem Hatif has also recommended that Afghanistan be officially recognised as an Islamic state.

However, minority religions would be given constitutional protection, he said.

''If you say we are heading towards a modern, democratic, capitalist system you are not wrong,'' Mr. Yourish told reporters here Thursday.

The sweeping political and economic reforms are basically in line with Mr. Najibullah's strategy to undermine his opposition and marginalise them politically ahead of the May 30 superpower summit, diplomats here said.

However they cautioned that introducing reforms that would affect the personal privileges PDPA members have been used to enjoying would attract opposition from within the party.

The president also cannot ignore the considerable numbers in the armed forces and the party backing former defence minister Shah Nawaz Tanai, who led an abortive coup on March 6 and has since reportedly fled the country, diplomats said.

Mr. Najibullah declared last week that neither the Soviet-backed PDPA nor the government was communist, and if anyone in the party or the government had behaved like a communist in the past that could not determine the nature of the present regime.

Profits will continue to rise in the manufacturing and assembly sectors, the study said.

But earnings will fall in heavy industry such as steel and petrochemicals, which are affected by the rising cost of raw materials, interest rate hikes, slightly weaker demand and a soft yen.

Differences in firms' ability to diversify and dependence on debt will level out Japanese industrial performance.

But the Fuji Bank specialists predicted growth in the textile, home appliance, electrical equipment, electronics, and machine tool sectors, while they expect stagnation in the oil refining, semi-conductor and electrical energy sectors.

PARKNASILLA, IRELAND (MAY 18) - Foreign ministers from the 12 EEC countries are preparing for a major debate here this weekend on whether they should cede some sovereignty in the interests of European political unity.

The European Council of heads of state and of government has instructed the foreign ministers to study the problem before the council holds its next meeting in Dublin on June 25 and 26.

The unification of Germany and changes in East Europe have given new urgency to a debate on the political union of the 12 members of the European Economic Community (EEC) which is held by many to be the implied objective of the Treaty of Rome. The treaty, which was signed in 1957, codified the founding principles of the European Communities.

The first task facing the ministers here will be to list the growing number of problems and agree on a method of overcoming them. French and West German diplomatic sources here said that to begin with it would be better to avoid trying to define what union might eventually mean. British sources said it will be necessary to define firstly what political must not be. The Italians favor an all-out federalist approach.

Two months ago Belgium circulated a detailed memorandum on this aspect of the reform of EEC institutions, but other countries have not made much progress on this. One diplomat said: "We have not yet turned over all the cards which are on the table."

France and West German together took the initiative in April, and they will be expected to give details of their proposals. A French spokesman was unable to say whether the two countries would present a document together.

The Irish government has circulated a note of subjects for discussion in the context of the instructions given by the European Council meeting. The list ranges from the question of increasing the democratic accountability of EEC institutions, to the creation of a common foreign policy to a definition of EEC citizenship.

The point of view to be expressed by Italy was awaited with particular interest since Italian ministers will replace the Irish as presidents of EEC ministerial meetings for six months from July.

Italy will therefore hold the presidency of an inter-governmental conference on political union, if the European Council decides in June that such a conference should be held.

The last European Council meeting in Dublin was not able to announce a decision on this because of misgivings by Britain, Denmark and Portugal. However, it told the foreign ministers to begin to prepare the way so that the next council meeting would be better equipped to take a decision.

The inter-governmental conference, if held, would coincide with another meeting which is due to begin in December on economic and monetary union. Economic union would also imply changes in the way that the EEC institutions operate.

Britain has said that it intends to take part in the discussions, and it has already put forward some ideas. The British agree on the need to improve the powers of the European Parliament on financial matters and they agree that there should be an extension for the use of majority voting at the council of ministers.

The British have also said that they want to see improvement in the way that EEC decisions are put into effect. They have proposed that a report should be made every six months on how decisions have been applied, and that the European Court of Justice should have greater powers of enforcement.

Britain also wants to see an improvement in links between the European parliament and national parliaments so that national legislatures retain their prerogatives even when, in the words of EEC Commission President Jacques Delors "more than 80 percent of legislation is of Community origin".

Colombo (MAY 18) - More than 10,000 plantation workers went on strike Friday to demand the release of a trade union leader they say was arrested for organising a protest against the repatriation of Tamil estate workers to India.

The arrest of P.C handrasekeram came after Deputy Defence Minister Ranjan Wijeratne said that more than 100,000 Tamils who did not hold Sri Lankan citizenship would be repatriated because they were depriving Sri Lankans of jobs in the plantation sector.

Police said the unionist had been arrested for alleged involvement with a militant group in the Central hills, but workers claimed he was detained for organising an anti-repatriation protest.

Following Handrasekeram's arrest, at least 20 workers have gone on hunger strike in Thalawakele and 200 more in the town of Hatton, 240 kilometres from here.

In a separate development, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam briefly detained 12 policemen after ambushing them in the eastern province at Samanthurai, about 350 kilometres from here. Six of the policemen were later hospitalized.

Damascus (MAY 18) - Pakistani Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto Friday ended a two-day visit to Syria and left for Jordan on the latest leg of a tour of Islamic capitals to drum up support for her country in its conflict with India over Kashmir.

Syrian officials said Bhutto and Syrian President Hafez Assad agreed during their talks on a number of issues concerning bilateral relations. No details were given.

Bhutto and Assad ''underlined the traditional friendly ties between the two countries'', the Syrian daily Tishrin Friday said.

Syria was the third leg of Bhutto's tour, which has already taken her to Iran and Turkey. The Pakistani premier has said she plans to seek support to attain self-determination in Jammu-Kashmir

Pakistan and India have been engaged in a war of words since January when Moslem rebels in the Indian state of Jammu-Kashmir escalated their longtime fight for independence from New Delhi.

India accused Pakistan, a predominantly Moslem nation, of training and arming those rebels. Pakistan denies the claims and says India has unleashed a bloody crackdown on a movement for self-determination.

BERLIN (MAY 18) - The East German government on Friday studied proposals to restrict visits to East Germany by foreigners, and particularly by Romanians, the ADN news agency reported.

The official responsible for foreigners in East Berlin, Anetta Kahane, said that Romanian nationals might soon be required to obtain a formal invitation to visit East Germany.

Romanians can now stay in East Germany for up to 30 days without a visa.

In recent weeks several thousand refugees from Romania, most of whom are gypsies, have arrived in East Germany. Some of them have been housed in an army barracks and in a gymnasium.

East German Foreign Minister Markus Meckel said Thursday that East Germany would sign the Geneva convention on refugees before East and West Germany achieved economic, monetary and social union on July 1.

East Germany would then introduce laws regarding visits by foreigners and the right of asylum which would be as close as possible to the law in West Germany.

MAPUTO (MAY 18) - The death toll from a cholera outbreak in the northern Mozambican city of Tete has risen to 24, according to a Radio Mozambique report Friday.

Cholera has been raging in the city since April 30, and so far 621 cases of the disease have been diagnosed.

The ministry of health suspects that the disease was brought into Tete from neighbouring Malawi. Three cases were notified at the border post of Zobue in February, and two of them were people who had just visited Malawi.

But the speed with which the disease has spread in Tete city is clearly linked to poor hygiene. At the end of April a violent storm knocked out the electricity supply to the city for four days, and the water treatment station could not function.

Many Tete residents resorted to drinking water from the river Zambezi. But the Zambezi is heavily polluted, since it receives sewage from the city.

The massive influx of cholera patients has severely strained the capacity of Tete's small provincial hospital.

A new ward has had to be opened, and recovering patients are being housed in a large tent.

An epidemiologist and 16 nurses have been sent from Maputo to assist the Tete health authorities.

ISTANBUL, TURKEY (MAY 18) - A Uygur nationalist living in exile in Turkey Friday rejected Chinese accusations that he fomented Moslem separatism in the far-western region of Xinjiang in bloody riots on April 5-6.

The charge was levelled in a May 10 commentary on Xinjiang's state-run television, more than a month after the Moslem riots in Baren village, south of the Silk Road town of Kashgar.

Isa Yusef Alptekin, an 89-year-old Uygur nationalist and secretary-general of the autonomous government of Eastern Turkistan (Xinjiang) until the 1949 communist takeover in China, acknowledged that he had been "struggling for the independence of Turkistan for 60 years".

"I advise my friends in Eastern Turkistan but Eastern Turkistan has never been Chinese soil", he said.

He rejected claims that he was a separatist, saying he was "fighting against Chinese oppression and for the freedom and independence of Eastern Turkistan which was colonized by Beijing".

Mr. Alptekin recalled that China built the Great Wall to "ward off the hordes of our grandfathers, the Turks".

Eastern Turkistan has always been outside the Great Wall and was only militarily occupied by the Chinese, he said.

Mr. Alptekin also rejected charges that he was promoting "pan-Islamic thought", as alleged in the Chinese commentary.

That claim was aimed at "isolating the struggle for liberation of the people of Eastern Turkistan from non-Islamic peoples and powers", he said.

Sixty percent of Xinjiang's 40.3 million people -- spread across an area three times the size of France -- are Moslems, the majority of them Turkic-speaking Uygurs, Kazaks and Kirgiz.

Official reports say 22 police and civilians were killed in a "counter-revolutionary armed rebellion" in Baren, blamed on an obscure separatist group, the Islamic Party of East Turkistan.

Mr. Alptekin said he knew of no such party, but had heard of the foundation in 1987 of a Party of Liberation in Ying-Yang.

Rejecting any idea of an armed uprising, Mr. Alptekin said the Chinese army outnumbered the Eastern Turkistan people and was equipped with sophisticated weapons, while no arms shipments were made to Eastern Turkistan.

"An armed insurrection would be a pretext for a new massacre," he said, suggesting that Chinese troops had already massacred innocent people.

Mr. Alptekin has been living in Istanbul since 1954.

Diplomats in Beijing doubt Mr. Alptekin has much influence in Xinjiang today, saying abject poverty, limitations on religious worship, and an upsurge in Islamic nationalism elsewhere in Asia are bigger factors.

LONDON (MAY 18) - Rates continued to firm this week on the tanker market, with many Japanese charterers eager to cover their needs, London brokers E.A. Gibson said Friday in their latest report.

VLCCs (very large crude carriers, 200,000-270,000 tons) loading in the Gulf continued to improve earnings, although at a slower pace than the previous week. However, smaller crude carriers (around 80,000 tons) had to struggle to maintain their rates, due to lack of business.

Clean rates in that area were steady for all sizes of vessels.

MANILA (MAY 16) - An international conference on Vietnamese boat people ended here Friday without resolving divisive issues such as a threat by asylum nations to forcibly send some home from July 1.

The conference, held under the auspicies of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), was also marked by expressions of concern about a recent upsurge of arrivals of Cambodian boat people, an official statement said.

The meeting was called to monitor the progress of a plan drawn up in June, 1989 in Geneva regarding the fate of Vietnamese boat people.

Some participants have called for another meeting this June to resolve differences, but no agreement was reached on this, the statement said.

The United States and Vietnam have opposed a plan by asylum countries to start forcibly sending home Vietnamese "non-refugees", a term for people who flee for economic reasons, not to avoid political persecution.

More than 100,000 boat people are now housed in first-asylum countries, with Hong Kong accounting for more than half of the total, U.N. figures show. Most of those who arrived in recent years are regarded as "non-refugees".

Vietnamese Ambassador to the Philippines Hoang Manh Tu said in a statement to the 30-nation conference Friday that Hanoi would take back more boat people who agree to return home voluntarily, but condemned threats of forced repatriation.

VIENNA (MAY 18) - The 16-member North Atlantic Treaty Organization has made four new proposals at the conference on confidence and security-building measures (CSBM) here aimed at advancing talks on an agreement to be submitted to a proposed East-West summit later this year.

The document is to complement an accord on conventional disarmament in Europe expected to be ready for approval by a summit meeting of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE).

Bjoern Lian, head of the Norwegian delegation at the CSBM talks, said preparations for the summit could start in July.

The NATO proposals include the possibility to demand clarifications on "unusual military activities" from a signatory of a CSBM agreement and refer to risks related to involuntary incidents such as the violation of foreign airspace by military aircraft whose pilots eject to safety after an accident.

NATO suggested that CSCE member nations invite visitors to watch routine activities at combat aircraft bases. Information on the build-up of military infrastructure should also be exchanged, according to the plan.

NATO favours an increase of exchanges of high-ranking military and defence officials and the installation of more rapid communication systems such as better wire services, direct link-ups of computer terminals or the use of existing commercial networks.

"I believe that these ideas bring an important new dimension to the work and the direction of these negotiations", U.S. head delegate John Maresca said of the proposals.

PARIS (MAY 18) - Real estate prices in central Paris were set for a new record high as the private Paribas bank negotiated the sale of an 11,000-square metre building to the AGF insurance group for more than 1.5 billion francs (270 million dollars), bank and insurance sources said here Friday.

The price puts a 140,000-franc (25,000-dollar) tag on the square metre in the building.

The previous record for Paris real estate was only shattered last month when the Hachette press group sold 40,093 square metres near the Bourse (stock exchange) for 2.78 billion francs (500 million dollars), or 80,000 francs (14,000 dollars) per square metre.

Japanese investors have paid close to 200,000 francs (36,000 dollars) per square metre for two prestigious town houses on the Place de l'Etoile at the upper reach of the Champs Elysees, but they are being used as company headquarters and not simple offices.

BRUSSELS (MAY 18) - The 12 European Community states Friday called on Burma's military government to end what was termed its repressive and anti-democratic policies.

A statement said the Rangoon administration should recognise the Burmese people's striving for a democratic society based on free and fair elections.

The statement condemned the Burmese government for excluding opposition candidates from the electoral process and not allowing in neutral poll-watchers or the international press corps.

Rangoon was further condemned for its ''continued grave violation of human rights'' plus its practice of ''arbitrary arrests'' and forced resettlement policy.

LAHORE, PAKISTAN (MAY 18) - At least eight people were killed and 44 wounded Friday in a powerful explosion in a crowded part of this Punjab city bordering India, police said.

A wooden box, which police suspect contained a timed device, exploded under the bench of a roadside vendor outside a cinema in Bhati Gate area of the city. It went off just after the show had ended.

The blast, which damaged several vehicles and shattered window panes, left eight people dead, police said. Some 44 people were taken to hospitals, and 10 were in critical condition, doctors said.

The explosion Friday was fourth in Lahore, Pakistan's second-largest city, in the past six weeks. A bomb blast in a passenger train on May 6 left more than a dozen people dead.

Tension has been increasing recently between India and Pakistan because of the secessionist movement waged by Moslem militants in the Indian-controlled section of Kashmir.

The talks centred on peace and security in Africa, bilateral and regional issues, and the civil wars in Mozambique and the Sudan, for which Kenya has been offering itself as a mediator.

Sudanese rebel leader John Garang, whose Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) holds much of south Sudan, is expected in Nairobi to hold a meeting with Mr. Cohen, according to diplomatic sources.

Mr. Cohen arrived in Nairobi Thursday for a two-day official visit to Kenya.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) - Hungarian President Arpad Goenz asked Friday for U.S. help in ensuring that the Soviet Union withdraws its troops from Eastern Europe on schedule -- but warned against a too-fast pullout.

Mr. Goenz told reporters he had asked U.S. President George Bush during a 35-minute meeting at the White House to bring the subject up during a superpower summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in Washington May 31 - June 3.

Mr. Goenz, a non-communist who is interim president of Hungary, said withdrawing the troops too fast could lead to instability in the Soviet Union, which did not have enough housing at home for all its troops in other countries.

All 68,000 Soviet soldiers in Hungary are due to return to the Soviet Union by June next year.

A White House statement said Mr. Goenz and Mr. Bush agreed on the need for dialogue between Moscow and the breakaway republic of Lithuania.

MUZAFFARABAD, KASHMIR (MAY 17) - A Pakistani opposition leader Friday warned the government in Islamabad against rigging polls in Pakistani-held Kashmir on May 21.

The region's prime minister, Sikan Dar Hayat Khan, said if the ruling Pakistan People's Party ''manipulated'' the Kashmir polls, the nine-party Pakistan opposition alliance would reject the result.

Sikan and other alliance leaders told a mass rally here that Islamabad should scrap the Simla Accord signed with India 18 years ago, which they said sold out their region.

''We shall have to review our relations with Pakistan in future because (the central government of Premier Benazir) Bhutto was trying to create rifts among Kashmiris,'' Sikan said.

Following a war in December 1971, India and Pakistan signed in July 1972 the Simla agreement which provided for the withdrawal of all troops from occupied territories.

Indian soldiers have been fighting seperatist Moslem rebels in the Indian-held part of Kashmir for several months.

ALGIERS (MAY 18) - South African black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela offered to mediate in the Western Sahara conflict Friday and sharply criticised Morocco for violating ''the Sahrawi people's right to self-determination''.

Mandela, ending a three-day visit here, said he condemned Morocco ''without reservation'', accusing the country of seeking to ''force its colonial yoke on the Western Sahara''.

Morocco has been fighting a guerrilla war with the Sahrawi liberation movement Polisario for control of the Western Sahara since 1976, when Spain abandoned the former colony.

Mandela met Friday with the prime minister of the Polisario-declared Sahrawi Arab Democratic Republic, Mahfoud Ould Ali Beiba, who invited Mandela to visit the Polisario-held sections of the Western Sahara.

In a related development, Mandela's visit to Kenya, planned for Monday, has been postponed until further notice, a statement issued by Kenyan Foreign Minister Wilson Ndolo Ayah said Friday night.

The visit had been postponed due to Mandela's heavy commitment in South Africa, it said.

Mandela, vice president of the African National Congress, is currently on a tour of African countries which has taken him to Zambia, Angola, Libya and Algeria.

ABIDJAN (MAY 18) - Ivory Coast President Felix Houphouet-Boigny on Friday bowed to demands by disgruntled army conscripts in a further bid to restore order in the West African country wracked by months of social unrest.

The government announced in an official statement that young army soldiers, who temporarily took control of the airport and television here Wednesday before returning to barracks, "will be completely re-enlisted" after their current service.

All four army companies of conscripts will keep their jobs after their terms run out in June and December 1990 and 1991.

The last group of soldiers to demonstrate for better conditions, those from Third Infantry Battalion in Bouake some 400 kilometers (250 miles) north of here, returned to barracks without incident Friday.

The Bouake conscripts took to the streets overnight Thursday carrying no arms, complaining that the government's promises to them "were not explicit enough".

Other young troops demonstrated in Yamoussoukro, the country's political capital and birthplace of Mr. Houphouet-Boigny, and Daloa.

Officials said Thursday that six gendarmes loyal to the government were shot and wounded during Wednesday's disruption in Abidjan, when conscripts commandeered vehicles and swept into town firing bullets in the air.

Defense Minister Jean Konan Banny earlier said no-one had been shot.

In Friday's statement, authorities directed those wanting to leave the army to inform their commanders "in sufficient time," adding that recruitment of new soldiers would be "suspended until further notice."

Job security has been on top of the soldiers' list of demands.

TYRE, LEBANON (MAY 18) - Israeli troops on Friday shot and wounded a Finnish soldier serving in the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, a UNIFIL source said.

The incident occurred when troops fired 40 shots at an uninhabited house in Taibeh village on the outskirts of the Israeli-imposed "security zone" in south Lebanon, the source said. It was not clear why they were shooting.

A Finnish soldier posted nearby was hit in the stomach by a bullet.

The source gave no details on the soldier's condition but said he was taken to hospital at UNIFIL headquarters in Naqoura, near the Israeli border south of this port city.

Nearly 6,000 soldiers from nine countries serve in UNIFIL. The force was set up in 1978 to help the Lebanese Army deploy along the border with Israel but has yet to fulfill its task.

KATHMANDU (MAY 18) - King Birendra of Nepal has granted an amnesty to more than 150 political activists on the recommendation of the new coalition government, the Royal Palace announced here Friday.

The activists belonged to the Nepali Congress, the largest group in the interim government, and various factions of the country's s communist parties, according to a Royal Palace communique.

King Birendra "has, in accordance with the constitution of Nepal, remitted the sentences and fines handed down by different courts of law to those persons serving prison terms under the association and organization control act of 1962," state radio said, quoting the Royal Palace press secretariat.

A senior official in the prime minister's office said that the coalition government had also recommended that the king grant an amnesty to more than 40 people detained for involvement in pro-democracy protests earlier this year.

NAIROBI (MAY 18) - U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Herman Cohen met the leader of the Sudan People's Liberation Armyt (Spla), Colonel John Garang, in Nairobi on Friday in a bid to narrow differences about an internationally controlled ceasefire in war-torn southern Sudan.

The talks, held in the residence of U.S. Ambassador Smith Hempstone, lasted over two hours and were ''frank, cordial and productive'', a communique issued by the two sides said.

''The objective was to explore ways of moving towards peace and democracy in Sudan. The process will continue,'' the statement said.

Earlier in the day, Cohen had met Kenyan President Daniel Arap Moi.

The war in southern Sudan, where Christian and animist rebels have been fighting since 1983 against dominance by Moselms of the north, has claimed an estimated 500,000 victims over the last four years due to warfare and starvation.

Since the military junta led by General Omer Beshir took power in Khartoum in june last year, two meetings with the Spla have failed to produce any results towards peace and national reconciliation.

BRASILIA (MAY 18) - Latin America's southern cone countries are collaborating to stop the flow of cocaine through the frontiers of Argentina, Paraguay, Chile, Uruguay, Bolivia and Brazil, a police source here said Friday.

Police from the six nations met Thursday and Friday at Iguacu Falls on the Brazil-Paraguay border to determine how to coordinate efforts to cut the flow of cocaine from the "Golden Triangle," (Bolivia, Paraguay and Brazil.)

But Brazilian police spokesman Joao Martins declined to reveal details about the joint operations, explaining, "We can't give the drug traffickers any warning."

Huge expanses of land, some of which is under water six months of the year, between Mato Gross state in Brazil and Bolivia and Paraguay makes surveillance without radar for landing strips and drops sites difficult, he said.

But he added the United States had provided an airplane with a 215,000-dollar photographic detection device. Helicopters and radar installations to track clandestine flights are also slated to be delivered for the effort.

The anti-drug trafficking campaign will also include strict controls on the sales of ether, acetone and sulfuric acid -- chemicals that are used in the processing coca paste into cocaine, Mr. Martins said.

There has been a surge in the number of cocaine seizures in the region, nearly a ton in 1987, according to the latest available statistics, compared to several kilos in previous years.

The traffic has grown even though a large number of cocaine processing laboratories have been destroyed, indicating the southern cone has become an important route for the Medellin drug cartel, observers said.

BRUSSELS (MAY 18) - The European Economic Community's executive on Friday warned Austria over a subsidy to Chrysler Corp. of the United States for building an Austrian car plant that will compete with EEC firms.

A European Commission spokesman told reporters that the Community "has the possibility" of imposing taxes on cars produced by the plant in order to offset the effects of unfair competition.

That possibility features in a 1972 EEC-Austrian agreement but has never been invoked by the Community.

Commission President Jacques Delors brought up the subsidy question on Friday when he met with Austrian Foreign Minister Alois Mock, the spokesman said.

Mr. Mock told a press conference that "the problem will be treated at expert level", but stressed that the aid was aimed at helping a depressed region.

The subsidy, of 433 million schillings (37.5 million dollars), was agreed last year as an encouragement to build a plant in the Graz region which is scheduled to produce 25,000 Voyager family vans by 1994.

Eighty percent of the output is likely to targeted at the lucrative EEC market of 320 million consumers, according to EEC sources.

The French government -- whose state carmaker, Renault, has a model in direct competition with the Voyager -- objected to the subsidy.

The Community is "disturbed" by the size of the aid, which amounts to one-third of Chrysler's initial investment in the plant, the spokesman said.

It would add further problems to the Community's effort to end discriminatory subsidies to EEC car makers, he said.

The Commission has been talking to Austrian officials since February in the hope of settling the conflict amicably, but there has been no progress so far, Commission sources said.

THE HAGUE (MAY 18) - Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers proposed a compromise Friday in the conflict within the European Economic Community over the leadership and headquarters of a development bank to help Eastern Europe.

He suggested at a news conference that France's Jacques Attali, an advisor to President Francois Mitterrand, should be the president of the new institution, and that the bank should be headquartered in Amsterdam.

Mr. Lubbers said that his proposal was supported by Belgium.

The European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) is to be established on May 29, and Community members together with two EEC institutions are to take a controlling 51 per cent share in the new bank's stock.

But EEC members have been squabbling over who should get the top job and what country should get the headquarters, with its thousands of jobs.

The Dutch premier made his proposal just 24 hours before the 42 future shareholders in the bank are to hold a constitutive meeting.

Earlier in the day, diplomats said in Belgium that the EEC had failed to overcome their rift and was in for an embarrassing public squabble.

The Netherlands and Belgium accused the EEC's "Big Four" -- Britain, France, West Germany and Italy -- of secretly sharing out the bank's political spoils, and repeated that they would not allow the Community's institutions to take a stake in the agency, the diplomats said.

Five other smaller members voiced support, accusing their powerful neighbours of riding roughshod over them, they said.

It was the second time this week that EEC ambassadors had sought to break the deadlock before the EBRD formally comes into existence on May 29.

Fearing a debacle, Ireland, the EEC president until June 30, decided to call an emergency meeting of EEC delegates on the sidelines of the Saturday meeting of EBRD shareholders in Paris, to see if any last-minute breakthrough could be achieved, diplomats said.

PARIS (MAY 18) - A fourth round of talks between Chad and Libya aimed at settling a long-standing territorial dispute has ended in Tripoli without any progress, sources close to the Chadian Embassy said here Friday.

"We could get out of this impasse" over the disputed Aouzou Strip on Chad's northern border with Libya "by taking it to the International Court of Justice in the Hague, on the basis of the Algiers agreement between our two countries of last August," the source added.

"Chad has offered the Libyans a compromise with a view to a court hearing (in the Hague), which could occur as of September, under the (Algiers) accord," the source here said.

Chadian Foreign Minister Asheikh Ibn Oumar, head of Ndjamena's delegation to the talks in Tripoli that ended Thursday, was in Paris overnight Friday on his way back with his team to the Chadian capital.

The latest talks between the two sides came just days after Tripoli accused the Chadian army of seizing a "civilian convoy" of 10 Libyan trucks well inside Sudan's western border with Chad.

Ndjamena has counter-claimed that the lorries were a military convoy taking food, fuel and ammunition to forces of the shadowy Islamic Legion, a Libyan-led force allegedly behind recent clashes in eastern Chad.

Chad's President Hissein Habre this month called for a "holy war" against Libya, which has backed rebels fighting his French-backed regime, but talks on the Aouzou Strip have continued.

TAIPEI (MAY 18) - Taiwan wants better investment treatment from countries favored by its investors, but with which it has no diplomatic relations, an investment official said Friday.

The targeted countries include the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, Malaysia, the Netherlands, Belgium, France, Britain, West Germany and the United States, said Tseng Kung-ning, deputy director of the Industrial Development and Investment Center.

None of them have diplomatic ties with Taipei.

Mr. Tseng added that officials from the Economic, Finance and Foreign Ministries had agreed to take the initiative to seek investment guarantees and tax incentives from countries favored by local investors. "The government here has been actively seeking favorable agreements with foreign nations for its investors," Mr. Tseng said.

A pact on investment guarantees and another on temporary admission of goods were signed in early April between Taiwan and Singapore.

The investment guarantees agreement, under which the two countries would grant national treatment to investors from both countries, was the first such pact Taiwan has signed with a nation in the absence of diplomatic relations.

"Panama's Foreign Affairs Minister Julio E. Linares is expected to sign a similar pact with his Taiwan counterpart, Lien Chan, on Sunday," Mr. Tseng said.

A growing number of the island's enterprises, plagued by escalating anti-pollution sentiment, prohibitive land prices, acute labor shortages and deteriorating social order, have shifted operations abroad.

Taiwan approved a record 368 million U.S. dollars worth of overseas investment projects by local businessmen in the first four months of 1990, a whopping 423 percent growth in value over the same period of last year.

ISLAMABAD (MAY 18) - United Nations officials based in Pakistan have set a target of sending home some 300,000 Afghan refugees but the operation promises to be dangerous and is increasingly under fire from its critics.

Relief organisations believe that the plan, drawn up by the U.N. Coordinator for Rehabilitation Programmes in Afganistan Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, is only "window-dressing" and will "create more problems than it will solve."

Some Western diplomats have already raised doubts that "Operation Salam," apparently approved by Moscow and Islamabad, will in the end benefit the Afghan people.

U.N. officials said the plan will see hundreds of thousands of refugees returning home in the coming months, mainly to the Afghan frontier provinces of Kunar, Paktika and Kandahar.

Under the plan, U.N. teams will fan out into these provinces to distribute food, tents and perhaps money to each returning refugee who in turn will have to surrender their Pakistan ration cards.

In this way, the officials hoped to get the number of Afghan refugees in Pakistan below the three million mark by the end of the year and pointed optimistically to recent reports from the southern Pakistan province of Baluchistan where 100 families a day are said to be returning to Kandahar.

These departures, apparently larger than last year's, are spontaneous, according to local reports.

Prince Sadruddin's plan, however, is rejected by several factions within the Afghan guerrilla movement who say it only serves Kabul's purposes.

Several diplomats took up this point, saying they saw a shared interest between Moscow, which supports Kabul, and Islamabad, which while backing the resistance increasingly wants to see the last of the 3.2 million Afghan refugees here.

LIMA (MAY 18) - Suspected Shining Path rebels killed two people and attacked political party offices on the Maoist guerrilla group's 10th anniversary, while Peruvian government sources said leaflets announcing a rebel cease-fire were a fake.

The government officials said leaflets which appeared Thursday in the streets of the troubled southeastern city of Ayacucho announcing a cease-fire were counter-propaganda issued by the Armed Forces in a bid to stall anniversary attacks.

Meanwhile, police said the rebels Thursday killed a local councillor and a peasant in San Anton in the department of Puno, 1,315 km southeast of the capital.

They also blamed Shining Path for two minor explosive attacks on offices belonging to the independent "Change 90" movement of Alberto Fujimori, the favorite candidate for Peru's June 10 run-off presidential elections.

The blasts, one in the Andean rebel stronghold of Ayacucho, 575 km east of Lima, and the other in the central mountain city of Cerro de Pasco, 220 km northeast of the capital, caused structural damage but no casualties.

The attacks belied the temporary cease-fire announcement, which government sources who asked not to be named said had been issued by the military in +a psychological warfare operation+.

The cease-fire message was "apocryphal and issued by the Armed Forces to create a climate of uncertainty among Shining Path's ranks," which consist of small isolated cell groups, often unaware of each others existence, the sources explained.

Shining Path observers also cast doubt on the authenticity of the leaflets which read, "We will retreat temporarily from the armed struggle but we shall return with renewed momentum," but failed to make the customary reference to the rebel group's founder, Abimael Guzman.

Some 20,000 people have been killed in rebel violence and an estimated dlrs 17 billion lost through sabotage attacks since Shining Path took up arms 10 years ago.

Madrid (MAY 18) EFE - The number of unemployed Spaniards has fallen by 0.45 percent during the first quarter of the year, according to the results of an official poll released Friday.

The Active Population Poll showed that just over 2.5 million people were jobless at the end of March.

Spain's unemployment rate is currently running at 16.74 per- cent, one of the highest in Western Europe.

The poll indicated that unemployment in the construction, industry and service sectors all dropped in the first three months of 1990, as well as the number of young people looking for their first job.

The two regions which reported the greatest decrease were southern Andalucia and eastern Catalonia.

RIO DE JANEIRO (MAY 18) EFE - The level of industrial capacity utilization in Brazilian industry has fallen to its lowest-ever recorded level, and industrialists expect unemployment figures to rise, press reports said Friday.

"We are pessimistic," said Brazilian Economy Institute (IBRE) director Angelo de Souza on the findings of a survey of 1,717 industrialists, published by the daily Jornal do Brasil.

The statistics reveal that the use of installed capacity in Brazilian industry fell from 66 percent in January to 61 per- cent in April.

Some 18 points lower than in April last year, it is the lowest level of capacity utilization recorded since IBRE began monitoring industry in 1967.

The decline could not be attributed exclusively to the controversial economic policies of the current government, as the trend could be observed as far back as last October, de Souza said.

But he agreed that the drastic anti-inflationary measures introduced by Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello on March 16 have certainly aggravated the situation.

During the worst crisis period of Brazil's last recession in 1983, use of industrial capacity fell to 73 percent, a full 12 points higher than April's figure.

HONG KONG (MAY 18) KYODO - CHINESE ECONOMISTS AND FINANCIAL EXPERTS HAVE PROPOSED TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE CURRENT DECLINE IN THE VALUE OF THE JAPANESE YEN ON THE WORLD CURRENCY MARKET TO HELP REPAY CHINA'S LARGE FOREIGN DEBT, THE HONG KONG ECONOMIC TIMES REPORTED FRIDAY.

THE ECONOMISTS CLAIM THAT BY CONVERTING SOME OF CHINA'S U.S. DOLLAR RESERVES TO THE YEN AT THE CURRENT ''FAVORABLE'' RATE, SAVINGS WILL BE MADE IN DEBT REPAYMENTS TO JAPAN, THE REPORT SAID.

ALTHOUGH CHINESE OFFICIALS HOLD THAT THE COUNTRY'S FOREIGN DEBT HAS NOW BEEN BROUGHT UNDER CONTROL AT 40 BILLION U.S. DOLLARS, DEBT REPAYMENT IS STILL A MAJOR PROBLEM FOR THE ECONOMY, ACCORDING ANALYSTS.

CHINA WILL ENTER A FOREIGN DEBT REPAYMENT PEAK IN THE EARLY 1990S, THE ANALYSTS SAID.

DEBT REPAYMENT FOR 1990 AND 1991 WILL BE AROUND 4 BILLION U.S. DOLLARS, AND RISE FURTHER TO 5.4 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1992, INCLUDING SOME 138 BILLION YEN, THE NEWSPAPER REPORT SAID.

RYOEI SAITO, 74, HONORARY CHAIRMAN OF DAISHOWA PAPER MANUFACTURING CO., BASED IN SHIZUOKA, CENTRAL JAPAN, SNAPPED UP THE RENOIR MASTERPIECE WHICH PORTRAYS AN OPEN AIR DANCE HALL IN PARIS AT SOTHEBY'S NEW YORK AUCTION HOUSE.

THE PRICE IS EQUIVALENT TO SOME 11.87 BILLION YEN AT PRESENT EXCHANGE RATES.

ON TUESDAY, SAITO ALSO PAID A RECORD-BREAKING 82.5 MILLION DOLLARS FOR THE 1890 ''PORTRAIT OF DOCTOR GACHET'' BY VINCENT VAN GOGH AT A CHRISTIE'S ART AUCTION HERE.

''AU MOULIN DE LA GALETTE'' HAD A PRESALE ESTIMATE OF 40 TO 50 MILLION DOLLARS, THE SAME AS THE VAN GOGH.

PIERRE AUGUSTE RENOIR PAINTED THE PIECE IN 1876 AS ONE OF TWO STUDIES OF

THE BOHEMIAN DANCE HALL AT THE TOP OF RUE MONTMARTRE.

THE RENOIR WAS SOLD FROM THE COLLECTION OF NEW YORK FINANCIER AND PUBLISHER JOHN HAY WHITNEY, WHO DIED IN 1982. WHITNEY BOUGHT IT IN 1929 IN NEW YORK FOR 165,000 DOLLARS.

TOKYO (MAY 18) KYODO - JAPAN'S WHOLESALE PRICES IN APRIL ROSE 0.6 PERCENT FROM THE PREVIOUS MONTH AND 2.7 PERCENT FROM A YEAR EARLIER, THE BANK OF JAPAN SAID FRIDAY.

THE OVERALL WHOLESALE PRICE INDEX, REFLECTING DOMESTIC, IMPORT, AND EXPORT PRICES, STOOD AT 90.9 AGAINST THE BASE OF 100 IN 1985.

CENTRAL BANK OFFICIALS ATTRIBUTED THE RISE CHIEFLY TO AN INCREASE IN EXPORT AND IMPORT PRICES IN TERMS OF THE JAPANESE CURRENCY AS A RESULT OF A 3.5 PERCENT MONTH-ON-MONTH DECLINE IN THE VALUE OF THE YEN AGAINST THE U.S. DOLLAR.

THE OFFICIALS DESCRIBED THE 0.6 PERCENT INCREASE AS ''STILL WITHIN THE STABLE RANGE.''

IN APRIL, WHOLESALE PRICES OF DOMESTICALLY PRODUCED GOODS FOR THE HOME MARKET ROSE 0.1 PERCENT FROM MARCH FOR THE THIRD CONSECUTIVE MONTHLY INCREASE.

ON A YEAR-ON-YEAR BASIS, DOMESTIC PRICES AT THE WHOLESALE LEVEL DECREASED TO A 0.7 PERCENT GAIN, COMPARED WITH A 2.5 PERCENT JUMP THE PREVIOUS YEAR.

THE OFFICIALS POINTED TO INCREASING UPWARD PRICE PRESSURE COMING FROM RISING TRANSPORTING COSTS DUE TO THE GROWING LABOR SHORTAGE.

THE OFFICIALS TRACED THE SLOWER YEAR-ON-YEAR PRICE INCREASE MAINLY TO THE DIMINISHED IMPACT ON OVER PRICES OF THE 3 PERCENT CONSUMPTION TAX INTRODUCED APRIL 1989.

EXPORT WHOLESALE PRICES IN YEN TERMS ROSE 2.1 PERCENT FROM THE PREVIOUS MONTH AND 9.1 PERCENT FROM A YEAR EARLIER, LARGELY BECAUSE OF A WEAKER YEN THE BANK SAID.

A DECLINE IN THE YEN'S VALUE ALSO CONTRIBUTED TO PUSHING UP EXPORT PRICES AS DOLLAR-DENOMINATED EXPORT PRICES ARE OFTEN FIXED BY CONTRACTS.

THE IMPORT WHOLESALE PRICE INDEX ALSO ADVANCED 2.1 PERCENT FROM THE SAME MONTH OF LAST YEAR AND WAS 13.3 PERCENT HIGHER THAN THE YEAR-EARLIER LEVEL ALSO DUE TO THE YEN'S DEPRECIATION DURING THE MONTH.

THE DOLLAR AVERAGED 158.50 YEN IN APRIL, UP 3.5 PERCENT FROM 153.11 YEN IN THE PRIOR MONTH, AND ALSO UP 20.0 PERCENT FROM A YEAR EARLIER.

TOKYO (MAY 18) KYODO - THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI) HAS DECIDED TO PROPOSE A COMPLETE PHASE-OUT BY 2000 OF MORE CHLOROFLUOROCARBONS (CFCS) AND OTHER OZONE DEPLETING SUBSTANCES, MITI SOURCES SAID FRIDAY.

NEW TARGETS FOR 100 PERCENT REDUCTIONS ARE CFCS 13, 111, AND 112 AS WELL AS CARBON TETRACHLORIDE (CC14).

THE MINISTRY ALSO PLANS TO SLASH SHARPLY METHYL CHLOROFORM, WHICH IS USED MAINLY AS A WASH AT SEMICONDUCTOR PLANTS.

IN SEPTEMBER 1987, 46 COUNTRIES SIGNED THE MONTREAL PROTOCOL ON SUBSTANCES THAT DEPLETE THE OZONE LAYER.

THE MONTREAL SIGNATORIES AGREED TO LIMIT THE CONSUMPTION AND PRODUCTION OF EIGHT DIFFERENT CHEMICALS -- FIVE ''FULLY-HALOGENATED'' CFCS, OR CFCS 11, 12, 113, 114, AND 115, AS WELL AS THREE HALONS.

CFCS WERE THE OBJECT OF CRITICISM SINCE THEY ARE KNOWN TO DESTROY THE OZONE LAYER IN THE STRATOSPHERE. THE LAYER SERVES AS A SHIELD AGAINST CANCER-CAUSING ULTRAVIOLET RADIATION FROM THE SUN.

THE NUMBER OF SIGNATORIES TO THE MONTREAL PROTOCOL HAS SINCE INCREASED, AND THE U.S., THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY, AND JAPAN -- THE THREE LARGEST CFC PRODUCERS -- HAVE AGREED TO PHASE OUT THE FIVE CFCS ALTOGETHER BY THE END OF THE CENTURY.

IN JAPAN, THE RESTRICTIONS ON PRODUCTION AND USE OF THESE CHEMICALS STARTED IN JULY, 1989.

BUT ENVIRONMENTALISTS ARE STILL WORRIED THAT CONTINUED CFC PRODUCTION AND USE WILL INCREASE ATMOSPHERIC LOADING OF CHLORIDE BY A SIGNIFICANT AMOUNT, WHICH COULD LEAD TO FURTHER OZONE DEPLETION.

THEY ARE CALLING FOR THE ABOLITION OF ALL OZONE DEPLETERS AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE.

THEY ALSO ADVOCATE THE ABOLITION OF SUBSTANCES THAT DEPLETE THE OZONE LAYER, BUT ARE NOT LISTED IN THE MONTREAL PROTOCOL, SUCH AS METHYL CHLOROFORM AND CARBON TETRACHLORIDE.

AS MAJOR INDUSTRIAL NATIONS HAVE SIMILAR POLICIES ON CURBING THESE CHEMICALS, BASIC AGREEMENT AMONG THEM IS EXPECTED TO BE REACHED AT THE MONTREAL PROTOCOL MEETINGS TO BE HELD IN JUNE IN LONDON.

CARBON TETRACHLORIDE, A RAW MATERIAL FOR CFCS, IS THE CENTER OF ATTENTION SINCE IT HAS A LARGER PROPENSITY FOR DESTROYING THE OZONE LAYER THAN THE FIVE CFCS.

JAPAN PRODUCES ABOUT 60,000 METRIC TONS OF THE CHEMICAL PER YEAR. ANNUAL PRODUCTION OF METHYL CHLOROFORM IS SOME 160,000 TONS. ABOLISHING OR SHARPLY CURTAILING THESE SUBSTANCES REQUIRES THE DEVELOPMENT OF SUBSTITUTES.

MITI PLANS TO PROMOTE DEVELOPMENT OF THE SUBSITUTES AND OF THE PRODUCTION TECHNOLOGY THAT CAN MAKE THESE SUBSTANCES OBSOLETE, THE SOURCES SAID.

TOKYO (MAY 18) KYODO - THE BANK OF JAPAN (BOJ) REPORTED FRIDAY ITS NET INCOME PLUNGED TO 82.2 BILLION YEN IN THE SECOND HALF OF FISCAL 1989 ENDED MARCH 31 FROM 236.8 BILLION YEN IN THE FIRST HALF DUE TO BOOK-VALUE LOSSES IN ITS GOVERNMENT BOND HOLDINGS.

THE CENTRAL BANK'S GROSS REVENUE IN THE HALF-YEAR PERIOD SURGED 35.6 PERCENT FROM THE PREVIOUS HALF TO 917.8 BILLION YEN AS RETURNS ON ASSET INVESTMENTS IMPROVED IN THE WAKE OF FOUR HIKES IN THE OFFICIAL DISCOUNT RATES BETWEEN MAY LAST YEAR AND MARCH, BOJ OFFICIALS SAID.

BUT SHARP FALLS IN GOVERNMENT BOND PRICES FORCED THE GOVERNMENT BANK TO LIST HUGE PAPER LOSSES, WHICH SWELLED TO 737.2 BILLION YEN (INCLUDING OTHER BOND-RELATED LOSSES) FROM 221.2 BILLION YEN IN THE FIRST HALF.

THE BOJ WILL PAY 76.2 BILLION YEN INTO STATE COFFERS AFTER SETTING ASIDE 6.0 BILLION YEN FOR DIVIDEND PAYMENTS AND RESERVES. THIS WILL BRING TOTAL PAYMENTS INTO THE GOVERNMENT PURSE IN FISCAL 1989 TO 184.6 BILLION YEN, LESS THAN HALF THE 380 BILLION YEN BUDGETED FOR THE YEAR.

TOKYO (MAY 18) KYODO - THE ORGANIZATION FOR ECONOMIC COOPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT (OECD) PREDICTS SOLID ECONOMIC GROWTH IN JAPAN AND WEST GERMANY DURING 1990 AND 1991, REVISING UPWARD ITS INITIAL FORECAST FOR WEST GERMANY IN VIEW OF IMMINENT ECONOMIC UNION OF THE TWO GERMANYS, KYODO NEWS SERVICE LEARNED FRIDAY.

MEASURED ON AN INFLATION-ADJUSTED BASIS, JAPAN'S ECONOMY WILL GROW 4.7 PERCENT IN 1990 AND 4.0 PERCENT IN 1991, THE HIGHEST AMONG KEY INDUSTRIAL NATIONS, THE OECD SAID IN A DRAFT OF ITS REPORT TO BE PUBLISHED LATER THIS MONTH.

THE GROWTH PROJECTIONS FOR JAPAN WERE REVISED UPWARD FOR 1990, BUT DOWNWARD FOR 1991 FROM THE PREVIOUS REPORT LAST DECEMBER, IN WHICH JAPAN'S ECONOMIC GROWTH WAS PUT AT 4.5 PERCENT FOR 1990 AND 4.3 PERCENT FOR 1991.

THE OECD, THE PARIS-BASED ORGANIZATION MADE UP OF 24 MAJOR INDUSTRIAL COUNTRTIES, EXPECTS THE WEST GERMAN ECONOMY TO GROW 3.9 PERCENT IN 1990 AND 3.6 PERCENT IN 1991, BOTH REVISED UPWARD FROM 3.2 PERCENT FOR 1990 AND 3.1 PERCENT FOR 1991.

THE OECD REPORT WILL BE THE FIRST ECONOMIC FORECAST BY AN INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTION BASED ON THE PLANNED MONETARY UNION BETWEEN EAST AND WEST GERMANY ON JULY 2.

TURNING TO EXTERNAL IMBALANCES, THE OECD REPORT SAYS THE CURRENT ACCOUNT SURPLUSES OF JAPAN AND WEST GERMANY WILL SHRINK FASTER IN 1990 THAN IT PREVIOUSLY FORECAST.

THE OECD PREDICTS JAPAN'S CURRENT ACCOUNT SURPLUS WILL FALL BELOW 50 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1990, DROPPING BY AS MUCH AS 10 BILLION DOLLARS FROM A YEAR EARLIER TO 47 BILLION DOLLARS.

BUT THE OECD SAYS JAPAN'S SURPLUS WILL REBOUND IN 1991, RISING TO 54 BILLION DOLLARS IN TANDEM WITH ITS TRADE SURPLUS.

THE SURPLUS IN WEST GERMANY'S CURRENT ACCOUNT, THE BROADEST MEASURE OF TRADE COVERING BOTH GOODS AND SERVICES, WILL BE AN ESTIMATED 64 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1990, DOWN SHARPLY FROM THE EARLIER FORECAST OF 70.8 BILLION DOLLARS, AND 62 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1991, DOWN FROM 75.7 BILLION DOLLARS.

THE PROJECTIONS APPARENTLY REFLECT EAST GERMANY'S DEFICIT, PART OF WHICH WILL BE ASSUMED BY WEST GERMANY AFTER MONETARY UNION.

THE OECD SAYS THE U.S. CURRENT ACCOUNT DEFICIT WILL FALL TO 99 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1990 AND 94 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1991, THOUGH FORECASTING SLOW PROGRESS IN CUTTING ITS CHRONIC TRADE DEFICIT, NOW ROUGHLY STANDING AT 110 BILLION DOLLARS.

AS FOR TRADE IMBALANCES, THE OECD SEES JAPAN'S TRADE SURPLUS NARROWING TO 68 BILLION DOLLARS IN 1990 BUT PREDICTS AN UPSWING IN 1991 TO 76 BILLION DOLLARS.

LOCAL RETAILERS HAVE BEEN OUTSPOKEN IN THEIR OPPOSITION TO THE PLAN SINCE FEBRUARY, WHEN THEY LEARNED THAT THE NEW STORE WILL COVER 5,020 SQUARE METERS, OR HALF OF THE COMBINED TOTAL FLOOR SPACE OF ALL THE CITY'S TOY SHOPS.

OPPONENTS SAID THEY WANT THE STORE'S FLOOR SPACE TO BE REDUCED TO ABOUT 10 PERCENT OF THE ORIGINAL PLAN.

THE PLANNED SHOP HAS BEEN A TEST CASE REGARDING JAPAN'S LARGE-SCALE RETAIL STORES LAW, WHICH JAPAN ASSURED THE U.S. IT WOULD RELAX DURING BILATERAL TALKS ON STRUCTURAL IMPEDIMENTS TO TRADE AND INVESTMENT.

TOKYO (MAY 18) KYODO - THE FEDERATION OF ECONOMIC ORGANIZATIONS, KEIDANREN, SAID FRIDAY IT STRONGLY OPPOSES HIGHER TAXATION ON LAND OWNERSHIP DESIGNED TO INCREASE THE SUPPLY OF LAND AND PUT A LID ON REAL ESTATE PRICES.

THE POWERFUL BUSINESS GROUP, IN A REPORT ON ITS VIEW OF THE GOVERNMENT'S STUDY OF LAND TAXATION, SAID TAX REFORM SHOULD NOT INCLUDE HIGHER TAXES ON LAND OWNERSHIP, A CATEGORY SEPARATE FROM TAXES ON FIXED ASSETS, INCLUDING THOSE HELD IN LAND.

EVEN UNDER THE PRESENT SYSTEM, KEIDANREN SAID, INFLATED LAND PRICES WILL PUSH UP TAXES ON FIXED ASSETS IN METROPOLITAN AREAS. IT ALSO ARGUED THAT THE LEVEL OF LAND OWNERSHIP TAXES IN JAPAN IS NOT OUT OF LINE WITH OTHER COUNTRIES.

BUT KEIDANREN SAID IT SUPPORT'S RAISING TAXES ON FIXED ASSETS IF THEY ARE APPLIED ONLY TO IDLE, OR MARGINALLY USED LAND OWNED BY CORPORATIONS ALONG WITH A REDUCTION IN INCOME AND CORPORATE TAXES.

TO BOOST LAND SUPPLY, KEIDANREN URGED THE GOVERNMENT TO PROVIDE TAX INCENTIVES FOR LAND OWNERS, BOTH INDIVIDUAL AND CORPORATE, TO MAKE IT EASIER TO SELL THEIR ASSETS WHILE RELAXING REGULATIONS ON BUILDINGS TO CREATE MORE SPACE.

THE REPORT COMES A TIME WHEN THE NATIONAL TAX ADMINISTRATION AGENCY IS PROPOSING HIGHER TAXES ON LAND OWNERSHIP IN HOPES OF EARNING REVENUE FROM THE OFF-THE-BOOK VALUE OF REAL ESTATE.

AT PRESENT, LAND ASSETS ARE SUBJECT TO A NUMBER OF DIFFERENT TAX CATEGORIES, OF WHICH THE TAX ON LAND OWNERSHIP HAS PROVIDED THE MAJOR FOCUS AT THE GOVERNMENT'S REVIEW BECAUSE TAXES ON FIXED ASSETS ARE IMPOSED ON PART OF THE MARKET VALUE OF LAND HOLDINGS.

FROM THE BULLS:

"There are a number of technicians that are trying desperately to hold on to the fantasy that the market is going to go down. I think that's wrong " says DAVID ALGER, director of technical research at FRED ALGER MANAGEMENT INC., a New York-based money management firm. "In the early stages of a rising market, the bigger stocks always do better," says Alger. According to Alger, people come into the market via the easiest route, which is to buy large capitalization stocks. Once in the market, Alger says, people then start looking around for values causing the market to spread out as money flows into shares of smaller and less well-known companies. ("The Washington Post", 5/18)

"People who know where I've been are accusing me of being bullish and that's okay. I think that the market looks as good as it has at least since November of '88," says JUSTIN MAMIS of GORDON CAPITAL. "I think that no matter what they do to put this market down over the next several months ... stocks are going to hold." Mamis says the big shifts from oversold to overbought only happens in the beginning of a move up, so he is very comfortable with where the market is currently. He believes small consolidations in the next three or four days, hopefully like the action of Tuesday and Wednesday, will burn off the overbought state in the market. He says that more stocks are giving buy signals everyday. "When you have stocks to buy - and a plethora of them - you know you're in an uptrend." (FNN's "Marketwrap", 5/17)

FROM THE BEARS:

JOE GRANVILLE of the "Granville Market Letter" predicts "a new downside target of 2206.56" by the end of June. The fact that the market faked him out last Friday by going up 63 points when he predicted a drop of 57 points delighted him. He tells FNN's JEFF BOWER that the last time that happened was on January 2 which was the high for the month and was followed by significant declines. He says this confirms his belief that "there is absolutely no long-term bullish significance whatsoever in this May Dow run-up." (FNN's "Marketwrap", 5/17)

STOCK MARKET:

"The generals are going over the hill, but without the troops, and the troops are the vast majority of stocks," says KENNETH SPENCE, director of technical analysis at SALOMON BROTHERS INC., who believes that most stocks have lagged behind the 30 blue-chip shares that make up the Dow. "That is not a positive sign .... It means that the generals, the blue chips, are not reflecting the market as a whole." ("The Washington Post", 5/18)

"The explosion of euphoria [in the stock market] is in the right direction but a bit premature," says WILLIAM KUFTA, senior vice- president at PITCAIRN FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT GROUP. "We look for disappointments in earnings and the budget deficit-reduction process. We don't think we have the ingredients for a meaningful advance in the stock market yet." (WSJ, 5/18)

"Typically, over history, it's a bearish signal" when the Dow hits highs while the rest of the market is lagging, says JOSEPH FESHBACH, director of technical market analysis at SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON INC. "It means money is going into safe havens, and the market becomes narrow." ("The Washington Post", 5/18)

"The first two weeks of this rally were very sneaky," says ALFRED GOLDMAN, market strategist with A.G. EDWARDS & SONS, INC. in St. Louis. "Most people didn't realize we were in a lift, but now investors who were sitting on the sidelines with cash have realized it and that's what's pushing the market up." Goldman says many investors missed the rally's early stages because of the market's relatively light volume and the disappointing performance of the broad market. "It had very few of the classic signs of a lift, but if you looked under the surface there were pockets of strength. The blue chips crawled upward, but when it happens a little at a time it doesn't ring a bell with people." (UPI, 5/17)

"The market's been consolidating since Monday," says PETER GRENNAN, head of stock index futures trading for SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. "Some traders are taking their profits; some are establishing new positions. The market's not making headway, but it's impressive. Many people thought the market would pull back." (NYT, 5/18) 2

ROBIN GRIFFITHS, of JAMES CAPEL & CO. in London, was the keynote speaker at the MARKET TECHNICIANS ASSOCIATION, INC.'s fifteenth annual seminar in Orlando, Florida Thursday evening. In his address, he discussed the differences in technical analysis between the U.S. and Great Britain and the need for developing international standards for technical analysis. He also discussed his "roadmaps" for various financial markets focusing on the drama of the Japanese markets. In interrelating the world markets, he notes that there is a general "upward pressure" on interest rates worldwide. As for the U.S. stock market, Mr. Griffiths says that the current stock market rally is a "bear market rally." (MCS Sources, 5/17)

The bias is undoubtedly to the buy side, " says JEROME HINKLE, co- manager of equity trading at SANFORD C. BERSTEIN, but he believes the market will open the day flat to lower. "We're still overbought, " he explains. PRUDENTIAL-BACHE SECURITIES INC. market strategist LARRY WACHTEL agrees, saying that the market is "beginning to tire." He predicts that while today's expirations will keep the market active, there will not be any real movement. (Reuters, 5/18)

"I don't think we will see much fireworks" as a result of the May options expirations on Friday, says MAX ANSBACHER of BEAR STEARNS. "What we might see [Friday], and this is just my guess of course, is buying in stocks to offset the shorts and therefore I think we could see the market going up." (FNN's "Marketwrap", 5/17)

"I am really not convinced that what we are going to have is an extension [of the current rally] all the way through 3,000 [on the Dow]," says JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA, associate director of research at GRUNTAL & CO. He is concerned that there is still no rally among secondary stocks. "I don't really see a bear market. What I'm seeing is that the market is in a trading range. ... I suspect that the market will now pull back from here as we move forward with absolutely nothing to stimulate it." (CNBC's "Market Wrap-Up", 5/17)

"I think in terms of momentum, the market still has a little bit further to go on the upside and I would not rule out the mid-2900s," says DAVE ALLMAN, research director at the ELLIOTT WAVE THEORIST in Gainesville, Ga. He also says that he could not rule out a possible target top of 3600, but points out that higher prices will be "increasingly blue chip oriented" and would not extend to the broader market. (FNN's "Wall Street Countdown", 5/17)

"I'm not looking for the market to make a big move up or down," says RICK ASTER, who manages the $100 million MERIDIAN FUND. "Our view is the market is fairly valued. We don't foresee a surge in profits, nor a recession." ("Investor's Daily", 5/18)

STOCK TIPS:

ROCKWELL INTERNATIONAL "has managed pretty well through adversity," says HANSPETER GIGER of FIRST UNION CORP. in Charlotte, N.C., which recently bought more than 100,000 shares. ERIC MILLER, chief investment officer at DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE, agrees and notes that Rockwell's nonmilitary divisions "are doing quite well. They're not well known. And the company is continuing with a major share- repurchase program." Another Donaldson analyst DAVID MOORE also likes Rockwell and says it "will continue to dominate the space industry." PAUL NISBET, an analyst for PRUDENTIAL-BACHE SECURITIES INC. rates Rockwell as a hold because he doesn't think earnings will rise rapidly. (WSJ, 5/18)

NACCO INDUSTRIES, a Cleveland-based leader in forklift manufacturing, is "Investor's Daily's" stock of the week. "It's an extremely well- 3 managed company," says JAMES WIGGINS, an analyst for McDONALD & CO., a Cleveland-based securities firm. "They're paying down their debt pretty rapidly. They're not typical LBO types. They're good acquirers in the classic sense." DOUG JONES, vice president and a portfolio manager for SIT INVESTMENTS ASSOCIATES INC., says, "It's a restructured company that's not heavily burdened by debt in the post- junk era. This thing is great for risk-averse people. A dollar earned is a dollar kept here." ("Investor's Daily", 5/18)

He thinks the Dow could hit 3000 or better this summer, but JAMES PIZZO, market strategist at OPPENHEIMER & CO., really likes the outlook for secondary stocks. A favorite is FRUIT OF THE LOOM with "worldwide name recognition, dominant market share and tremendous earnings growth." Another is STORAGE TECHNOLOGY; Pizzo says things have turned around at the one-time darling of Wall Street. SEAGULL ENERGY is drilling in the Gulf of Mexico and has had dramatic natural gas finds. (CNBC's "World Business", 5/18)

JACK BARBANEL, market strategist at FIRST GLOBAL ASSET MANAGEMENT, says technology stocks, which were "oversold last quarter ... are really coming back roaring in here." As for DIGITAL EQUIPMENT, which lost a full point yesterday to 87 3/8, Barbanel says the market may be taking profits because it "may not believe [Digital] is properly valued at 87. ("The Washington Post", 5/18)

"To us, it's a stock picker's market," says RICK ASTER, manager of the MERIDIAN FUND. Some of Aster's best stocks this year have been APPLIED MAGNETICS, INC. and HELIG & MEYERS CO. Some of his current favorites are MENTOR GRAPHICS INC., CONSOLIDATED STORES INC., CISCO SYSTEMS INC. and ENTERTAINMENT PUBLISHING CORP. ("Investor's Daily", 5/18)

RAYCHEM soared 1 3/8 to 32 after MERRILL LYNCH extended its buy recommendation for the stock. PRUDENTIAL-BACHE upgraded SMITHKLINE from a hold to a buy helping the stock to close 1 1/2 points higher to 41 3/4. GOLDMAN SACHS had positive comments for MCI COMMUNICATIONS causing the stock to jump 7/8 to 41 3/4. (NBR, 5/17)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (MAY 18) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"I am reasonably optimistic about the whole economy as we go forward," says EDWARD BOEHME, president of the PHILADELPHIA FEDERAL RESERVE BANK. Mr. Boehme made it clear the Fed credit policy was left unchanged in the latest FOMC meeting. He says that when the Fed does decide to move again, it will continue to be in the small steps that have characterized the central bank's action under the leadership of ALAN GREENSPAN. "Federal Reserve policy is one of prudence," he says, "steady as she goes." (WSJ, 5/18)

The Fed will ease rates at its early July FOMC meeting, according to a scenario painted by DAVID JONES, senior economist at AUBREY G. LANSTON. "We're going to see over the next three to six months weaker numbers than we thought for the economy, particularly in construction and real estate." Despite a dollar which will be sharply lower, Jones believes the Fed will ease rates because of domestic economic considerations. "Short rates will be coming down, but long rates not as much." (CNN's "Business Morning", 5/18)

"The Fed is on hold," says JAMES BLUMENTHAL of BNY SECURITIES INC. "The inflation data don't warrant an easing at this time." (Reuters, 5/17)

"Right now we are in a counter-trading market," says one bond trader. "That means you buy on the dips and sell on the upticks. It will probably be that until we get through the employment number." (NYT, 5/18)

Bond market hopes for a Fed easing were dashed when the central bank drained reserves from the banking system by executing overnight matched sale-purchase agreements Wednesday night. The open market operation "was a statement that the Fed hadn't changed policy," says JOEL KAZIS, manager of government trading at SMITH BARNEY, HARRIS UPHAM & CO. "That took the wind out of the market." (WSJ, 5/18)

THE ECONOMY:

"It's not going to be Armageddon, it's not even going to be terribly upsetting, but we are going to have a recession" [in the next 12 months], says BILL WOLMAN, chief economist for "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC." He says it will a "very mild" downturn that will have a "cleansing effect" on the economy. (CNBC's "Market Wrap-Up", 5/17)

The March trade deficit report "looks pretty good to me," says SAM NAKAGAMA, chairman and chief economist of NAKAGAMA & WALLACE, INC., a Wall Street advisory firm. "I think the most encouraging thing - and the thing the economy needs very badly - is the rise in exports." (WSJ, 5/18)

For most of 1989, the merchandise trade deficit averaged $9 billion.

"We're still doing better than that [in 1990]," says MARTIN MAURO, senior economist at MERRILL LYNCH, who believes reduced oil imports will lead to an improving trade deficit in the months ahead. Mauro is encouraged by the increase in U.S. exports. "While the rest of the economy is slowing, it looks as if demand for our exports is still good and that's what's keeping our economy going." (CNBC's "World Business", 5/18)

Recent Japan bashing may have been unwarranted, says ROBERT BRUSCA of NIKKO SECURITIES, for while "progress will be slow," the Japanese have already loosened their control of imports. "Growth of U.S. exports in Japan is actually ... extremely rapid, but the numbers are so small they don't really make a big impact, " he says. "Progress has been made, but it'll take a while before we get these numbers up to the critical mass that we'll really see it in the aggregate figures." (FNN's "Business Tonight", 5/17)

Despite March's increase in the trade deficit, NORTHERN TRUST's ROBERT DEDERICK says the trend is improving. "The basic message is that the trade balance is improving, not explosively but gradually and persistently." CHEMICAL BANK's JOE CARSON adds March's deficit is due primarily to a temporary surge in Japanese car imports. "I think a large part of that is due to Japanese car makers trying to hit their quota limits as the quota year came to an end on March 31. I think that's an aberration and we should see a sharp decline in auto imports in April." (CNN's "Moneyline", 5/17)

"If anything, it was a sigh of relief, " says economist A. GARY SHILLING about the March trade figures. "It wasn't a great plus or a minus. It was just something out of the way that could have been potentially detrimental." (FNN's "Business Tonight", 5/17)

Despite sustained growth, Fukayama's "End of History" does not apply to the U.S. economy, says STUART BRUCHEY, an emeritus professor of economic history at COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY. "Just because business cycles have averaged three to seven years between high growth and recession since about 1870 doesn't mean an eight-to-ten year cycle is impossible." While cycles have been somewhat tamed since World War II, Bruchey points out that "historical patterns supply no basis for predicting the length of cycles." MELLON BANK'S chief economist NORMAN ROBERTSON partially agrees, saying, "It's not inevitable that we will have a recession, but it is difficult to avoid one." (Reuters, 5/17)

Despite the cloudy trade figures, a silver lining is beginning to show through, say some economists. Within the overall increase in the trade deficit, exports rose 4.6% to a record high of $33.28 billion. "The deficit was in excess of the consensus," says STEPHEN ROACH, an economist at MORGAN STANLEY & CO. INC. "But this does show surprisingly well-paced U.S. economic activity." AUBREY ZAFFUTO, of IBJ SCHRODER BANK & TRUST CO.

believes that because the Japanese trade surplus for April declined, the U.S. deficit for that period may have shrunk. "The March deficit was wider than expected, " says Zaffuto, "But overall trends are intact." (Reuters, 5/17)

IN WASHINGTON:

U.S. Commerce Secretary ROBERT MOSBACHER was virtually glowing after the announcement of higher than expected exports for March. "I 2 expect that we will see the trade deficit break $100 billion this year, " Mosbacher said in a prepared statement. (Reuters, 5/17)

"We have not agreed on our exact deficit reduction target," says SEN. PHIL GRAMM (R. - Texas) after the nearly two-hour budget negotiations Thursday. It appears that there are widely different estimates of the federal deficit from the congressional and administration experts. House Democratic leader RICHARD GEPHARDT of Missouri says, "We are moving in the right direction. There's a spirit of goodwill in the room. ... We are trying as reasonable individuals to find the facts." Mr. Gephardt says negotiator will meet for a third time Tuesday hoping to resolve differences over the size of the deficit problem so they could begin setting specific goals for the talks." (UPI, 5/17)

SEN. PHIL GRAMM (R. - Texas) reminds us that, "Government uses a different language than the public. When the public says, 'I cut spending,' they mean they're spending less than they used to spend. When the Congress says they're cutting spending, they mean they're spending less than they would have." Gramm feels that the real challenge of the budget summit is to reduce expenditures. "We're looking at about $70 billion in new revenues coming in the front door of the Treasury from economic growth. What we're really looking at is trying to control Federal spending." (FNN's "Business Tonight", 5/17)

#90138p0006 05/18/1990 ~PR Newswire

TORONTO (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Klaus M. Zeitler, president and chief executive officer of Metall Mining Corporation, announced today that the corporation's net income for the three months ended March 31, 1990, was $2,166,000 or $0.06 per share as compared to restated earnings of $8,871,000 or $0.24 per share in 1989.

Earnings in the first quarter of 1990 were lower than in the comparable period of 1989 primarily due to lower earnings of Cominco Ltd. and Teck Corporation.

Sales were $44,594,000 in the first three months of 1990. No comparative sales figures are reported for the first quarter of 1989 as the acquisition of Copper Range Company was completed in the second quarter of 1989.

Copper Range produced 23.3 million pounds of copper cathode in the first three months of 1990 which was 12 percent higher than the previous quarter and 5 percent higher than in the first quarter of 1989.

Operating costs remain high due to increased development expenditures in the underground mine and high repairs and maintenance costs. However, a capital expenditure program is under way to modernize the operation, increase production and reduce operating costs.

Copper Range recently purchased a 6,000-tons-per-day mill section for US$4 million which will increase mill capacity to approximately 23,000 TPD. Copper Range contributed $857,000 to the earnings of Metall in the first quarter of 1990.

The Ok Tedi project in Papua New Guinea, in which Metall has a 7.5 percent interest, had a profit of $4,217,000 in the first three months in 1990, compared to $4,035,000 in the comparable period in 1989. Metall's share was $249,000 in the first quarter of 1990 compared to $193,000 in 1989.

This improved performance was in large part due to the consistent achievement of targeted milling rates of 70,000 tonnes per day in the first three months of 1990. Total Ok Tedi production for the three months was 97,400 ounces of gold and 72.2 million pounds of copper.

Metall's share of earnings of Cominco, in which it has a 10.4 percent equity interest, declined to $1,170,000 from $6,564,000 in the first quarter of 1989. Cominco reported significantly lower earnings due to lower zinc and copper prices. In addition, sales volumes and earnings were affected by lower production of refined zinc and lead and the closure of the Sullivan Mine. Lead production was down considerably due to problems associated with the start-up of the new lead smelter. Refined zinc production has been adversely affected by the construction and commissioning of projects that are under way to ready the zinc smelter for Red Dog concentrate.

Metall's share of earnings of Teck, in which it has a 10.0 percent equity interest, was $1,942,000 as compared to $2,468,000 in the first quarter of 1989. Teck's earnings declined due to the decrease in Teck's share of equity earnings in Cominco. Teck's earnings were positively impacted by significant increases in gold production at both the David Bell and the Williams mines.

The purchase of mining assets from Metall's major shareholder, Metallgesellschaft AG, has been accounted for effective Jan. 1, 1990. The interests include three industrial mineral companies in Germany, a zinc/lead mine in Thailand and a mine management services organization with over 120 employees. In addition, Bougrine, a zinc/lead property in Tunisia, was acquired effective March 31, 1990. The total purchase price of $21,925,000 is payable by the issuance of 1,701,000 shares of Metall.

The results of a feasibility study of the Cayeli copper/zinc project in Turkey are being studied and a development decision will be made in 1990. The mine has an expected life of 30 years and a capital cost of approximately US$100 million to the date of commencement of commercial production. Metall is currently considering project financing alternatives.

DETROIT (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - In 1989, Manufacturers National Corporation (OTC: MNTL) achieved record earnings and expanded its franchise geographically, Chairman Gerald V. MacDonald told shareholders today at the corporation's annual meeting.

He also reviewed first-quarter 1990 earnings which, although disappointing principally reflect low fee income growth and loan volumes caused by the weak economic environment, not any fundamental or long-term weakness on the part of the corporation.

"Despite the difficult financial environment encountered during the first quarter of this year, I'm pleased to say that our net interest margins have remained at good levels. We have been able to supplement sluggish loan demand with the purchase of good quality, high yielding investment securities," MacDonald said.

Significant Developments in 1989

Manufacturers achieved record earnings of $107.3 million in 1989, a gain of 11.5 percent from 1988. Net earnings per share were $7.06, compared to $6.40 per share in 1988. The board of directors approved total dividends in 1989 of $2 per share vs. $1.72 per share in 1988, increasing the dividend for the seventh consecutive year.

Return on equity (ROE) was 17.45 percent vs. 18.03 percent in 1988, as the rate of growth in shareholder equity in 1989 exceeded earnings growth.

"Our capital position, already strong by regulatory standards, continued to strengthen last year. Specifically, our average equity totaled $615 million compared with $534 million in 1988, a 15.2-percent increase," MacDonald said.

MacDonald also noted that in 1989 Manufacturers:

-- took steps to enhance asset quality and continued reducing its share of the real estate construction market, and

-- continued to focus on four areas: middle market commercial lending, international, personal and commercial trust, and select areas of the retail market.

"These initiatives, in my estimation, are financially sound and wholly consistent with the long-term strategies we adopted in the early 1980s. We already have succeeded in diversifying our asset base and presently, 15 to 16 percent of the corporation's assets are held by subsidiaries or affiliates other than Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit," MacDonald said.

"Our institution has a greater proportion of fee-based income than any of our local peers. Our fee-based income has growth from $77.3 million in 1985 to $149.9 million in 1989. These are very positive factors that help differentiate us in a very competitive marketplace," he added.

Outlook for 1990

The following activities demonstrate continuity in the corporation's strategy to strengthen the corporate banking franchise and emphasize fee income-oriented services:

-- Manufacturers Bank's customhouse brokerage subsidiary John V. Carr & Son completed the acquisition of Duty Drawback Service of Novi, Mich.

-- Manufacturers National Corporation acquired certain assets and liabilities of the former Skokie Federal Savings and Loan in Skokie, Ill., bringing eight banking offices into Affiliated Banc Group.

-- The corporation reached an agreement in February to acquire State Bank of Lake Zurich in Lake Zurich, Ill., a bank with assets of $157 million as of year-end 1989. This acquisition is subject to regulatory approval.

-- The corporation committed to spending $6 million over the next 12 months to align corporate operations in Chicago with the lead bank in Detroit. These expenditures are investments that will integrate the corporation's Chicago assets and enhance the efficiency of the operations.

Election of Directors

Shareholders of Manufacturers National Corporation elected Paul H. Martzowka, 51, to the board of directors, as well as to the board of its principal bank subsidiary, Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit. Martzowka is treasurer and chief financial officer of the corporation and an executive vice president of the bank.

On a per share basis, the net loss in the 1990 period was $.13, compared to a net income of $.34 in the 1989 period.

Will Hopper, President, stated, "The company experienced considerable disruption in its manufacturing operations, and incurred significant costs during the latter part of its second quarter and throughout its third quarter as a result of the previously announced attempt by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union to organize the company's production employees. The organizing attempt was defeated in an election held March 1, 1990 by a vote of more than two to one. The union has filed objections to the election with The National Labor Relations Board, and it is not anticipated that these objections will be resolved for several months. BOULDER, CO (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Synergen Inc. (NASDAQ: SYGN) announced today that Hoffmann-La Roche is not planning to continue its support of Synergen's IL-1ra program. Synergen's development of IL-1ra as a potential treatment for several diseases, including rheumatoid arthritis, will not be affected.

Synergen's IL-1ra program has made significant progress toward beginning initial human clinical trials in the U.S. later this year. Preclinical work to determine the safety profile of IL-1ra and pharmacology studies in animal models of several inflammatory diseases are on schedule, with positive results, to support the necessary regulatory filing with the FDA.

Roche has informed Synergen that its decision was unrelated to results obtained in the development program for IL-1ra, which continues to be promising. Roche also stated that the decision followed from its reprioritization of its research portfolio and R&D initiatives.

Under terms of Synergen's agreement with Roche all worldwide rights in the IL-1ra product will revert to Syngergen. Further details were not disclosed.

Although payments from Roche accounted for 64 percent of sponsored research and development revenues during 1989, and 61 percent during the first quarter of 1990, Synergen does not expect that termination of support will adversely affect the development schedule for IL-1ra or Synergen's other products. Synergen's cash reserves currently exceed $50 million.

Synergen is a biotechnology company developing products to treat inflammatory diseases, vascular disorders and neurological conditions using recombinant DNA technology and the latest advances in molecular and cellular biology.

ATLANTA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Coca-Cola USA today said that it continues to look into the mechanical problems with the prize-delivery system in a very small number of MagiCans, the promotional can that looks like a regular soft drink can but delivers cash and prizes directly to consumers.

The projected failure rate of the promotional device is less than one percent of the total and the Company has received only 15 complaints from consumers since the promotion began on May 7.

The promotional can contains a specially designed plastic prize-delivery mechanism that is surrounded by water to make the can feel and sound like a regular can. When functioning properly, the mechanism automatically pops a prize out of the can when it is opened. The water in the can is not intended for consumption and consumers should not drink it.

The vast majority of the promotional cans are operating properly, however, less than one percent are not. In these instances, the prize cannot be easily retrieved. Additionally, the chlorinated water in the can becomes accessible. The water, which is harmless, does not taste good. No soft drink is contained in any MagiCan.

In the event consumers have questions about a malfunctioning promotional can, they should call the Company's toll free number, 1-800-331-3796. This promotion is running only in the United States.

Regular cans of Coca-Cola classic are not affected in any way.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Cerner Corp. (NASDAQ: CERN) today announced that it has agreed in principle to purchase 505,662 of its common shares held by First Chicago Capital Corp. and its affiliates for $11 per share. The transaction, which represents 13.8 percent of the shares outstanding, is expected to be closed in approximately two weeks. First Chicago will finance one half of the transaction over an eighteen month period. The remainder will be financed through a combination of operating funds and the company's existing credit lines.

Clifford W. Illig, president and chief operating officer, stated, "We have had a long and outstanding relationship with our venture capital partner. First Chicago played an invaluable role during Cerner's formative years and we will miss their relationship as we move forward. Considering our strengthened cash flows and the long-term potential for Cerner's products in the market place, we believe that the opportunity to repurchase our stock at $11 per share represents a sound investment for Cerner."

Paul J. Finnegan, vice president of First Chicago Venture Capital, said, "We have been involved with Cerner since 1983 and have been very pleased with our investment in the company. Cerner has made great strides in its development and growth and we continue to be optimistic regarding its long-term potential. It is our opinion that the company has reached the point where it has outgrown its need for a venture capital partner. This is a transaction that makes sense for both parties."

WASHINGTON, DC (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - In response to a request from U.S. Representative Henry Waxman, the General Accounting Office reports that U.S. leaf growers are primary beneficiaries of the export of U.S. cigarettes.

"Despite reduced domestic cigarette consumption, U.S. production of tobacco has risen in the last four years; 25 percent for flue leaf tobacco and 38 percent for burley tobacco...," the General Accounting Office report said.

The GAO (the investigative arm of the Congress) report was submitted to U.S. Representative Waxman and other members of Congress Thursday.

"This is one of the most in-depth studies ever conducted on the impact of tobacco exports on the American tobacco grower, and removes any doubt of the positive impact that cigarette exports have on the grower and the economy," commented Bo Johnson, Manager of the Tobacco Business Network.

The report said that during the past four years U.S. tobacco exports grew from 64 billion cigarettes to 142 billion.

"About 55 percent of this increase is attributable to imports of U.S. cigarettes by Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan. Therefore, it would appear that not only have the cigarette manufacturers benefited from the increased U.S. exports, but also the U.S. tobacco growers have gained from the greater U.S. cigarette exports. In addition, since U.S. tobacco is considered to be the finest quality in the world, exports of U.S. tobacco leaf to these countries have also increased since 1986; Japan, South Korea and Taiwan are now using more U.S. tobacco to improve the quality of their domestically produced cigarettes to compete with foreign imports," the GAO reported to Congress.

The GAO said that its report was the result of reviews of studies conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service and Foreign Agriculture Service, the cigarette industry, academia, and personal interviews with tobacco industry officials.

The GAO also examined the economic impact of tobacco and reported that U.S. farmers received $2.25 billion in 1988 for their crops. Tobacco also contributed $4.4 billion in federal taxes and $4.9 billion in state and local taxes.

According to GAO findings, the U.S. tobacco trade surplus in 1989 was $4.3 billion, up from $2 billion in 1986.

"U.S. tobacco growers are benefiting from the recent increases in cigarette exports, despite reduced domestic cigarette consumption, and tobacco production has increased to meet growing export demand," the report said.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - John G. McMillian, chairman and CEO of Allegheny & Western Corporation (NASDAQ: ALGH), today announced that during the third quarter of fiscal 1990 the company's earnings were $2,547,000, or $.32 per share, compared to $2,356,000, or $.29 per share, in the third quarter of fiscal 1989.

During the first nine months of fiscal 1990 the company earned $3,779,000, or $.47 per share, compared to $3,467,000, or $.43 per share, in the comparable period in fiscal 1989. Net income was higher than pre-tax income due to a one-time reversal of a previously recorded reserve for taxes which is no longer required. Pre-tax earnings were lower in third quarter primarily due to lower earnings at Mountaineer Gas. Revenues were higher due to a pass-through of increased gas costs at Mountaineer. However, as a consequence of warmer weather, gas volumes and profits were lower compared to the same period last year. In addition, the company incurred increased expenses relating to the operations of its TEX-HEX subsidiary which was created in November 1989 to conduct the company's horizontal drilling efforts in Texas. The recent rate case order of the West Virginia Public Service Commission permitting increased rates for Mountaineer Gas Company will take effect July 13, 1990.

ALPHARETTA, GA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Digital Communications Associates Inc. (DCA) (NYSE: DCA) today adopted a shareholder rights plan that is designed to protect DCA shareholders from various coercive or unfair takeover tactics, including attempts to acquire control of the company at an inadequate price.

DCA said the plan is not aimed at preventing a takeover, but is intended to encourage a prospective buyer to negotiate appropriately with its board of directors prior to attempting a takeover.

"The plan is intended to aid the board of directors in ensuring that all DCA shareholders realize the long-term value of their investment in DCA," said Charles G. Betty, DCA president and chief executive officer.

The plan provides for the distribution as a dividend of one "right" for each outstanding share of DCA common stock. At the time the plan is adopted, the rights are neither exercisable nor traded separately from the common stock. The rights will be exercisable only if a person or group acquires 20 percent or more of DCA's common stock, or if a tender offer is announced that would result in the ownership of 20 percent or more of DCA's common stock.

If a person or group acquires 20 percent or more of DCA's common stock, all holders of rights, except the acquirer, may purchase, at the exercise price -- initially $100 -- DCA common stock having a value of twice the exercise price. In addition, if, after such event, DCA is acquired in a merger or share exchange, or 50 percent or more of its assets are sold in one or more related transactions, all holders of the rights, except the acquirer, may purchase shares of the acquirer's voting stock at a similar discount. DCA may redeem the rights at one cent each before a person acquires 20 percent of DCA's common stock and thereafter under certain circumstances.

The dividend distribution of rights will be payable to shareholders of record on May 29. The rights will expire in 10 years. The distribution of rights is not taxable to shareholders.

The rights distribution will be described in more detail in letters that will be mailed shortly to all DCA shareholders.

Based 30 miles north of Atlanta, DCA designs, manufactures and markets personal computer peripheral products.

BOSTON (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The First National Bank of Boston, principal subsidiary of Bank of Boston Corporation (NYSE: BKB), will begin to operate the eight Greater Boston-area branch offices of MerchantsBank of Boston, effective Monday, May 21. Bank of Boston assumed MerchantsBank's approximately $340 million in deposits, as well as the option to acquire certain physical assets of the bank's branches, as a result of an action by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC).

MerchantsBank, a Massachusetts-chartered cooperative bank with $350 million in assets, was officially declared insolvent today by Andrew J. Calamere, the Massachusetts Commissioner of Banks, and immediately placed under FDIC receivership. MerchantsBank will not be open tomorrow for its normal Saturday business hours.

Bank of Boston, which assumed the MerchantsBank deposits as a result of a request from the FDIC, will re-open all eight branch offices on Monday morning.

"We want to assure all MerchantsBank depositors that their money is safe and secure with our institution," said Bank of Boston Chairman and CEO Ira Stepanian. "We know that depositors will have many questions and concerns. We want to reassure them that they have not lost their money and that they will be able to do their business as usual on Monday morning when these branches re-open as part of New England's oldest and largest banking company."

Bank of Boston has established a toll-free "hot line" to answer questions from MerchantsBank's deposit customers. The "hot line" number is 1-800-752-6611. Customers may call this special Bank of Boston customer service center, beginning this evening until 9 p.m., continuing through Saturday and Sunday this weekend, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and on a daily basis thereafter.

MerchantsBank deposit customers who would normally use their Automated Teller Machine (ATM) cards can continue to do so at MerchantsBank ATMs or at other network affiliated terminals.

Bank of Boston expects to retain the branch and operations support staff and certain other employees of MerchantBank for a transitionary period of 30 to 60 days, during which time staffing needs will be analyzed and further hiring decisions will be made.

Of the eight MerchantsBank branches, there are four Boston-based locations -- in Dorchester, Roslindale, Cleveland Circle/Brighton, and on Tremont Street in the downtown area -- as well as suburban branches in Acton, Belmont, Cambridge and Carlisle.

"We are pleased that Bank of Boston has been able to assist in preserving the continuity of these deposit relationships," Stepanian said, "and we're also pleased that the FDIC asked for the help of a strong, local bank such as ours."

Bank of Boston, with assets in excess of $37 billion, is a superregional banking company with operations in five of the six New England states, as well as a significant presence both nationally and globally.

FLINT, MI (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - While continuing its consolidation and restructuring program, Flint-based Action Auto Stores, Inc. (NASDAQ: AAST) today reported an expected third-quarter loss.

C. James Sabo, Action Auto chairman and chief executive officer, also said the third-quarter results do not reflect the impact of the major refinancing program which was closed at the end of the quarter.

"The refinancing helped us with our inventory and in other areas of our company but not until after the third quarter," said Sabo. "We expect that this will help us report progress in the fourth quarter."

Sales for the third quarter ended March 31 totaled $19.8 million compared to $24.8 million for the same 1989 period. Sales for the nine months were $74.2 million compared to $75.2 million for the 1989 nine- month period.

The loss for the third quarter was $5,687,600 compared to income of $295,000 in the 1989 comparable period. The loss for the nine months was $6,655,800 compared to income of $909,600 for the same period a year ago.

Sabo said Action Auto's restructuring and consolidation program continues with 10 stores having been closed. Another eight will be closed in the next two weeks.

"We regret having to take these actions, but we believe they were absolutely necessary under the circumstances," said Sabo. "As a result of these and other actions, we expect not only to indicate progress in the fourth quarter, but we hope for continued improvement in fiscal 1991."

Action Auto also announced that Steven H. Smith, president of Smith Security Corporation of Troy, Mich., has agreed to accept appointment to the company's board of directors. The company is actively pursuing additional candidates for the second open position on the board. David R. Bomberger and Walter J. Kirchberger, previous directors, recently left the board, citing pressure from their other commitments.

When the consolidation is completed, Action Auto will operate 50 auto parts stores in Michigan. It also offers service and sells gasoline.

PHILADELPHIA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Mellon Bank Corp. (NYSE: MEL) announced today that its Philadelphia bank subsidiary, Mellon Bank (East), has completed its purchase of 54 PSFS branch offices and the PSFS name from Meritor Savings Bank.

"This is a landmark day for both Mellon and PSFS," said Thomas F. Donovan, chairman and chief executive officer of Mellon Bank (East). "We've now brought together two of the most respected and historic names in Pennsylvania banking. Together, the outstanding people of Mellon and PSFS look forward to providing the best in banking products and services to the people and businesses in the Delaware Valley."

Completion of the transaction creates a combined branch network of more than 100 offices in the Philadelphia area and increases Mellon's deposits to more than $8 billion in the five-county Philadelphia market. This results in an increase in deposit market share from about 5 percent to approximately 14 percent.

The purchased PSFS branches begin operation as part of Mellon Bank on Monday, May 21. Donovan noted that the Mellon and PSFS branch systems will continue to operate separately until their computer systems are fully integrated. He said the integration is likely to be completed in early 1991.

"It's business as usual for customers of both Mellon and PSFS," Donovan said. "We're working hard to ensure a smooth transition with minimal disruption to customers."

As part of that effort, Mellon has created four "branches within a branch" at its branches at Broad and Chestnut streets; 7th and Market streets; 22nd and Market streets; and 2nd and Chestnut streets. In addition to serving Mellon customers, these sites have been specially equipped to serve PSFS customers.

"We wanted to ensure that PSFS customers accustomed to doing their banking in Center City would continue to be able to do so," Donovan said. "This is one way of showing our new customers that they are important to us and that we will work hard to earn their continued business."

Donovan said that once the Mellon and PSFS systems have been integrated, the combined bank will operate under the name "Mellon PSFS." Extensive research and planning have been completed regarding a new graphic identifier for "Mellon PSFS," he said.

The 54 branches acquired are located as follows: eight in Bucks County; three in Chester County; 13 in Delaware County; 15 in Montgomery County; and 15 in Philadelphia County.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) today placed Jonesboro Federal Savings and Loan Association, Jonesboro, La., in receivership and chartered a new federal mutual institution to take its place.

The new institution, Jonesboro Federal Savings Association, will assume certain assets and liabilities of the old thrift, and will operate in conservatorship under the oversight of the Resolution Trust Corporation.

The conservatorship did not result in any interruption of Jonesboro's day-to-day operations. The institution will remain open for business as usual. Holders of insured accounts are not affected by the action, which was taken by OTS to protect insured depositors and the interests of the thrift insurance fund. Deposits remain insured to the $100,000 legal limit.

OTS initiated the action because Jonesboro Federal was operating in an unsafe and unsound condition and has incurred losses that have depleted nearly all of its capital, with no prospect of replenishment without federal assistance. The thrift's deteriorating condition is due to lack of strategic direction from the board of directors, incompetent management erroneous books and records, a high level of non-earning assets and excessive interest-rate risks.

As of Feb. 28, 1990, Jonesboro Federal reported assets of $54.8 million, liabilities of $54.5 million and tangible capital of $253,000, for a tangible capital-to-assets ratio of 0.46 percent.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - A group of investors has charged McCaw Cellular Communications Inc. with breach of contract for failing to share proceeds from its recent sale of telephone properties purchased earlier from Charisma Communications Corp.

The investors were shareholders of Charisma Communications Corporation and are led by Donald R. DePriest, Charisma's former chairman.

According to the complaint filed in federal district court here, Charisma Communications sold cellular properties in the southeastern United States to McCaw in 1986. In February 1990, the suit contends that substantially all of the Charisma properties and/or properties McCaw purchased from Maxcell Telecom Plus, Inc., were resold to Contel Cellular Inc. for $1.3 billion. Under the terms of the Charisma sale agreement, this subsequent sale to Contel entitles the Charisma shareholders to receive 25 percent of McCaw's net capital gain, estimated at $1.167 billion.

The complaint alleges that the February 1990 McCaw sale to Contel Cellular triggers the 25 percent share agreement, and it seeks payment of this share.

DOMINGUEZ, CA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Pic 'N' Save Corporation (NASDAQ: PICN) announced today that its board of directors has instructed its investment bankers to actively contact potentially interested parties to determine their interest in making a proposal to buy the company. The board also authorized the company to offer potential buyers, including Girard Partners L.P., an opportunity to review certain non-public information. The offer is conditioned upon the execution of a confidentiality agreement with certain limited standstill provisions.

Girard Partners L.P. has said that it might make a bid for Pic 'N' Save and is currently conducting a consent solicitation to take control of the company's board for purposes of conducting an auction for Pic 'N' Save.

Lewis B. Merrifield III, chairman and chief executive officer of Pic 'N' Save, stated, "The board has serious reservations as to whether any transaction at a premium to the current price can be financed, given the current market environment, or whether a proposal reflecting the inherent value of the company will be forthcoming. In fact, since Girard Partners' announcement on April 11, we have not received to date a single expression of interest from any other party regarding the purchase of the company.

"We continue to believe that shareholder value will be maximized by Pic 'N' Save's continued operation in accordance with its recently announced operating plan. However, in order to remove any doubts in the minds of our shareholders, we have decided to take this course of action to establish whether shareholder value can be maximized through a sale at this time."

Merrifield added, "While the company would be receptive to a fully financed offer at a fair price, no decision has been made to sell the company should such an offer not be forthcoming."

Under the terms of the proposed confidentiality agreement to be offered to Girard Partners and other potential bidders, Pic 'N' Save would agree to provide certain non-public information -- including projections and access to senior management of the company -- until June 20, 1990, to permit such parties either to make a proposal or establish that they are unable to do so.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) today placed Southwest Savings Association, Dallas, under government conservatorship and appointed the Resolution Trust Corporation to manage the institution.

The conservatorship did not result in any interruption of Southwest's day-to-day operations. The institution and its 69 branches will remain open for business as usual. Holders of insured accounts are not affected by the action, which was taken by OTS to protect insured depositors and the interests of the thrift insurance fund. Deposits remain insured to the $100,000 legal limit.

OTS initiated the action because Southwest was operating in an unsafe and unsound condition and had incurred losses that depleted substantially all of its capital, with no prospect of replenishment without federal assistance. The institution is insolvent.

Currently, 94 percent of Southwest's outstanding common stock is o7 1/4Hd by the Caroline Hunt Trust Estate, and 6 percent is owned by beneficiaries of the trust. Southwest Savings is the state's third- largest thrift.

Southwest's condition is due primarily to continuous operating losses and to a high level of non-earning real estate assets, including loans, investments and real estate owned. Moreover, under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989, substantial capital forbearances granted by regulators in 1988 no longer can be counted as part of the institution's regulatory capital, a factor that contributed to the insolvency.

Southwest Savings anchored one of 15 thrift consolidations achieved under the Southwest Plan, unveiled in February 1988 by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the predecessor agency to OTS. The plan was designed to revive the troubled Texas thrift industry by eliminating unhealthy thrifts and excess branches through consolidation, thus reducing operating costs, and by attracting new capital from acquirers.

In May 1988, Southwest Savings acquired four insolvent Texas thrifts: Stockton Savings Association, Addison; Lamar Savings Association, Austin; City Savings and Loan Association, San Angelo; and Briercroft Savings Association, Austin.

Southwest contributed $25 million in equity capital to the transaction in return for $2 billion in notes, yield maintenance and capital coverage on troubled assets from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC), the forerunner to the Savings Association Insurance Fund (SAIF).

Altogether FSLIC guaranteed approximately 60 percent of the assets obtained through the consolidation, the assistance was insufficient to offset the non-performance of the non-covered assets and the decline in market value of real estate owned.

Nonetheless, Southwest has reduced operating costs an average $38 million a year for the past two years. Management has cut general and administrative expenses by 46.4 percent, and has closed or consolidated 42 branches.

The institution has sold $268.4 million in real estate owned and $136.2 million in covered assets, and has enhanced the value of its covered assets by an estimated $90 million to $100 million through aggressive property management.

As of March 31, 1990, Southwest reported assets of $5.4 billion, liabilities of $5.6 billion and tangible capital of negative $303.5 million, for a tangible capital-to-assets ratio of negative 5.64 percent.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Capital Bank of California today reported first-quarter 1990 net income of $325,000, or $.01 per share, compared with $894,000, or $.03 per share, for the first quarter of 1989.

The bank attributed the decline in first-quarter earnings to a reduction in the prime rate and provisions for possible loan and investment security losses. Daniel Holtz, president and chief executive officer, said these provisions are consistent with the bank's prudent approach to setting aside valuation reserves for corporate bonds and increasing loan loss reserves in response to a weakened Southern California economy.

"Our first-quarter performance also reflects additional expenses incurred to expand the bank's management team and to support our retail banking efforts," Holtz explained.

"In a commitment to consumer banking, we reorganized the bank in October 1989 to position the institution for greater growth opportunities in the 1990s. We believe that the additional resources devoted to this effort will produce significant long-term benefits for Capital Bank of California."

Although federal tax benefits attributable to operations prior to the 1985 acquisition of the bank cannot be credited to net income, accounting conventions allow the bank to apply the benefit of the net operating loss (NOL) carryforward to the bank's capital accounts.

Consequently, stockholders' equity grew by $525,000 as a result of the first quarter 1990 operating performance. At March 31, 1990, stockholders' equity stood at $19.1 million and the bank's primary capital ratio stood at 7.25 percent.

Total assets at March 31, 1990 were $293 million compared with $279 million at March 31, 1989. Deposits amounted to $271 million compared with $257 million at March 31, 1989, and net loans were $217 million compared with $186 million a year ago.

Headquartered in Century City, Capital Bank of California has 10 offices in Southern California. The bank is affiliated with Capital Bank in Miami a $1.04 billion-asset institution with 26 South Florida offices and a factoring subsidiary, Capital Factors, Inc. Capital Bank of California also is affiliated with Capital Bank, N.A., a $94 million-asset bank in Washington.

HAUPPAUGE, NY (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Knogo Corporation (NYSE: KNO) today reported that for the fiscal year ended Feb. 28, 1990, revenues increased 13.3 percent to $67,008,100, compared with revenues of $59,144,800 for the 1989 fiscal year. Net income for the 1990 fiscal year amounted to $480,300, or $.09 per share, compared with net income of $3,356,400, or $.65 per share in the previous year.

Revenues in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 rose 33.3 percent to $17,966,000, up from $13,477,000 reported in the prior year's period. For the same quarter, the company reported a net loss of $821,000, or $.16 per share, as compared to a loss of $791,000, or $.15 per share for the identical period of the 1989 fiscal year.

Results for the year were adversely impacted by several factors. One of the most significant was a non-recurring fourth quarter charge of $550,000 incurred in the settlement with the Internal Revenue Service of a tax issue dating back to fiscal 1980. Also, after a management study conducted during the fourth quarter, the company determined that due to the changing nature of its business it would be prudent to establish a reserve for warranty costs associated with certain of its domestic and foreign leases. The charge for fiscal 1990 amounted to approximately $400,000.

As mentioned in the second-quarter report to shareholders, net income for the first half of fiscal 1990, ended Aug. 31, 1989, was adversely impacted by two issues: the first, legal and settlement expenses of approximately $700,000 incurred in a patent litigation suit that is now settled; the second, the need to make a special provision of approximately $630,000 for appropriate income taxes associated with upstreaming funds from the company's operations in Puerto Rico.

During fiscal 1990, the company expanded its research and development expenditures by $610,000, or 31.6 percent over the previous year's amount of $1,929,600. As a result of this investment, the company developed a number of new materials and products, including KnoGlo(R) and WaferLITE(R) during fiscal 1990. Management indicated the company should derive the benefits of these expenditures for fiscal 1991 as well as on-going into the future. The company also committed itself to significant additional expenses associated with the expansion of its marketing organization and with the introduction of its Closed Circuit Video System (CCVS) product line.

Management said it was encouraged by the increase in revenues, particularly in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, as well as by the increase in worldwide bookings, which were approximately $94 million for fiscal 1990, compared to $85 million for fiscal 1989. In addition, the company's backlog continues at an all-time high, due to a "customized, value-added" concept which necessitates longer lead time for delivery of customized products.

CLEVELAND (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Charter One Financial, Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS: COFI) announced today that its principal subsidiary, The First Federal Savings Bank, has acquired Broadview Federal Savings Bank under a purchase and assumption agreement with the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC), the government agency acting as receiver for Broadview.

The acquisition is effective immediately and increases First Federal's offices in the Cleveland S.M.S.A. by nearly 60 perecent, from 28 to 44. Broadview represents the 10th financial institution to be acquired or merged by First Federal since 1981.

Broadview is the first thrift in Ohio administered by the Resolution Trust Corporation to be acquired by another banking institution.

Under the terms of the agreement, The First Federal Savings Bank assumes the Broadview deposits and purchases only selected assets consisting primarily of non-delinquent residential loans for a purchase price of $11.95 million. The acquisition does not include Broadview's corporate headquarters building in Independence, Ohio.

Charles John Koch, president and chief executive officer of Charter One and First Federal, said, "Because federal regulations enable us to acquire only Broadview's strongest loans as well as the actual deposits in place, the result is that First Federal and Charter One will grow substantially with no dilution of our shareholders' equity.

"The Broadview customer base and branch offices are well established and are of significant interest in enhancing our franchise throughout Ohio. With the addition of the 16 Broadview offices, our banking network now consists of 71 locations throughout the state. Our total deposit base will increase to approximately $2.6 billion and with the assets purchased, First Federal will rank as Ohio's second largest thrift institutions with assets exceeding $3 billion. Our total deposit base market share will increase by over 40 percent and in the local S.M. S.A. by 100 percent. Broadview customers will also have access to many outstanding deposit and loan services offered by First Federal."

Koch continued, "The addition of the Broadview offices in Cuyahoga County will increase our offices to 44 providing Broadview and First Federal customers with a major convenience in banking locations. Broadview customers will also have access to many outstanding deposit and loan services offered by our bank. Branch hours and operations will continue as normal and it's business as usual. Broadview customers may continue to use their existing checking accounts, teller machine cards, and the services provided through the Pick-N-Pay and Finast stores. Loan customers will continue to remit their payments in the usual fashion. Eventually, Broadview customers will be able to do business at any of our 71 offices comprising our banking network."

Broadview's corporate headquarters operation will be assimilated into First Federal's. Branch personnel will all be retained and as many staff employees as possible, as the determination of our needs is evaluated.

Koch added that Broadview depositors would receive detailed information on the acquisition within a week.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has fined the Guam Department of Public Works $55,000 in settlement of an enforcement action against the department for violations of the Clean Water Act (CWA) at the Ordot solid waste landfill.

"This settlement sends a clear message that both the Environmental Protection Agency and Guam are aggressively enforcing the law to protect Guam's water bodies, and that violations of the Clean Water Act will not be tolerated," said Harry Seraydarian, EPA's water management division director.

According to the terms of the settlement, Guam will pay $15,000 to the U.S. EPA, and $40,000 to the Guam Environmental Protection Agency (GEPA) for a study to characterize the solid waste stream on Guam by determining the amount of waste, its composition, its ability to be recycled and combustibility. The study will lay the groundwork for plans for Guam's future waste disposal operations.

The Guam Department of Public Works, which operates the Ordot landfill, was cited by EPA in August 1989 for discharging untreated leachate from the landfill into the Lonfit River without a National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System permit, a violation of the CWA.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) today is seeking public comments on revisions of two draft permits which would allow Star-Kist Samoa Inc. and VCS Samoa Packing Co.

to dispose of fish processing wastes from their canneries into the Pacific Ocean off American Samoa.

EPA issued notices for proposed permits for the two companies in February 1990, and the companies then requested changes to the draft permits.

According to the revised permits, VCS Samoa is proposing to dispose of up to 200,000 gallons per day of fish wastes. VCS had originally proposed to dump a maximum of 56,900 gallons per day. Star-Kist's proposed discharge will remain the same at 200,000 gallons per day. EPA has determined that unacceptable adverse impacts or damage to the marine environment will not occur at the disposal site as a result of the waste disposal operation.

The waste will be discharge from a disposal vessel at a site located about five and one-half miles offshore. The federal Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act authorizes EPA to issue the ocean disposal permits.

LOS ANGELES, (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - CalFed Inc. (NYSE: CAL), parent of California Federal Bank, FSB, today said that the company was disappointed with Moody's Investors Service's decision earlier today to lower the debt ratings of CalFed Inc. and California Federal Bank.

"We find this decision by Moody's to be especially disappointing in light of the improvements we have achieved in the fundamentals of our banking business," said Jerry St. Dennis, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of CalFed Inc. "A downgrade at this time, given the strength of the company's first quarter core earnings and its improving capital levels, highlights the fact that concerns about real estate are overshadowing the strong performances of many California institutions."

The company believes that the action by Moody's reflects the rating agency's pessimistic outlook for California real estate values and is part of a pattern of lowered ratings for California banks and thrift institutions generally. In addition, CalFed notes that its measures of asset quality and reserves compare very favorably with higher-rated firms in California; real estate owned and non-accrual loans represented 1.43 percent of assets at California Federal Bank at April 30.

CalFed Inc., with over $25 billion in assets, is a financial services holding company headquartered in Los Angeles. California Federal Bank is the nation's fourth largest savings institution and operates through nearly 200 offices in California, Florida, Nevada, Georgia and Arizona.

SAN DIEGO (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Fujitsu Systems of America, based in San Diego, today unveiled the new stamp-dispensing capability available on their ACT family of automated teller machines (ATMs). No more lines at the post office -- now buying stamps will be as easy as withdrawing cash from your ATM.

Working with the U.S. Postal Service and Seattle First National Bank (Seafirst), Fujitsu helped design a system that will easily dispense stamps, automatically debiting the customer's account for the requested amount. "Fujitsu is a customer-driven company. We are always looking for new ways to make things more convenient for consumers," said Kevin Murphy, senior vice president, marketing of Fujitsu Systems of America. "I know how people always dread standing in line at the post office for stamps. The U.S. Postal Service also recognized this problem and together with Seafirst Bank and Fujitsu, we came up with a solution."

This new capability can be added to Fujitsu's existing ATMs. This new feature will be seen on local ATMs as early as first quarter 1991. A preview of what is to come can be seen in Fujitsu's booth (No. 1711) at the 1990 American Banking Association Conference being held at the San Diego Convention Center May 20-23.

In keeping with their goal of improved user interfaces, Fujitsu Systems was the first U.S. vendor to offer color graphics on their ATMs. Other innovative features include voice guidance, an option useful in guiding customers through a first-time or a seldom-used transaction and a statement printer which enables customers to take home a printout of their current account information. Now customers can take home postage stamps as well.

Fujitsu Systems, dedicated to bringing the very latest in technology to the banking industry, spent nearly two years working with Seafirst and the United States Postal Service on the development of this stamp-dispensing capability. The stamp dispensing ATMs will be test-marketed for six months at selected Seafirst locations in the Seattle area. Fujitsu Systems of America manages their ATM products from their headquarters facility located in San Diego, just east of Del Mar, Calif.

Fujitsu Systems of America is part of the Fujitsu Limited group of companies. Fujitsu Limited is a $20 billion company and global leader in computer and telecommunications technology. PITTSBURGH (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - National Intergroup, Inc. (NYSE: NII) announced today that it intends to make a tender offer for all outstanding cumulative convertible preference units of Permian Partners, L.P. at a purchase price of $3.75 per preference unit, in cash.

The tender offer price is subject to reduction on a per unit basis to reflect any distributions made on the preference units after May 18, 1990, and prior to the consummation of the tender offer, other than the distribution made with respect to the quarter ended March 31, 1990, which will be paid on May 31, 1990. NII said it intends to commence the offer no later than Friday, May 25, 1990.

The offer will be conditioned upon, among other things, at least a majority of the publicly held preference units being validly tendered and not withdrawn. In addition, the offer will be conditioned on the adoption of an amendmenet to the Partnership Agreement of Permian Partners which would permit NII, upon the acquisition of a majority of the publicly held preference units pursuant to the tender offer, to purchase all of the remaining preference units of Permian Partners at a purchase price equal to the purchase price paid pursuant to the tender offer. Adoption of the amendment will require the affirmative vote of limited partners holding a majority of the outstanding preference units and common units, excluding units held by the general partner and its affiliates, voting as a single class. The board of directors of The Permian Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of NII and the general partner of Permian Partners, has determined to propose the amendment to limited partners on the basis of the affirmative vote of four directors, three of whom are also directors of NII and one of whom is an officer of The Permian Corp. The three independent directors of The Permian Corp. abstained from voting on the amendment.

On April 16, 1990, a special committee of the independent directors of The Permian Corp. announced that, after consultation with their financial adviser, they would not recommend a proposal made by NII on Dec. 20, 1989, to acquire, pursuant to a merger or other business combination between Permian Partners and an affiliate of NII, all outstanding preference units at a purchase price of $4.00 per preference unit, subject to reduction to reflect any distributions on the preference units other than the disribution made with respect to the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989. As a result, NII announced on April 17, 1990, that it had withdrawn its proposal.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Telematics International, Inc. (NASDAQ: TMAX), has appointed William A. Hightower, its president and chief operating officer and a director, to the additional position of chief executive officer. John P. Pitt, who formerly held that position, will remain as chairman of the board.

"When Bill joined Telematics in August 1989, the plan was to have him eventually run the company overall on a day-to-day basis to take best advantage of his more than two decade's worth of telecommunications industry experience," Pitt said.

Hightower, prior to joining Telematics, was vice chairman and chief executive officer of American Transtech, a subsidiary of AT&T, and chairman of AT&T's Advanced Information Services. During his 23-year tenure with AT&T, Hightower held numerous senior-level management positions involving telecommunications, information services, marketing and sales.

In addition to continuing to serve as chairman of Telematics, Pitt said he will "oversee our company's international operations, particularly in Europe where the evolving unified market offers major opportunities to Telematics."

Founded in 1982, Telematics designs, manufactures and markets computer systems and software products designed specifically for voice and data communications applications and networks. The company's products include a full range of programmable packet switching systems, low-end protocol converters and switches, T1 multiplexers, and frame relay switches. Telematics has approximately 400 employees worldwide. FT. LAUDERDALE, FL (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Using the resources of the nationally known Household Retail Services Inc., a division of Household Finance (a consumer credit agency), Niagara Corp. (NASDAQ: NIAG) entered into an agreement to extend a revolving line of credit for health care purchases to its principle target market -- America's graying population.

This agreement will allow Niagara, itself a nationally recognized name for quality health care and therapeutic products, to issue a "Niagara Credit Card" to prospective purchasers of its consumer products. The credit line will permit qualifying customers to purchase any of Niagara's existing products, including its reclining and lift chairs, and adjustable beds. The company's lift chair already qualifies for the 80 percent reimbursement rate paid by medicaid programs. In addition, holders of Niagara credit cards will receive constant updates on all new and existing products offered by Niagara. According to Niagara's management, the concept of a health care credit card is consistent with consumer purchasing trends, and is expected to play a major role in the company's anticipated sales expansion over the next 12 months.

Niagara's National Direct Sales Program Ahead of Schedule Niagara unveiled its first ever in-home sales and marketing video to be used in the company's national direct sales program. The tape contains detailed information, according to management, for consistent and organized presentations to customers. "We are in a media age, and many of today's consumers are very comfortable with this type of presentation," according to Niagara's president, Michael S. Riley. This video incorporates another important advancement in the company's national direct in-home sales program which commenced in February 1990, and has progressed ahead of schedule.

Niagara Relieves Stress At Nation's Capital Niagara received a vote of confidence during April 1990, when the nation's Chief Executive purchased one of Niagara's Executive "Stress Relief" Chairs for use in the Oval Office. The company was so pleased by President Bush's confidence in their high-quality therapeutic Executive Chair, they are entertaining the idea of changing the name of that particular chair to "The Presidential Chair."

Believing that there is no greater contribution that Niagara could make to the Executive Branch of our government than to be able to reduce the stress of our nation's Chief Executive, the company is also offering, in a gesture of world peace, an Executive Stress Relief Chair to Mikhail Gorbachev.

SEATTLE (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - NeoRx Corporation (NASDAQ: NERX) today announced that it has initiated Phase III clinical studies with its imaging agent for non-small cell lung cancer. The company's cancer detection product, OncoTrac(R) imaging kit, contains a monoclonal antibody fragment that is labeled with the radionuclide technetium-99m.

"This is the first Phase III study designed to demonstrate the usefulness of antibody imaging for presurgical staging of patients with newly diagnosed lung cancer," said Darrell Salk, M.D., NeoRx's director of diagnostic imaging. "OncoTrac imaging not only facilitates the evaluation of the chest, but in the same procedure it can also help locate tumors throughout the entire body.

"Results from our Phase II study indicate that the agent may help physicians decide whether a patient is a candidate for potentially curative surgery," said Salk. "OncoTrac imaging is a noninvasive procedure that should help certain lung cancer patients avoid a surgical procedure," Salk continued. Currently, most lung cancer patients require a surgical procedure to determine the extent of tumor in the chest.

Non-small cell lung cancer occurs in approximately 120,000 patients annually in the United States. NeoRx filed a product license application for OncoTrac imaging to stage patients with small cell lung cancer in December 1989. Both the small cell and non-small cell imaging products contain the same components and both employ NeoRx's proprietary monoclonal antibody, NR-LU-10. Thus, approval of these agents will make OncoTrac imaging kits available to all patients with both small cell and non-small cell lung cancer, approximately 160,000 patients per year in the United States.

NeoRx Corporation, incorporated in May 1984, is developing monoclonal antibody-based pharmaceutical products for in vivo detection and treatment of certain types of cancer. The company has five cancer clinical trials in progress and has filed for marketing approval with the FDA for two OncoTrac imaging products to detect metastatic melanoma and small cell lung cancer.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - American Confectionery Corp. (NASDAQ: CNDY) today announced that its ongoing strategy of converting company-owned stores to franchised operations has enabled the company to post a profit from continuing operations of $929,000 or $.18 per share, on revenues of $17,447,000 for the nine months ended March 31, 1990. This compares to $433,000, or $.10 per share, on revenues of $11,019,000 for the comparable period in 1989.

The company showed an overall net loss of $137,000, or $.03 per share, for the nine months ended March 31, 1990, versus a profit of $988,000 or $.12 per share, for the nine months ended March 31, 1989, after a change of $1,066,000 from discontinued operations.

For the quarter ended March 31, 1990, the company showed a net loss from continuing operations of $284,000, or $.05 per share, on revenues of $4,610,000. A loss from discontinued operations of $663,000 brought the net loss to $947,000, or $.18 per share, compared to a net loss of $1,041,000, or $.21 per share, for the quarter ended March 31, 1989.

"It is evident that the company's core businesses are steadily improving," noted Steve Kircher, president and chief executive officer. "For example the company's retail nut business, which had been operating at an annualized $17 million loss when acquired in November 1988, is currently operating at breakeven."

Since September 1987, the company has grown rapidly, through acquisitions. Kircher said he expects the recent acquisition of J. Higby's Inc., a franchisor of frozen-yogurt specialty stores, to reduce the seasonality of the holiday-driven candy business.

The company is planning significant expansion of its franchising operations in the United States, Canada and the Pacific Rim, and has recently signed agreements to expand its convention and stadium business.

LONDON (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of Huntingdon International Holdings plc (NASDAQ: HTD) has released the following announcement today:

"The board of Huntingdon International Holdings plc is pleased to announce that Huntingdon has entered into a conditional agreement (the merger agreement) for the acquisition by a wholly owned Texas subsidiary of Huntingdon of the whole of the issued common stock of Southwestern Laboratories (SWL) for a cash consideration of U.S.$20 million.

"In addition, Huntingdon has conditionally agreed to purchase certain related properties from the profit sharing retirement plan and trust for employees of SWL (the trust) for a cash consideration of $6.2 million.

"The board of Huntingdon also announces a cash placing (the placing) with institutional investors in London of 4,437,840 new Huntingdon ordinary shares of 5 pence each at 306p per share to raise approximately pounds sterling 13.5 million, net of expenses."

Information on SWL "SWL is a leading geotechnical engineering and testing organization based in Houston, Texas. The company provides analytical chemistry, geotechnical engineering, soil testing, materials testing and non- destructive engineering services to the construction and environmental markets of Texas and Louisiana.

"Established for 75 years, SWL employs 600 staff, of whom over 200 are of registered engineer, degree or certified technician status. The members of SWL's management board have an average of 24 years service with the company.

"In the year ended July 31, 1989, SWL achieved pre-tax profit of $116,000 on turnover of $30.8 million. In the six months ended Jan. 31 1990 pre-tax profit improved to $1.08 million on turnover of $16.4 million, reflecting increasing levels of cost control.

"As at Dec. 31 1989, SWL's shareholders equity amounted to $7.3 million. The trust's properties were valued in April 1990, at $6.2 million."

Reasons for and benefits of the Acquisition "Huntingdon had identified the South Central region of the United States as being of strategic importance to the development of its regional network of engineering and environmental businesses. The region contains some of the USA's major metropolitan areas and commercial centers.

"SWL takes Huntingdon into these major new markets and the transaction is consistent with the strategy of selective acquisition of high caliber engineering and testing operations. SWL brings new expertise to Huntingdon in pavement materials research and metallurgical analysis.

"The board of Huntingdon has identified a number of areas for making improvement in SWL's earnings. Taken with the rapidly improving business conditions in Texas, the board considers that the acquisition will not lead to any dilution in Huntingdon's earnings per share in the current financial year. Thereafter, continued improvements are expected to produce enhancement in earnings per share."

NEW YORK (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Moody's Investors Service today confirmed the State of Connecticut's special tax obligation bond rating of A1.

The state expects to sell $250,000,000 of special tax obligation (transportation infrastructure program) bonds on May 25.

George Leung, Moody's vice president and managing director for state ratings, said, "Dedicated highway revenues provide comfortable margins of security. Budgetary pressure had earlier shifted certain costs to the Special Transportation Fund, slowed economic growth is now reflected in lower revenue projections, and substantial additional borrowing is projected. To maintain the capital plan, the state may need to shift some of the assumed costs back to the General Fund or raise Special Transportation Fund revenue."

The change requires the consent of the Swedish government, and an application to this effect has already been submitted to the government.

The annual general meeting also authorized the board of directors to issue shares to partly finance the acquisition of the U.S. medical technology company Cobe Laboratories, Inc. The authorization concerns the issuance of up to an aggregate of four million new non-restricted B shares, in one or more separate offerings.

As the issuance would be made in the international markets, the preferential subscription rights of existing shareholders would be waived.

Approximately 250 shareholders participated in the annual general meeting, at which Gambro also presented the group's report on operations for the first three months of 1990. The figures, which were released earlier yesterday, showed a continued improvement in the group's earnings. Earnings per share rose 29 percent, operating income by 28 percent, income after net financial items was up 25 percent and sales increased 16 percent.

Dividend

The annual general meeting approved the board of directors' proposal that the dividend be increased 33 percent to SEK 2.40 per share or 39 cents per American Depositary Receipt (Note), amounting to a total dividend payment of SEK 54.9 million or $8.9 million.

The proposed record date of May 22, 1990 was adopted, with payment being made on May 30, 1990.

BUFFALO, NY (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Barrister Information Systems Corporation (AMEX: BIS), announced that it has completed a major law office automation installation at the offices of Cobb, Cole & Bell, a 26 attorney Florida law firm with offices in Daytona and Tallahassee.

In the months since the contract was signed, the Barrister team has replaced the firm's IBM System/36(TM) with a new IBM AS/400(TM), and installed on it, the complete, native mode, Barrister/Eagle(TM) Software System, including Time & Billing, General Ledger, Accounts Payable/Checkwriter, Trust Accounting, Report Generator, Copier and Telephone Cost Control, Conflict of Interest, Calendaring and Docket and File Room Management modules.

A new 55 workstation Novell(TM) network was installed and bridged into the AS/400 to provide users with the ability to enter time charges directly into the Barrister/Eagle System.

This sophisticated integration of micros and minis allows the individual to select and use either the Barrister/Eagle software, networked MS-DOS(TM) products such as WordPerfect Office(TM), or individual software selections running only on their individual computers.

Due to the geographic separation of the offices, it was necessary to install communication servers on the network to allow all users, in both locations, full-time, on-line access to the System. These servers, in addition to making applications like electronic mail between the offices a possibility, also allow users to dial out to various on- line information services and to dial in from remote locations.

PONTIAC, MI (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Dealers braced today for another day of unseasonal weather as the GM Dealers 11th annual tent sale moved into its third day at the Silverdome here.

A total of 417 new cars and trucks were sold during the sale's first two days, including 261 cars and 156 trucks. The total is down 24 percent from year-ago totals when 552 vehicles were sold, including 373 cars and 179 trucks.

"I'll never use weather as a cop-out for weak sales," declared sale chairman Al Dittrich. "But with two consecutive days of bad weather and today's forecasts for more of the same, I'll have to admit it has discouraged some buyers."

Gusting winds Thursday ripped from its moorings a 50-foot air-filled promotional balloon, knocked down power lines, and hurled signs with damaging force into some of the new vehicles, and filled the 1,000-foot-long sales tent with customers who usually stroll leisurely through the 15 acres of new cars and trucks on display.

Dittrich, of Al Dittrich Oldsmobile-GMC Truck, maintained his optimism, however. "A break in this weather is all we need," he said.

Early today, a milestone will be reached with the sale of the 11,000th vehicle to be sold since the sale's inception in 1980.

Truck sales continued to account for a higher-than-usual percentage of total vehicle sales: 37 percent of the 417 units sold during this year's first two days vs. 32 percent of the 552 vehicles sold last year.

The sale runs through 9 p.m. today, and from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday.

FORT WORTH, TX (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Team Bank, as trustee of the San Juan Basin Royalty Trust (NYSE: SJT), today declared there would be no cash distribution to the holders of its units of beneficial interest of record on May 31, 1990.

Expenses exceeded revenues by approximately $180,000 due to increased capital costs and the low sales price of natural gas.

Capital costs totaled approximately $1,858,500 for the month, primarily due to the drilling of coal seam gas wells on the properties from which the royalty was carved. Production for the properties from which the royalty was carved totaled 1,917,700 Mcf. The average gas price was $1.52 per Mcf.

In accordance with the Royalty Conveyance, the excess of expenses over income must be recovered from subsequent months' royalty income. Southland Royalty Company had advised the trustee the royalty income for the next several months may remain negative or negligible due to the anticipated drilling of additional coal seam gas wells, as well as to low seasonal demand for natural gas and seasonally depressed spot market prices.

CLARK, NJ (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Ketchum & Co. Inc. (AMEX: KCH) announced today it has received a proposal from OCP International, Inc. to acquire complete ownership of Ketchum through a merger of Ketchum with a newly formed, wholly owned subsidiary of OCP International, Inc.

Under the terms of the proposed merger, the shareholders of Ketchum, other than OCP International, Inc., would receive $2.25 per share in cash in exchange for their shares of common stock and Ketchum would become a wholly owned subsidiary of OCP International.

The proposed merger transaction is subject to the completion of a definitive merger agreement and to approvals of the merger by an advisory committee of independent members of the board of directors of Ketchum, by the board of directors of OCP International and by the shareholders of Ketchum holding two-thirds of Ketchum's outstanding shares of common stock.

OCP International is a U.S. subsidiary of Office Commercial Pharmaceutique S.A., the French drug wholesaler, and currently owns of record approximately 67.7 percent of the outstanding common shares of Ketchum.

In addition, OCP International currently holds $10,000,000 in principal amount of Ketchum indebtedness which is convertible into shares of Ketchum common stock.

Nine million dollars of such outstanding borrowings from OCP International are convertible into Ketchum shares at a variable conversion rate tied to the market price of Ketchum common stock.

Shareholders of Ketchum recently approved a proposal to permit OCP International to convert into additional shares of Ketchum common stock up to $1,650,000 in further possible borrowings from OCP International, and Ketchum has acknowledged that it anticipates requesting additional borrowings from OCP International under such authorization to enable Ketchum to meet future working capital needs and to comply with Ketchum's financial covenants under loan agreements with various banks.

Any such future borrowings would also be convertible into Ketchum shares at a variable conversion rate tied to the market price of Ketchum common stock. Since February 1988, OCP International converted $4,000,000 of Ketchum indebtedness into additional shares of Ketchum common stock in order to permit Ketchum to comply with its bank covenants.

Consummation of the proposed merger at this time would, OCP International noted, permit Ketchum's minority shareholders to receive a fixed cash payment for their shares at a premium to the current market price, without subjecting them to additional potential dilution of their equity interest resulting from further conversions of OCP International debt into equity. On May 17, 1990, Ketchum's common stock closed at 2-1/8 on the American Stock Exchange, up 1/8 from its prior closing price.

In representing its proposal, OCP International further noted that, as a private company, Ketchum would no longer incur the expense of complying with the reporting and proxy solicitation requirements of federal securities laws and the costs associated with its stock exchange listing.

OCP International expressed its belief that a privately owned Ketchum will be able to respond more quickly to changing market conditions and, as a result also of savings in management time and expense, be able to serve its customers more efficiently and compete more effectively in its chosen markets.

Ketchum is a drug and health and beauty aid distribution company, serving independent, chain and hospital pharmacies in the East and Midwest.

DEL MAR, CA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - OMNI USA Inc. (OTC "Pink Sheets"), a manufacturer and distributor of agricultural machinery gearboxes, heavy duty truck and trailer parts and light trailer products, today announced operating results for the third quarter of its fiscal year ending June 30, 1990.

For the quarter, the company reported sales of $4,297,776, compared to sales of $3,576,787 for the same period last year, an increase of 20 percent. For the nine months ended March 31, 1990, the company reported sales of $10,891,854, compared to sales of $9,351,106 for the comparable period last year, an increase of 16 percent. The increase in sales for these periods was attributable to the company's gearbox product line, primarily because of a strong agricultural market and the company's continued growth in this market. Sales of cargo control equipment were also higher for the third quarter.

For the quarter, the company reported net income of $83,527, compared to net income of $234,052 in the comparable period last year. The decrease in earnings was primarily because of non- recurring consulting fee revenue of $225,000 earned in the third quarter of fiscal 1989. The company's increased gross margin contribution of $270,000 was partially offset by increased costs relating to quality control system implementation and development of the company's new light trailer product line expected to be introduced by late in the fourth quarter or early in fiscal year 1991.

For the nine months ended March 31, 1990, the company reported net income of $110,129 compared to net income of $335,047 for the first nine months of the previous year. The decrease in net income was attributable to non-recurring consulting fee revenue of $700,000 earned in the first nine months of the prior year only partially offset by the company's increased gross margin contribution of $642,000 in the first nine months of fiscal 1990. The company has also experienced higher interest costs because of increased borrowings in fiscal year 1990.

MORRIS PLAINS, NJ (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Weichert, Realtors today announced it has filed a lawsuit against Schlott Realtors in U.S. District Court in Newark, N.J., charging Schlott with false and deceptive advertising.

The complaint, filed on Weichert's behalf by John G. Gilfillan III of Carella, Byrne, Banin, Gilfillan, Cecchi & Stewart of Roseland, N.J., alleges violation of the Lanham Act, a federal law governing false and misleading representation of facts; the New Jersey Unfair Competition Act; the New Jersey Consumer Fraud Act; and other federal, state and common law claims.

"In essence, this lawsuit claims that Schlott misrepresented its position in the real estate market with false and deceptive newspaper and direct mail advertising," said James C. Murray, senior vice president of marketing for Weichert. "Prior to filing this suit, Weichert, Realtors gave Schlott Realtors opportunity to remedy their false advertising and to correct the public deception."

Murray continued, "The suit seeks a preliminary and permanent injunction to stop Schlott's flagrantly deceptive advertising practice."

"We recognize that in today's real estate market, buyers and sellers need to make well-informed decisions about selecting a real estate company with which to do business," said James M. Weichert, president. "Consumers are overwhelmed with the amount of messages they receive each day, and consumers should not be faced with false or deceptive advertising."

An "order to show cause" has been issued by the court requiring Schlott to produce reasons why it should not be preliminarily enjoined from continuing the alleged false and deceptive advertising. A court hearing on the request for preliminary injunction is presently scheduled for Thursday, May 31, at 8:30 a.m., at the Federal Court House in Newark, court room No. 4.

SEA ISLAND, GA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Textile industry leaders today endorsed business-education partnership programs, which they said hold the key to strengthening the nation's basic education system.

Calling for more effective programs involving local educators, public officials and private industry, the presidents of the South Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association (SCTMA) and the American Textile Manufacturers Institute (ATMI) cited better education as an "essential element" in keeping the nation's textile industry competitive.

They were speaking at SCTMA's annual meeting here. "For our industry to be competitive, we must have an education system that instills the job skills needed in an increasingly sophisticated textile industry," said SCTMA President Frederick B. Dent Jr., "Working together as an industry, SCTMA recognizes the importance of education improvement and the need for full funding and staying the challenging course of education improvement."

ATMI President Donald R. Hughes said the textile industry is addressing the education issue with a "pioneering education renewal program and the commitment to make it work."

He said, "We need to increase our commitment to education at all levels. Each of us is going to have to find more ways to be meaningfully involved if we expect to see progress in this area."

Hughes said textile companies need to form partnerships with local educators, community leaders and public officials to achieve quality education.

"If we do everything else right and fail to develop and fully utilize our human resources, all else will go for naught," Hughes said.

Addressing programs already under way, Dent said 25 textile companies are involved in the Governor's Initiative for Workforce Excellence, and more than 4,000 employees are participating in it.

In a review of the association's activities during the past year, Dent said the textile industry is placing increasing importance on preserving the environment. He said South Carolina industry needs well-regulated and controlled hazardous waste sites.

The industry also supports an early start-up of work by the Institute of Hazardous Waste Research, which was authorized last year by the General Assembly.

SCTMA also has urged South Carolina's health and environmental officials to expedite the clean-up of some 60 abandoned and potentially dangerous waste sites in the state.

Also speaking at the meeting was Jerry J. Jasinowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers. He said industry must be more aggressive in reminding the public that manufacturing, including textiles, is the most productive segment of the economy and it "holds the key to our nation's future.

"Manufacturing in this nation is recovering in terms of quality and productivity and this will make us more competitive in the world marketplace," he said.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Fletcher Challenge Canada (Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver: FCC) today announced further curtailments in kraft pulp production at its British Columbia mills in the face of weakening market demand and growing inventories.

SPRING VALLEY, NY (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Par Pharmaceutical, Inc. (NYSE: PRX) today reported a net loss for its second fiscal quarter, ended March 31, 1990.

Sales for the quarter were $13,747,000, a decrease of 54 percent from the sales of $30,082,000 for the quarter ended April 1, 1989. The company incurred a net loss for the quarter of $5,192,000 (47 cents per share), as compared with net income of $2,836,000 (25 cents per share) a year earlier. The net loss for the current quarter is after charges to operations of $5,685,000 in connection with recalls and related matters, and an extraordinary charge of $629,000.

For the six months ended March 31, 1990, sales were $32,255,000, down 44 percent from sales of $58,062,000 for the six months ended April 1, 1989, and the net loss was $5,632,000 (51 cents per share), as compared with net income of $5,516,000 (49 cents per share) a year earlier.

Results for the quarter were severely impacted by the effect of product recalls by Par's subsidiary, Quad Pharmaceuticals. Quad has recalled 25 of its injectable products after discovering that minor manufacturing changes were made to the products without properly adhering to FDA's regulatory requirements for making such changes.

In addition, in March 1990, Quad placed a voluntary moratorium on shipments of all products subject to FDA-approved Abbreviated New Drug Applications (ANDAs) (about 85 percent of Quad's product line), which will continue until Quad's ongoing investigation determines that the products can be manufactured in conformity with their ANDA approvals.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Vernitron Corporation announced today that it is mailing the following letter from Stephen W. Bershad, Vernitron's chairman and CEO, to all shareholders of Kollmorgen Corporation (NYSE: KOL):

Can you afford the risk? Recently an independent analyst stated, "In the absence of a transaction, we believe Kollmorgen shares could ultimately trade down in the $8 per share range."(A) Ask yourself what is the likely trading value of your Kollmorgen shares if our slate of directors is not elected and our merger and auction proposals are terminated. We believe that it could in fact be substantially lower than current market values.

Look at Kollmorgen's record of earnings (loss) per share (on a primary basis) from continuing operations for the past 11 years:

1979 -- $.77 1983 -- $.53 1987 -- $.43 1980 -- .63 1984 -- .27
1986 -- (.47)

The highest earnings per share ever achieved in the past 11 years was $0.77, and that was in 1979 on 24 percent fewer shares than are currently outstanding and no preferred stock. Average annual earnings per share during the period were only $0.18.

If somehow current Kollmorgen management was able to achieve results equal to its best year, after deducting the $0.20 per common share dividend requirement of the newly issued preferred stock, the earnings available to common shareholders would be $0.57 per share.

In order to achieve these results, Kollmorgen would have to earn $13.7 million before taxes from continuing operations (assuming a 40 percent combined federal and state tax rate). Assuming no material improvement from 1989 revenues, this would imply an operating margin of 6 percent, almost twice the operating margin reported during the first quarter of 1990.

Even assuming all this could be accomplished, Kollmorgen shares would have to trade at approximately 18 times projected earnings in order to have a market value of $10 per share. Our offer, on the other hand, will provide you at the time of the proposed merger with cash equal to $10.09-$11.31 per share (based on First Boston's analysis commissioned by Kollmorgen) and a 50 percent equity stake in the ongoing company.(B)

Don't forget that the Kollmorgen management team missed its 1989 earnings projection by $60 million. Can you afford the risk that they might not achieve their current projections for 1990?(C)

Kollmorgen's paid financial adviser wants you to believe that the 50 percent common stock interest in a merged Vernitron/Kollmorgen, which we are proposing, is worth nothing. They have told you this, despite the fact that we are transferring our interest in Vernitron in exchange solely for common stock in the combined companies. Do you believe we would be proposing this transaction and giving up our interest in Vernitron in exchange for nothing?

Our proposal involves no fees or other compensation for Vernitron's shareholders. The only way we can profit by this transaction will be as a result of the enhanced value of the Vernitron/Kollmorgen stock. If your stock doesn't go up, neither will ours.

Recently another independent analyst not paid by Kollmorgen put it differently. "The Vernitron offer does hold out the promise of a potentially sizable premium relative to the value that Kollmorgen will attain if the offer is rejected."(D)

At what price will your Kollmorgen shares trade if our slate is not elected?

Notes: (A) -- Broadstreet Equities, a division of Oscar Gruss & Son, Inc., in ARB News dated May 16, 1990. Permission to quote as proxy soliciting material neither sought from nor granted by the author. Use does not imply endorsement of Vernitron's nominees. Vernitron is not suggesting that Kollmorgen shares will actually trade at the $8 level.

(B) -- The range of values of $10.09-$11.31 is calculated by adding to the $15 per share in cash payable in the merger for half of the outstanding shares (or $7.50 in cash per outstanding share), the range of estimated amounts of $2.59-$3.81 payable per E-O Division Security issuable in the merger per outstanding share as set forth in First Boston's analysis, dated May 8, 1990, commissioned by Kollmorgen. First Boston claims that the range of values of $10.09-$11.31 is worth $9.26- $10.38 on a present value basis.

(C) -- As described generally in Kollmorgen's 1989 annual report to shareholders.

(D) -- Analysis Group, Inc., institutional voting research service proxy alert dated May 14, 1990. Permission to quote as proxy soliciting material neither sought from nor granted by the author. Use does not imply endorsement of Vernitron's nominees.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD, NJ (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Enzon, Inc. (NASDAQ: ENZN), today reported a net loss of $3.5 million or $.28 per share for the nine months ended March 31, 1990, versus a net loss of $5.3 million or $.48 per share for the same period last year.

Revenues totaled $2.9 million and $789,935 for the nine months and quarter ended March 31, 1990, versus $2.5 million and $470,710 for the same periods in the previous fiscal year. Third quarter results indicated a net loss of $2.1 million or $.17 per share compared to a net loss of $2.5 million or $.22 per share for the same quarter last year.

Gail Wasilewski, Enzon's vice president of finance, said that third quarter results reflected the transfer of research responsibility for and higher sales of PEG-SOD to Sterling Drug compared to the same period a year ago. The company's research and development costs decreased 19 percent as a result of this transfer.

"Our financial position has improved dramatically as a result of higher product sales, contract revenue gains, research and development cost reductions and the completion of a recent $25 million private placement of preferred stock," she added.

Other general and administrative costs rose 19 percent from $1.1 million to $1.3 million for the quarter ended March 31, 1990, compared with the same period last year, as the company expanded its administrative staff.

Enzon is a pharmaceutical company developing improved therapies for life-threatening diseases through the application of its proprietary technology, PEGNOLOGY, to enhance the delivery of protein-based drugs. In March 1990, Enzon received its first marketing approval from the Food and Drug Administration for ADAGEN, a treatment of a form of Severe Combined Immunodeficiency Disease (SCID). Three other products developed by Enzon are currently undergoing human clinical trials.

PHILADELPHIA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) today filed an appeal with the Commonwealth Court of Pennsylvania regarding the April 19, 1990, rate decision by the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC) which granted PE only $242.2 million of the $548.6 million requested by the company.

Joseph F. Paquette Jr., PE chairman and chief executive officer, said: "This appeal is one of the most important utility cases to be reviewed by Commonwealth Court in many years, as it raises fundamental public policy questions regarding the rights and obligations of regulatory agencies and regulated entities and the fairness of the regulatory process. The importance of these questions cannot be overemphasized because they not only impact the company, our customers and our investors, but also the continued economic development of southeastern Pennsylvania and as well as other areas of the commonwealth."

The appeal states: "In December 1985, following a year-long investigation, the Commission found that PE would need additional generating capacity, perhaps as early as 1992 and, on that basis, concluded that the completion of Limerick 2, subject to certain cost containment and operational incentive provisions, was in the public interest. Six months later, in evaluating the need for PE's Limerick 1 unit, which had been completed and placed in service earlier that year, the Commission further determined that a 25 percent generating capacity reserve margin was an appropriate planning target and that the company's actual reserve margin with Limerick 1 of 28 percent was not unreasonable. In reliance upon the Commission decisions, the company proceeded to complete the construction of Limerick 2. Significantly, the company's performance during this period was exemplary, as it built Limerick 2 at a cost some $400 million below the cost containment 'cap' established by the Commission in 1985. Notwithstanding that extraordinary performance and a much greater than anticipated increase in the demand for electricity over the ensuing five years, the Commission, in this proceeding, suddenly reversed course and held that 22 percent was the maximum allowable reserve margin for the company. In addition, the Commission concluded that Limerick 2, although completed at a cost substantially below its earlier cost 'cap' determination, was 'uneconomic.' Based on these findings, the Commission denied PE's shareholders any return on approximately $480 million of their equity investment in Limerick 2 and Limerick common plant."

In particular, the company seeks reversal of the Commission's order on the following grounds:

-- The Commission's "excess capacity" finding attributable to Limerick 2 and the resulting $105.9 million revenue disallowance are erroneous as a matter of law, are unsupported by substantial evidence and constitute an arbitrary and capricious abuse of administrative discretion. In addition this finding constitutes an unconstitutional, after-the-fact change in the rules governing the inclusion in rate base of new electric generating facilities.

-- The Commissions's finding that the company imprudently delayed construction of Limerick 1 and 2 in 1976 and 1978, and its quantification of the effect of those delay decisions on the cost and schedule of Limerick 2 and the second half of Limerick common plant, are unsupported by substantial evidence, are based upon clear error of law, and constitute an arbitrary and capricious abuse of administrative discretion.

SAN DIEGO, CA (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Jack's Incorporated (NASDAQ: JAKS) (formerly Mad Jack's Corporation), operator of seven retail outlets in Southern California specializing in car and home audio products, today reported higher revenues and lower profits in the second quarter ended March 31, 1990.

"As anticipated, results in the first half of 1990 were reduced by the refocusing of our business to include a new, upscale and expanded product mix and a name change of the company's stores to Jack's Audio Specialist," Roy L. Gayhart, chief financial officer, explained. "Consumers have responded very favorable to our new products and brands and that should translate to increased revenues and improved earnings in the second half of this year," he added.

Gayhart attributed the higher revenues primarily to sales of the company's new cellular telephone lines.

"We are particularly excited about the potential of the cellular telephone market," Bruce Bart, president, emphasized. "The combination of a less than five percent cellular phone market penetration, Jack's existing customer base for car audio and security products, and the constantly growing number of care in Southern California, uniquely positions us to be a leading retailer of cellular phones."

"In a short time, we have become the second largest cellular phone retailer in San Diego County. In addition to the high profit margins in cellular phones, we are negotiating with out telephone carrier to gain added income from future use of cellular phones by Jack's customers," he noted.

Second quarter net loss was $29,417 or one cent per share on revenues of $3,393,108 compared to net income of $4,650 or less than one cent per share on revenues of $3,257,196 for the same period last year. "The second quarter typically represents the lowest volume quarter of operations," Gayhart explained. "During this period, the company generally reduces its margins to attract retail sales."

Half year net income was $34,889 or one cent per share on revenues of $7,471,819 versus net income of $233,570 or five cents per share on revenues of $7,449,407 for the first half of 1989. Earnings for last year's first half included tax benefits of $67,000 from utilization of operating loss carryforwards.

"We expect the costs of establishing our new name and image plus our planned expansion in the number of Jack's stores, also will impact third quarter results," Gayhart added. "However, early consumer response to the new Jack's has been so positive, that we are more optimistic than ever about the future."

Jack's recently was approved for trading on the NASDAQ system. The company has reserved a million shares of common stock for the exercise of Class A and B warrants. The Class A warrants expire June 30, 1990, and are exercisable at $2 per share. The Class B warrants expire Sept. 30, 1991, and carry an exercise price of $4 per share. The proceeds from the exercise of these warrants will be used to open additional stores in California and the Southwest and to expand inventories.

FAIRFIELD, CT (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Barry Blau & Partners, Inc. (NASDAQ: BLAU) today reported that revenues and gross agency income increased significantly for the three months ended March 31, 1990 versus the three months ended March 31, 1989. Revenues advanced to $15,350,737 for the third quarter of the company's fiscal year 1990 from $12,336,939 for last year's third quarter, while gross agency income for the same periods rose to $3,332,235 from $2,755,058.

Selling, general and administrative expenses also increased significantly to $3,369,377 for the quarter ended March 31, 1990 from $2,251,200 for last year's third quarter. Reflected in this increase is the company's substantial continuing investment in personnel and facilities, designed to service existing clients as well as clients attained during the company's current and 1989 fiscal years, and to capitalize on the growth opportunities presented. Also reflected in this increase are higher than normal professional fees incurred in connection with the review of accounting issues with the company's new auditors.

Due primarily to this investment in personnel and facilities, the company reported a net loss of $21,142 for the quarter ended March 31, 1990, compared to net income of $296,858 for the quarter ended March 31, 1989. However, these additional expenses have leveled off in the current quarter.

As reported in the company's quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, the company's former auditors, Coopers & Lybrand, in connection with a recent review of previously issued audit reports, raised questions concerning the proper accounting treatment for reporting purposes of several matters with respect to prior fiscal years and the possibility of restatement of previously issued quarterly and annual financial statements resulting therefrom. The company has since reviewed each of the matters raised by Coopers & Lybrand and, with the assistance of its newly engaged independent accountants, BDO Siedman, has reached conclusions on what it deems to be the proper accounting treatment with respect to the matters which were raised by the former auditors.

On or about March 26, 1990, the company communicated its position with respect to these matters to the staff of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the company is presently awaiting the commission's views with respect to such matters. The company's quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the quarter ended March 31, 1990, on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, provides a more detailed description of these matters.

MINNEAPOLIS (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - International Broadcasting Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: IBCA), a diversified family entertainment company, announced today that revenues for the second fiscal quarter ended April 1, 1990 grew to $38,596,000, a 13 per cent increase over the $34,136,000 recorded for the comparable quarter ended April 2, 1989. The company also reported second quarter earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) of $5,022,000, compared to EBITDA of $6,186,000 for the like quarter a year ago. The company said the decline in its second quarter EBITDA was primarily attributable to first time expenses associated with operating the company's two recently acquired amusement parks in their off-season, when the park's produce no off-setting revenues.

Thomas K. Scallen, International Broadcasting's president and CEO, said he was pleased by the company's second quarter revenue growth and EBITDA. He noted that IBC's winter businesses, as a whole, maintained their record pace from a year ago. Moreover, Scallen said that the negative impact to the company's EBITDA from operating the company's parks in their off-season second quarter will be more than off-set by the parks' fourth quarter contribution when these attractions are operating at peak levels.

Scallen said the company's decrease in profit in the quarter of $351,000, or $.08 per share, compared to a profit of $3,938,000, or $1.70 per share a year ago, was largely attributable to the increase in interest, depreciation and amortization expenses, as well as to the off- season operating and administrative expenses associated with acquisitions made by the company in the past 12 months.

Scallen said these additional expenses have been incurred as an integral part of IBC's strategy to both expand its family entertainment operations, overall, and to reduce the quarter-to-quarter cyclicality of the company's earnings. He said it remains the company's goal to improve its cash flow measure of earnings before interest, taxes depreciation and amortization (EBITDA) and that he expects the company to again improve this measure for fiscal 1990, as it has in each of its prior two fiscal years.

Said Scallen, "As we have demonstrated with our winter businesses, IBC has been successful in improving the operating cash flow of its acquisitions. We are confident that our entertainment management team will have equal success enhancing the operating cash flow of our recent, non-winter acquisitions."

STAMFORD, CT (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - James E. Stewart, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Lone Star Industries, Inc., (NYSE:

LCE) today announced that a major Spanish cement company has agreed to market and manufacture Pyrament(R) cement in Spain and Portugal.

Pyrament cement -- the ultra high strength, fastcuring and exceptionally durable cement invented by Lone Star -- will be manufactured and marketed in the two countries under an exclusive agreement with Aglomerantes y Cementos S.A., an affiliate of Cementos del Norte S.A., of Madrid.

"This is the first of what we believe will be many agreements to distribute Pyrament cement throughout the world," Stewart said. "Our revolutionary product has demonstrated that repairs to runways or highways needn't inconvenience travelers for weeks at a time. With Pyrament cement, repairs to concrete can be made after the evening's rush hour and the new concrete will be ready for normal traffic the next morning."

Traditional concrete can take seven days to achieve sufficient strength for normal highway or airport traffic. Concrete made with Pyrament cement is strong enough for normal use only about four to six hours after it is placed.

Lone Star currently is negotiating with other foreign companies for the licensed manufacture and marketing of Pyrament cement elsewhere in Europe and throughout the world.

Lone Star Industries and its affiliates are leading producers of cement and a major source of ready-mixed concrete, sand and gravel, crushed stone and other construction materials.

PITTSBURGH, (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - At the Allegheny Ludlum Corp. (NYSE: ALS) annual meeting of shareholders today, the following announcements were made.

Dividend Increase and Stock Split: The board of directors of Allegheny Ludlum Corp. today voted to increase the regular quarterly cash dividend from $.30 per share to $.33 per share of common stock. This represents a 10 percent increase. The second quarter dividend at the new rate is payable July 2, 1990, to shareholders of record at the close of business June 8, 1990.

Today's dividend action marks the fourth increase in the quarterly cash dividend since Allegheny Ludlum became a public NYSE company in May 1987. Most recently, in November 1989, the quarterly dividend was increased from $.25 to $.30 per share.

The board of directors also declared a 3-for-2 stock split, with the distribution and record dates being the same as for the second quarter dividend. On a pre-split annual basis, the dividend is increased from $1.20 to $1.32 per share. Following the split, which increases the number of outstanding shares by 50 percent, the quarterly dividend will be $.22 per share and will reflect a new annual dividend rate of $.88 per share.

In taking the dividend actions, the board noted the fact that business has been stronger than anticipated. Richard P. Simmons, Allegheny Ludlum chairman and chief executive officer, said, "The stock split will increase liquidity and should make our stock more appealing to investors. It continues to reflect our stated strategy of increasing dividends at a rate in excess of inflation."

Shareholders of record at the close of business on June 8, 1990, will receive one additional share for every two shares held. The additional shares will be distributed July 2, 1990. The company will not distribute fractional shares, but will make a cash payment to each shareholder entitled to receive a fractional share equal to the mean between the high and low composite trading prices of the common stock on the New York Stock Exchange on June 8, 1990, adjusted for the stock split.

The 3-for-2 stock split will increase the outstanding common stock of the company from 22,329,800 to approximately 33,494,700 shares.

Acquisition Announced: Allegheny Ludlum Corp. announced today that it has reached an agreement subject to certain conditions to acquire most of the operating assets of the Thinsheet Metals Co. Thinsheet is a metals re-rolling business with facilities located in Waterbury, Conn.

A spokesperson for Allegheny Ludlum stated that the Thinsheet facilities which include equipment used in rolling, annealing and finishing operations will supplement similar facilities presently operated by Allegheny Ludlum in Wallingford, Conn. The purchase is expected to close later this summer. Terms of the transaction were not disclosed.

Changes in Executive Management: The board of directors today elected Robert P. Bozzone president and chief executive officer effective immediately after the 1990 annual shareholders meeting. He was formerly president and chief operating officer.

Simmons, who steps down as chief executive officer, will continue as chairman of the board and chairman of the Executive Committee of the board of directors. In these roles he will concentrate on Allegheny Ludlum's strategic directions, acquisitions and management succession.

Also, the board of directors elected Arthur H. Aronson, previously executive vice president, to the position of executive vice president and chief operating officer.

Commenting on the new management, Simmons said, "In stepping down after 18 years, I feel very comfortable in turning the baton over to Bob Bozzone. The company should not miss a beat."

At the shareholders meeting today, Bozzone, who has worked closely with Simmons for more than 30 years, said, "Dick Simmons has had an outstanding career in the specialty materials business as a technologist, trade spokesman and industry leader. His leadership of Allegheny Ludlum has created one of the world's foremost specialty steel producers with an exciting performance record and a focus on the future that holds great promise."

DETROIT (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Meadowdale Foods, Inc., The Kroger Co. (NYSE: KR) and Foodland Distributors jointly announced today that they have entered into an agreement in principle under which Kroger will acquire most of the operating assets of Meadowdale's Great Scott! retail division, including 30 operating Great Scott! stores and four stores under construction, and Foodland will acquire the operating assets of Meadowdale's Abner Wolf Distributors' wholesale division, as well as the four remaining Great Scott! retail locations. As part of this sale, Kroger and Foodland will assume certain of Meadowdale's obligations and liabilities, including all trade payables and real estate and equipment leases.

Completion of the transaction is subject to several contingencies, including the signing of a definitive agreement, certain government filings, and the satisfaction of certain other conditions, including arrangements with various unions. It is expected the transaction will be completed within the next two to three months.

Great Scott! currently operates 34 supermarkets in the metropolitan Detroit area and has four additional stores under construction that Kroger expects to complete and open. Kroger, which currently operates 29 supermarkets in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, expects to operate most of the acquired Great Scott! supermarkets under the Kroger name.

Foodland will acquire Meadowdale's headquarters and warehouse building. Foodland, which is currently the wholesale supplier to over 110 chain and independent retail stores in Michigan, will, after the transaction, also supply the newly-acquired Kroger stores, as well as offer its services to current Abner Wolf customers.

Officials of Meadowdale, Kroger and Foodland expect that the projected consolidation of their respective retail and wholesale operations should result in operating efficiencies which will permit Kroger and Foodland to be even more efficient in the highly competitive southeastern Michigan supermarket arena. Detroit area consumers should be the principal beneficiaries of this consolidation.

Joel Greenisen, Vice President of Kroger's Michigan Marketing Area, said, "Kroger has served the State of Michigan since 1917, and our business here is growing. This transaction will reinforce our commitment to this area. Michigan is among the areas that were targeted for substantial capital investment by Kroger at the time of our financial restructuring in 1988. This transaction is consistent with that plan. The acquisition of the Great Scott! facilities will allow us to blend the strengths of two solid food retailing organizations to better serve the needs of an expanding customer base in the Detroit metropolitan area."

According to Gary K. Noreen, president of Radio Satellite Corporation, RSC will submit an application early next week to the Federal Communications Commission requesting permission to construct and operate an earth station in Pasadena, Calif.

The earth station will be used to provide integrated mobile communications services through a satellite to be launched by the American Mobile Satellite Corporation (AMSC) in 1993. RSC plans to resell the capacity it leases from AMSC to broadcast, paging and mobile communications companies.

In making the announcement, Noreen said, "The satellite system developed by RSC provides services designed to take advantage of the revolution in mobile satellite capabilities that will begin with the launch of the first AMSC satellite. For the first time, mobile users will be able to enjoy truly nationwide radio broadcasts and a diverse set of low-cost data communication services."

At the core of RSCUs novel proposal is a mobile radio that simultaneously provides alphanumeric paging, digital audio and data broadcasts, navigation and two-way data messages. RSC plans to arrange for these radios to be available through all major retail electronic outlets by the Christmas 1993 sales season.

RSC designed its system to integrate all mobile satellite services with mass market potential into one low-cost radio that will cost little more than conventional AM/FM radios. The antenna will be substantially smaller than typical car antennas.

RSC will broadcast 10 digital audio channels throughout the United States using just 1 MHz of spectrum. RSC's navigation service will determine vehicle location to within 2 meters. The data broadcast service will send sport updates, stock quotes, travel and weather advisories, navigation corrections, e mergency alarms, and other alphanumeric data to radios.

AMSC received FCC authorization last year to construct and operate a mobile satellite system for service to the United States. Each AMSC satellite will radiate hundreds of times more power than any existing satellite designed for communications with vehicles.

HARTFORD, CT (MAY 18) PR NEWSWIRE - Northeast Savings, F.A. today omitted the quarterly cash dividend on both issues of the company's preferred stock. This includes the company's $2.25 cumulative convertible preferred stock, Series A (NYSE: NSB PrA) which is held by individual stockholders, and the adjustable rate cumulative preferred stock which is held by the FSLIC Resolution Fund of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC). Northeast initially suspended the dividend on these issues on Feb. 16, 1990, for the quarter ended March 31, 1990.

Commenting on the decision, George P. (MAY 18) UPI - The parents of the black teen-ager killed last August by a white mob in the Bensonhurst neighborhood of Brooklyn reacted solemnly when the white youth who allegedly pulled the trigger was found guilty of second-degree murder. Joseph Fama was convicted of 13 of 16 counts he faced. His lawyers say they'll appeal the verdict.

The jury that found Fama guilty deliberated for 11 days. Members of the panel say they disagreed on Fama's involvement in the death of 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins. Some jurors felt he fired the gun that killed Hawkins while others say he acted in concert with the killer. Fama was NOT convicted of intentional murder.

A 30-year-old Louisiana death row inmate has lost his final legal appeal to stay his execution. Officials at the Louisiana State Penitentiary will strap Dalton Prejean in the electric chair after midnight, 12 years after he was convicted of killing a Louisiana state trooper. The Supreme Court denied Prejean's request to halt his execution tonight.

SAN ANTONIO (MAY 18) UPI - The Spurs have proven that San Antonio is Mr. Robinson's neighborhood.

Now they want to show they can play in the Trail Blazers' yard.

''We are not going to let anyone come and push us around anymore,'' David Robinson said, after scoring 24 points and pulling down 13 rebounds Thursday night to lead the Spurs to a 112-97 victory over the Blazers.

''We just need to translate the way we play here to the way we play in Portland,'' he said. ''We are a young team, but we will rise to the occasion.''

Home courts have been the key to the Western Conference semifinal series, which is deadlocked 3-3. Neither team has lost on its own floor.

The final game will be played Saturday afternoon in Portland.

''Now it all comes down to one game in our place,'' Portland Coach Rick Adelman said. ''I think it has been a very physical series with two competitive teams.''

San Antonio Coach Larry Brown used a different word.

''It got ugly tonight. We've played each other so many times now that the tempers are becoming short and the fouls are becoming hard,'' Brown said.

''As for Game 7, we have to start off strong and aggressive,'' he said.

Although Portland had 30 fouls and San Antonio had 23, no player on either team fouled out - a factor that reduced the big player ranks on both sides during Portland's grueling 138-132 double-overtime win Tuesday night.

After a tightly fought first quarter Thursday, San Antonio leaped ahead early in the second period and never trailed again.

Portland was led by Jerome Kersey's 22 points, followed by Cliff Robinson with 20, Terry Porter with 14 and Buck Williams with 12.

San Antonio's Willie Anderson, whose 30 points was a playoff high for the 6-foot-8 guard, was followed in double digits by Robinson with 24, Terry Cummings with 18, Sean Elliott with 14 and David Wingate with 11.

San Antonio narrowly beat the Blazers on the boards 48-44, with Robinson's 13 the high for the Spurs. Portland's Williams pulled down 10.

Already down two centers - starter Kevin Duckworth (broken hand) and backup Wayne Cooper (back spasms) - the Trail Blazers lost guard Clyde Drexler late in the third period, when he was ejected after throwing an elbow at Anderson.

''I think he got frustrated tonight, and that's why we mixed it up a little bit,'' Anderson said. ''It was a very physical game.''

Drexler was still shaking his head about it.

''We were hand-checking and I was just knocking the hands off. The next thing I know, I am in the locker room,'' Drexler said.

''We've played each other six times now, and everyone knows what each other is going to do. We get tired of seeing each other,'' Drexler said.

The lead changed five times in a back-and-forth first quarter in which the score was tied three times.

Anderson poured in 10 first-quarter points and Portland's Robinson put in 8, but no team led by more than 3 in the period.

Two points by Portland's Drazen Petrovic gave the Trail Blazers a 27-26 edge at the end of the quarter - their last lead in the game.

San Antonio reeled off nine unanswered points midway through the second period to pull ahead 43-32 with 5:34 to go.

The closest Portland got after that was 7 points, at 48-41 with 1:05 remaining in the half.

Portland lost Drexler with 3:01 remaining in the third period, when the referee ejected him for elbowing Anderson in the chin while the two were fighting for position away from the ball.

Drexler, who had averaged 24.4 points during the series and scored a career-high 35 Tuesday, was held to 4 points before he was thrown out.

(MAY 18) UPI - Pittsburgh outfielders needed a ticket to make the catch where Greg Olson's hits were falling Thursday night.

Olson ripped two homers and drove home five runs, helping the Braves hand Neal Heaton his first loss since last season with a 6-1 victory over the Pirates at Atlanta.

Olson, a rookie who came over from the Minnesota farm system during the winter, blasted a two-run home run in the second inning and added a three-run shot in the eighth.

''I'm seeing the ball real well right now,'' said Olson, who has three home runs this season. ''And they're just falling in.''

Olson, a catcher signed by the Braves as a six-year minor-league free agent, is hitting .371 and has the starting job away from veteran Ernie Whitt.

Heaton, 6-1, gave up three runs and 10 hits over six innings of work, walking two batters. The loss was his first since last July 21, breaking a streak of 12 consecutive victories.

''I never felt comfortable, never felt right,'' Heaton said. ''I just never had it at all tonight, and when you don't have it, you can't try to fake it.''

Atlanta starter Derek Lilliquist, 2-4, surrendered eight hits over seven innings for the win, walking one and striking out one. Joe Hesketh earned his first save, allowing one hit and striking out three over the final two innings.

Olson's first home run gave Atlanta a 2-0 lead in the second inning. With one out, Andres Thomas singled and scored when Olson drilled a homer over the center-field fence.

Pittsburgh drew within 2-1 in the fifth. Barry Bonds led off with a double went to third on a sacrifice by Jay Bell and scored on a sacrifice fly by Gary Redus.

Atlanta pushed its lead to 3-1 in the fifth. With two out, Dale Murphy singled, went to third in a double by Dave Justice and scored on a single by Thomas.

Olson's second homer, off reliever Randy Kramer, increased the Atlanta lead to 6-1 in the eighth. Leadoff batter Murphy reached on a two-base error by shortstop Bell. One out later, Thomas was intentionally walked and Olson smacked a 1-0 pitch over the left-field fence.

Elsewhere in the National League Thursday, St. Louis blanked Cincinnati 3-0 and Houston edged Chicago 5-4 in 11 innings.

In the American League, it was: Seattle 14, Toronto 6; Milwaukee 6, California 3; Minnesota 4, New York 1; Chicago 7, Baltimore 3; and Detroit 7, Texas 5 in 10 innings.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Cardinals 3, Reds 0

At Cincinnati, Jose DeLeon and two relievers combined to pitch a six-hit shutout for the Cardinals. DeLeon, 3-2, who scored the first St. Louis run after hitting his first major-league triple, scattered four hits over 7 1-3 innings. Lee Smith got the final three outs, picking up his second save since coming to St. Louis in a trade with Boston. Tom Browning, 2-4, took the loss for Cincinnati.

Astros 5, Cubs 4 (11 innings)

At Houston, Ken Caminiti scored on pinch hitter Ken Oberkfell's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 11th inning to help the Astros snap a six-game losing streak. Caminiti doubled to open the 11th off Jose Nunez, 1-4. Glenn Wilson was walked intentionally before Rafael Ramirez reached on a sacrifice bunt to load the bases. Oberkfell then lofted a fly to right to score Caminiti. Dave Smith, 2-2, earned the win as Houston pitchers retired the final 20 batters.

(MAY 18) UPI - Thursday's guilty verdict for Brooklyn teen-ager Joseph Fama at the Bensonhurst racial slaying trial in New York City was greeted by his neighbors in a low-key fashion. Clusters of people gathered at the site of the August 23rd slaying of Yusuf Hawkins and expressed resentment that their neighborhood has been singled out as a den of racists. Fama faces 25 years to life in prison after being found guilty of second-degree murder.

The art world continued its foray into eight-digit sales Thursday when a painting by Pierre-Auguste Renoir was sold for 78-point-one-Million dollars. The buyer of the Impressionist work purchased the painting over the phone and remains UNidentified. An official at the New York branch of Sotheby's auction house says other sales made Thursday totaled more than 286-Million dollars.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan says next month the northern spotted owl will be placed on the endangered species list. In comments Thursday to department employees in Boston, Lujan expressed frustration that he's powerless to stall endangered status for the owl. It is estimated that such classification will cause an estimated 28-thousand timber industry workers to lose their jobs. U-S Fish and Wildlife Service officials say Lujan's announcement is premature.

The U-S Coast Guard Thursday warned a group of Cuban exiles planning to sail in international waters off Cuba this weekend that Cuban authorities may board their vessels. Some 80 to 100 boats are scheduled to take part in the flotilla to mark the traditional date the Caribbean island celebrates its independence from Spain. Organizers of the flotilla say they're staging the event to show solidarity with Cubans still living on the communist-ruled island.

(MAY 18) UPI - A spokeswoman for Temple University in Philadelphia says five school security guards involved in a racial melee last month have been suspended and will be fired. The guards- both black and white- were charged by blacks involved in the fracas with using excessive force to break up an altercation. Witnesses confirm that the guards were more zealous in restraining blacks as opposed to how they treated whites.

Florida's congressional delegation emerged from a meeting with President Bush Thursday expressing optimism that Bush will ban oil drilling off the Florida Keys. Republican Senator Connie Mack says Bush appeared to question whether there is enough oil off the Keys to warrant the threat posed by drilling. Bush has said he will decide within days on whether to sell drilling rights to tracts of sea floor off Florida and California.

(MAY 18) UPI - If the Toronto Blue Jays continue their losing ways at home, the sexual sideshows given by unsuspecting guests at the SkyDome's hotel complex might soon threaten to become the stadium's main event.

Brian Giles homered twice and drove home seven runs Thursday, leading the Seattle Mariners to an easy 14-6 drubbing of the Blue Jays and a sweep of their three-game series.

The result likely also led many of the 47,283 fans at the SkyDome searching hotel windows for excitement.

Twice already this season, fans with binoculars have witnessed hotel guests engaging in sexual activites in suites facing the diamond. The most recent occurrence took place two nights earlier as the Blue Jays dropped a 4-3 decision.

Giles, who has spent nine seasons of shuttling back and forth between the major leagues and the minors, delivered a three-run homer and a grand slam after being given a rare start by Manager Jim Lefebvre.

''We went with Brian on Sunday and he had a good game, so I thought this would be an opportuinty to put him back in again,'' Lefebvre said. ''Boy, he really shined, didn't he?''

Giles's seven RBI on Thursday is the highest total by an American Leaguer this season.

''I think people will know the Seattle Mariners are for real,'' Giles said after the Mariners won their fourth straight game. ''I know it's early, but we've been playing great ball.''

The 30-year-old shortstop, who last appeared in the majors in 1986 with the Chicago White Sox, was signed as a free agent last November.

Henry Cotto also homered for the Mariners, while Glenallen Hill drove home four runs with a pair of two-run homers for the Blue Jays.

Randy Johnson 3-2, allowed three runs and seven hits over seven innings to earn the victory. The 6-foot-10 left-hander walked one and struck out seven.

The Mariners took control with for nine runs in the third, tying a club record for most runs in an inning. Giles' three-run blast knocked out loser Jimmy Key, 4-2, after the Mariners loaded the bases three times in the inning.

Seattle pushed its lead to 10-0 lead in the fourth on Cotto's solo shot. The score grew to 14-0 in the fifth on Giles' grand slam.

Elsewhere Thursday in the American League, Milwaukee dropped California 6-3, Minnesota topped New York 4-1, Chicago clubbed Baltimore 7-3 and Detroit clipped Texas 7-5 in 10 innings.

In the National League, it was: St. Louis 3, Cincinnati 0; Atlanta 6, Pittsburgh 1; and Houston 5, Chicago 4 in 11 innings.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Brewers 6, Angels 3

At Milwaukee, Robin Yount's single keyed a three-run seventh inning and Greg Vaughn slammed a three-run homer to help Milwaukee spoil Dave Winfield's debut with the Angels. Paul Mirabella, 2-0, worked 1 2-3 innings of relief for the victory and Dan Plesac notched his eighth save. California reliever Willie Fraser, 0-2, took the loss.

Twins 4, Yankees 1

At New York, Kevin Tapani scattered seven hits over 7 1-3 innings and Brian Harper and Kent Hrbek belted home runs to guide Minnesota. Tapani, 5-2, struck out five without walking a batter and Rick Aguilera earned his 10th save. Dave LaPoint, 2-3, took the loss after allowing nine hits over 7 1-3 innings.

White Sox 7, Orioles 3

At Chicago, Sammy Sosa's RBI double ignited a bizarre five-run inning to lead the White Sox. Ron Kittle drove home two runs and reliever Barry Jones improved to 6-0 as Chicago notched their sixth straight victory and improved their home record to 15-3, best in the major leagues. Brian Holton, 1-1, suffered the loss.

Tigers 7, Rangers 5 (10 innings)

At Arlington, Texas, Chet Lemon broke a tie when doubled home pinch-runner Tracy Jones as part of a two-run 10th inning for the Tigers. Lemon's hit made a winner of Mike Henneman, 1-3, as Detroit won its third straight game. Jeff Russell, 1-3, took the loss.

CARACAS, VENEZUELA (MAY 18) UPI - Leftist Salvadoran rebels and the conservative government of El Salvador negotiated for a second day in secret, and a diplomatic source said a senior U.N. official's attendance at the peace talks offered hope of ''positive results.''

The negotiations, which began Wednesday and continued Thursday, were being held in an undisclosed location in Venezuela and mediated by Alvaro de Soto, personal representative of U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Government negotiators and rebel representatives of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, as well as U.N. officials, have avoided all contact with reporters.

''The presence of Alvaro de Soto, personal representative of Perez de Cuellar, at the talks is a sure sign of obtaining positive results,'' a diplomatic source close to the negotiations said.

A Salvadoran Embassy official in Venezuela said many in El Salvador anticipated positive results from the newest round of talks to end the 11-year-old civil war that has left an estimated 72,000 dead. Earlier talks in Geneva had failed to reach an accord.

''We have great hope that (Salvadoran) President Alfredo Cristiani will achieve the pacification of the country and we also hold high hopes for the success of the talks begun in Caracas,'' said the official, who requested anonymity. ''In El Salvador, ... there is great interest in what is decided in Venezuela about peace and war.''

The new talks hit a snag Wednesday when Cristiani charged the rebels had violated a promise to keep the negotiations confidential.

Cristiani sent a letter to Perez de Cuellar protesting the publication by the rebels in a Salvadoran newspaper of its proposals for ending the conflict.

The Salvadoran government issued a statement in San Salvador saying the publication of the proposals could ''weaken the process of dialogue.''

The rebel proposal calls for the Salvadoran armed forces to be reduced in size, made accountable for human rights abuses and put under civilian control. It also calls for reforms of the Salvadoran judicial system.

A Salvadoran government delegation met April 4 with rebel representatives in Geneva, also under U.N. mediation, and agreed to the peace talks in Caracas.

The rebels, who declined to participate in elections in 1984 and 1989, have long demanded changes in the constitution that would allow them to get electoral reforms passed by the National Assembly, now controlled by Cristiani's rightist Nationalist Republican Alliance.

The armed forces have said demilitarization will occur only when the war ends.

TRENTON, N.J. (MAY 18) UPI - The state Legislature passed the nation's toughest ban on military-style assault weapons, restricting ownership of 38 types of guns to collectors and specially registered target shooters.

Gov. Jim Florio, who made a ban on assault weapons a promise in his election campaign last fall, said he would sign the measure passed on Thursday.

The bill was passed 21-17 in the New Jersey Senate after a half-hour debate, but the Assembly debated for nearly five hours before voting 43-33 to approve the measure.

The votes came as more than 500 members and supporters of the National Rifle Association, who said the measure would take guns away from law-abiding citizens and be ignored by criminals, marched and chanted outside the Statehouse, demanding the defeat of the bill and Florio's ouster.

''What we are doing in New Jersey is speaking out for the rights of the people who are not marching around here today - the vast majority of outraged citizens who want to be safe on their streets and safe in their homes,'' the Democratic governor said at a Statehouse news conference.

The legislation, prompted by the slaying of five children in a California schoolyard last January by a man armed with an AK-47 assault rifle, covers 38 kinds of guns and would ban the sale of semi-automatic weapons in New Jersey.

The law would allow collectors to keep assault weapons purchased before May 1, 1990, if they remove the firing pins, rendering the weapons inoperable.

People who use the guns for target shooting competitions and are members of sports shooting clubs authorized by the state attorney general's office also would be allowed to keep their weapons if they register the guns and pay a $75 registration fee every two years.

New Jersey residents who do not meet the exemption requirements would be given one year to sell their weapons out of state.

Violation of the law would be punishable by a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $7,500 fine.

Florio said the measure was the toughest in the nation to address assault weapons. California passed the nation's only other statewide law last spring, banning sales of at least 55 makes of assault weapons but allowing owners to keep weapons purchased before the law took effect.

''This legislation is long overdue,'' Florio said. ''It demonstrates that the public interest does prevail in the Legislature from time to time over special interests.''

''These weapons turn our streets into urban war zones,'' said Democratic Assemblyman Joseph Mecca, a co-sponsor of the bill. ''These are the weapons that were used to gun down children in California. It could happen at Cherry Hill Mall.''

The fight over the bill has been one of the Legislature's most bitter, with outbursts by NRA supporters during Thursday's debate, prompting Democratic Assembly Speaker Joseph Doria to repeatedly threaten to remove visitors from the Assembly gallery.

Assemblywoman Marlene Lynch Ford, another Democrat, cited ''the vandalism of my legislative office this morning'' as evidence of ''intimidation'' by opponents of the bill.

Police said a glass door was broken Thursday morning at a Toms River office shared by Ford, whose Assembly Judiciary Committee earlier this week approved the bill, and Sen. John Russo, the Democratic sponsor of the bill. NRA officials denied any connection, and police said they did not know who broke the window.

In a separate incident, a window at the Statehouse was broken during the NRA protest. State police ruled the damage an accident and demonstrators took up a cash collection and offered to pay for the damage.

The NRA has said that the bill makes no distinction between military-style assault weapons and the semi-automatic weapons used by legitimate hunters. The criminals from whom Florio and backers of the bill want to take assault weapons will ignore the law, the gun lobby says.

''We are sick and tired of being blamed for the criminal misuse of firearms,'' NRA lobbyist Richard Manning said. ''We're law-abiding citizens in this state and we don't appreciate this bill.''

Manning said the exemption for target shooters would set up an ''elite group'' of hunters because most existing target shooting clubs in the state have full memberships. The clubs would have to be certified by the attorney general's office, and Manning said standards could be set that are so stringent that many clubs would disband.

The provision for keeping guns from which firing pins have been removed is ''bogus'' because a firing pin is a small, simple device that can be improvised from a nail, Manning said.

The NRA and legislators who supported its position also cited the constitutional right to keep and bear arms.

Democratic Sen. Raymond Zane said the measure would ''weaken the fabric of America'' and that he expected to see it challenged in court.

MOSCOW (MAY 18) UPI - Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene saw as a first step her breakthrough talks with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to discuss a compromise proposal for Lithuania's independence.

Prunskiene planned to meet Friday with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker who is in Moscow for pre-summit talks, and also planned visits to several Western embassies seeking support for her republic's compromise.

Baker and President Bush have indicated the Baltic question would be a key issue in the U.S.-Soviet summit in Washington starting at the end of the month.

Newly elected nationalist governments in Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia have each declared their independence from the Soviet Union in recent months. Gorbachev has since decreed all three acts illegal, but the Lithuanian stance was the most radical and Moscow retaliated with an economic blockade against the republic.

The 60-minute meeting Thursday was the first direct contact between top Soviet and Lithuanian officials since the Baltic republic's March 11 declaration of independence.

A Lithuanian compromise proposal, approved by the republic's Parliament Wednesday, for the first time offers a transition to independence and suggests negotiations on practical matters such as defense and Soviet property in the republic.

Under the compromise, Lithuania would agree to suspend laws passed to implement the declaration of independence, but not the declaration itself.

Birute Nenartavichute, head of the protocol section at the Lithuanian mission in Moscow, said Prunskiene delivered a letter from the Parliament to Gorbachev and met with him and Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov for about an hour in the Kremlin.

Prunskiene said after the meeting she was hopeful it would be ''the first step in negotiations'' on Lithuanian independence, Nenartavichute said.

Gorbachev had previously refused to even consider negotiating with Lithuania until the republic annuled, or at least suspended, its unilateral declaration of independence.

The compromise proposal that Prunskiene brought to Moscow does not meet the demand to withdraw the actual declaration - something the Lithuanians say is non-negotiable - but it does declare that the republic is ready to suspend acts implementing independence.

''She reiterated that the issue under discussion was that the (Lithuanian) Parliament has agreed to suspend the validity of some laws adopted after March 11, but not the declaration itself,'' Nenartavichute said.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the documents that Prunskiene gave Gorbachev ''carry certain steps toward normalization of the situation.''

''However, they do not solve the major problem. They do not annul the act (of independence),'' Tass said. ''Prunskiene's attention has been drawn to the fact that it is by all means necessary for the Lithuanian Soviet Socialist Republic to rescind, or as a minimum, to suspend the act and the subsequent legislative documents that are at a variance with the U.S.S.R. Constitution.''

Tass said Prunskiene pledged to convey the Soviet leader's comments to the Lithuanian Parliament.

''We are prepared to look for compromises in the sphere of purely pragmatic issues, discuss Lithuania's participation in the Soviet Union's defense system and look for possible agreements,'' Prunskiene told Tass on her arrival in Moscow Thursday evening.

Gorbachev has promised his country's 15 republics a place in a new confederation of essentially independent states loosely bound under a rewritten constitution, but insists the republics must negotiate under Soviet laws.

Lithuanian government spokeswoman Rita Dapkus said the Lithuanian message to Gorbachev stated practical areas the republic is willing to discuss, including a treaty on mutual military defense, the problem of Soviet property in the republic and protection of ethnic Russians' rights.

Prunskiene recently returned from two weeks of meetings with Western leaders and Dapkus said the Parliament's conciliatory message is much like a compromise proposal suggested by France and West Germany.

ANGOLA, La. (MAY 18) UPI - Dalton Prejean, the mildly retarded convict sentenced to death for killing a state trooper, was electrocuted early Friday and became the third inmate executed in the United States in just over 24 hours.

Prejean, 30, was led into the execution chamber at Louisiana State Penitentiary shortly before midnight, strapped into the electric chair and declared dead by prison doctors at 12:17 a.m. CDT, prison officials said.

Before the execution, Prejean told witnesses that family members of slain State Trooper Donald Cleveland ''say it wasn't for the revenge, but it's hard for me to see, to understand. I hope they're happy.''

''So, I forfeit my life,'' Prejean said. ''I give my love to all. God bless.''

After the 3-minute speech, Prejean was led to the electric chair. His eyes were puffy and he appeared distressed. He relaxed after about a minute, but he grimaced as his head was strapped against the chair.

The U.S. Supreme Court late Thursday denied Prejean's application for a stay, clearing the way for his execution for the 1977 killing of the Louisiana state trooper. Prejean was 17 at the time of the killing, and psychiatrists said he was brain-damaged and had the IQ of a 13-year-old.

Gov. Buddy Roemer also refused to stop the execution of Prejean, the nation's third execution in just over 24 hours.

At 12:30 a.m. Thursday, Johnny Ray Anderson was put to death by injection in Texas for killing brother-in-law Ronald Gene Goode in a 1981 insurance scam.

About 21 minutes earlier, Leonard Laws died, also by injection, in Missouri for the 1980 shotgun murders of Clarence Williams, 83, and his wife, Lottie, 72, in Glencoe.

Prejean's execution was the 128th in the United States since 1976, when the Supreme Court lifted its ban on capital punishment. He was the first person executed in Louisiana since Edward Byrne Jr. was put to death June 14, 1988.

''On behalf of 700 state troopers, he's going to be executed,'' Roemer said Thursday. ''He's been given 10, 12 years of review, review, review, review. He's guilty. He made a mistake this time - big time.''

Prejean was sentenced in 1978 for the July 2, 1977, murder of Cleveland, who was shot in the face and chest after stopping his car for a traffic violation near Lafayette. He has been on death row 12 years, longer than any other Louisiana inmate.

Prejean was 17 when he killed Cleveland as the officer held his brother against the car. Six months earlier, Prejean was discharged from a juvenile detention facility where he had been serving time for killing a cab driver during a robbery at the age of 14.

He escaped six previous execution dates, including two last fall when he obtained stays within 12 hours of his scheduled electrocution.

In their last arguments before the Supreme Court, defense attorneys said Prejean did not have a proper psychiatric evaluation and did not have effective counsel at his trial.

A psychiatric evaluation obtained by the defense showed Prejean had brain damage and the IQ of a 13-year-old, said attorney Sam Dalton.

Prejean arranged to spend his last day visiting with family members, said Louisiana State Penitentiary Warden John Whitley.

''We're expecting his mother and son, and some religious advisers,'' Whitley said. ''Right now, he's relatively calm.''

Prejean was moved to the cinderblock death cell on the sprawling prison grounds Thursday morning.

For his last meal, he ordered a seafood platter and an orange soda.

Prejean said his impending execution was a ''political thing or a racist thing.''

''He was a police officer,'' Prejean told the Shreveport Times. ''They put it like he was more than a human being. A life is a life either way you look at it. They have made it more than that.''

He said his death would not ease the pain for Cleveland's widow and children.

''The reality still remains the same. They're not going to feel any better '' Prejean said. ''All it boils down to is a revenge....''

A Baton Rouge newspaper reported receiving more than 350 letters from people around the world, asking Roemer to halt the execution on humanitarian grounds. Many of the letters said Prejean should not be executed because he was 17 at the time of Cleveland's murder.

On Wednesday, a man who identified himself as a member of Amnesty International was twice herded out of the State Capitol by three state troopers, after demanding to discuss Prejean's case with lawmakers.

EAST BERLIN (MAY 18) UPI - East German lawmakers cleared the way for Friday's treaty signing with West Germany on economic and social unity, but Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere said final unification still faces major obstacles.

Squelching demands for floor debate from former communists, renamed the Party of Democratic Socialism, deputies passed a bill Thursday enabling Parliament to amend the country's socialist constitution.

The move was necessary for approval of a treaty on economic and social unification that the two Germanys were scheduled to sign Friday.

De Maiziere and Finance Minister Walter Romberg were scheduled to be in Bonn for the signing Friday. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, in Washington Thursday for talks with President Bush, also was due to attend the ceremony.

In Strasbourg, France, de Maiziere said all-German elections, proposed for as early as Dec. 2, cannot occur until outstanding issues of German unity are settled to the satisfaction of all parties to the unification talks, referring particularly to Soviet concerns about German membership in the NATO Western military alliance.

Concerns about German unity must be resolved through the ''two-plus-four'' talks - the two Germanys plus the World War II Allies France, Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States - ''in a good manner, and not with one partner dissenting,'' de Maiziere said during a news conference at the European Parliament.

The Soviet Union has insisted that a unified Germany be neutral. The United States and other parties to the talks want a united Germany to belong to NATO.

Asked if he was skeptical or optimistic his conditions for all-German elections could soon be met, de Maiziere replied, ''I do not have the gift of prophecy.''

In Washington, Kohl denied he was trying to accelerate unification, insisting the process was being driven by popular support, but ''nobody knows'' when the actual union will take place.

''There's no speeding up, it's just normality,'' Kohl said before meeting with Bush. ''We know that the people are shouting, 'We are the people,' ... That is why nobody can fix the exact date.''

General elections are slated for Dec. 2 in West Germany. A late 1991 date was initially proposed for all-German elections but calls to hasten them grew after Kohl's party was stung by setbacks in two state elections last weekend.

At a subsequent news conference, Kohl reiterated his view that Soviet troops might remain in what is now the territory of East Germany ''for a transitory period'' even after unification.

Kohl said he did not discuss a timetable for early all-German elections with Bush, took pains to avoid addressing the issue directly at the news conference and similarly danced around most other questions relating to decisions pending in the two-plus-four talks.

He did, however, depict the Soviet opposition to Germany's future membership in NATO as an opening position in negotiations and said he saw no evidence the Soviets were unwilling to compromise.

He mused that ''people expect us to place all our cards on the table'' at the start of the negotiations when in fact the talks will take longer to address security and ''psychological elements'' of the Soviet unease with rapid unity.

De Maiziere said Germany ''has the right to be part of an alliance, of course, but if that alliance is NATO, then the nature of NATO must change by increasing the political structures of NATO and decreasing the military aspects of NATO.''

The United States and most of its allies seek a more political NATO, but France has maintained the alliance should confine its mission to security issues.

De Maiziere said it is important for East Germany to maintain its ties with the Soviet Union because 35 percent of East German employment is in sectors that trade with the Soviets.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Despite a clear split on the size of the federal deficit, Bush administration officials and congressional negotiators participating in the budget summit are ''moving in the right direction,'' said House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt.

Gephardt, of Missouri, presided over the second day of talks on Thursday as the participants meeting on Capitol Hill heard different estimates of the deficit from congressional and administration experts. President Bush chaired the first session on Tuesday at the White House.

The next session is scheduled for next Tuesday.

Participants said Thursday Richard Darman, head of the Bush administration's Office of Management and Budget, and Robert Reischauer, head of the Congressional Budget Office, presented their deficit figures for the 1991 fiscal year.

According to documents given to participants and released to reporters, the CBO projected fiscal 1991 deficits of $146 billion to $186 billion if the estimated $50 billion extra cost of the savings and loan bailout are taken out of the budget and removed from deficit calculations.

The CBO projected a deficit of $196 billion to $246 billion if the bailout costs were kept on the budget and included in deficit calculations.

The OMB, however, projected a deficit of $108 billion to $123 billion without calculating the savings and loan costs and $123 billion to $188 billion if the bailout costs are included.

''We have not agreed on our exact deficit reduction target,'' Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of the negotiators, said after the nearly two-hour meeting.

''We couldn't agree,'' added Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser D-Tenn.

But Gephardt said the negotiating session was preliminary and aimed at getting the facts before any possible solutions to the problem are discussed.

''We are moving in the right direction,'' Gephardt said. ''There's a spirit of goodwill in the room. ... We are trying as reasonable individuals to find the facts.''

Gramm, the representative of Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, said the group was ''looking at reducing the deficit about $50 billion to $60 billion'' but others said no such target was set.

If the deficit was $200 billion next year, it would be nearly triple the fiscal 1991 deficit reduction target of $64 billion set in the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law. That law cuts the deficit in steps with the goal of balancing the budget in fiscal 1993.

Failure to meet the law's $64 billion target would result in automatic across-the-board spending cuts, split evenly between military and domestic programs. Both sides have said such cuts would be too deep to accept.

Representing Bush at the talks were White House chief of staff John Sununu Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, Darman and Coucil of Economic Advisers Chairman Michael Boskin.

Representing Congress were the Democratic chairman and Republican ranking members of the six House and Senate committees dealing with the budget, appropriations and taxes plus the personal representatives of each of the four top congressional leaders of both parties.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Like Congress, the public is divided on a proposal by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to cut the Social Security payroll tax to reveal the true girth of the federal deficit, a new Gallup Poll showed Friday.

The Gallup Poll was commissioned by the non-profit Employee Benefit Research Institute.

Of the 1,000 people polled in March, 57 percent were opposed to cutting the Social Security payroll tax, and 69 percent opposed such a cut if it meant other taxes would have to be raised next year.

Moynihan proposed legislation in January to cut the Social Security payroll tax and eliminate use of the Social Security trust fund to reduce the size of the federal budget deficit.

President Bush and most Republicans have rejected the idea. Democrats have not reached a consensus view on it although they have pledged to bring it to the floor.

When informed of the poll results, Moynihan said he was not surprised and preferred to focus on the 81 percent who said it is inappropriate that part of the Social Security trust funds are loaned to the government to pay for defense, education and other programs.

''That's the news here. The public is now aware of this,'' Moynihan said. ''Give the issue some time. The issue didn't exist in December and now 81 percent say this is no way to use the trust fund.''

Moynihan found troubling another survey result that 47 percent of respondents who were not retired did not think the Social Security system will pay them a benefit upon retirement. Also, 77 percent of all respondents said they expected higher taxes would be required to pay Social Security benefits in the next century.

''This shows we have a large hole in public confidence about the system,'' Moynihan said.

Other survey results:

-49 percent favored applying a portion of their Social Security taxes to individual retirement accounts.

-54 percent opposed a move to subject earnings over $51,300 to the Social Security tax without providing additional benefits.

The poll has an error margin of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points.

TRIPOLI, Libya (MAY 18) UPI - Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi planned Friday to host South African black nationalist Nelson Mandela in a visit evidently aimed at underlining Libya's role in backing international liberation movements, diplomatic sources said.

Mandela, leader of the African National Congress, was to arrive at Tripoli International Airport from Algiers as part of an African tour the anti-apartheid activist is making. He was to leave for Cairo Saturday or Sunday after meeting Gadhafi.

Last June, one of Mandela's daughters came to Tripoli to receive the Moammar Gadhafi Peace Prize on behalf of her father, who was the first to receive the award diplomatic sources say is worth about $100,000.

The sand-swept streets of Tripoli were decked with brightly colored lights Thursday night in anticipation of Mandela's visit. PLO leader Yasser Arafat arrived in Tripoli Thursday for talks with Libyan officials but it was not known if he also would meet Mandela.

The officials invited ambassadors based in Tripoli to the airport for Mandela's arrival.

Mandela's visit coincides with Libyan efforts to bolster its image on the continent. African planning and economic development ministers have been attending the annual session of the U.N. African Economic Commission in Tripoli since Tuesday to discuss African economic ills.

Libya is believed to be spending up to $1 million on the conference in a sign of the country's improved economic condition as its oil revenues recover.

Libyan and Chadian foreign ministers met in Tripoli earlier this week to discuss the disputed Aouzou Strip straddling the neighboring countries.

The outcome of the meeting, the fourth under an Algerian-sponsored peace plan, was not immediately known. Libya recently demobilized tens of thousands of soldiers from its regular army in what Western diplomats call a sign of Tripoli's intentions to ease tensions between the two countries.

Since Gadhafi seized power in a bloodless coup in 1969, the 48-year-old leader has made support of liberation movements a major plank of his unorthodox foreign policy. The movements that are believed to have received financing include American Indians, American black nationalists and the Irish Republican Army.

Diplomats say Libyan officials regard Mandela's visit as a triumphant symbol of the Libyan policy of supporting liberation movements and will considerably boost Tripoli's prestige in the African world.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 18) UPI - Archbishop Desmond Tutu urged Americans Thursday night to make a financial investment in the exiled youth of South Africa so they can carry freedom throughout the continent.

''We want to be free so whites will be free to launch Africa into the 21st century,'' Tutu told a gathering of 350 at a fundraising dinner to benefit the Bishop Desmond Tutu Southern African Refugee Scholarship Fund. ''It will happen.''

Tutu, 58, the winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, spoke humorously and eloquently to a star-studded crowd at the Biltmore Hotel that included Mayor Tom Bradley, former San Francisco mayor and Democratic gubernatorialcandidate Diane Feinstein, Los Angeles Urban League President John Mack, actor James Earl Jones and musicians Lionel Ritchie and Quincy Jones.

''I tell leaders of nations I visit that freedom is cheaper than repression,'' Tutu told the $200 per plate dinner, billed as ''A Tribute To Archbishop Desmond Tutu.''

''My friends, you are contributing to this glorious future. The new South Africa is going to need skilled persons. Investing in the new South Africa is investing in young people.''

Tutu, on a 10-day speaking and fundraising swing through Southern California, said in his 35-minute speech that in the future people in South Africa will count ''not because of their color, but their character and ability.''

''You will be honored guests when it happens,'' he told the crowd.

Singer Telma Hopkins, the mistress of ceremonies, said a contribution to the scholarship fund would help train leaders to run ''a just society.''

Actor and master of ceremonies Mykel Ti Williamson said money given to help African refugees to study at American universities ''is our opportunity to make an investment in their future.''

The scholarship fund, established by Tutu in 1984 with the funds from his Nobel Prize, provides educational opportunities to South African youth exiled for their political activities. The students are expected to use their leadership skills in a post-apartheid South Africa.

Jones, who introduced the archbishop of Capetown, called Tutu an ''inspirational leader ... dedicated to peaceful change.''

Tutu reminded his audience that despite recent changes in South Africa, apartheid is ''still very firmly in place.''

''Thirty-seven years ago, a man (Nelson Mandela) went into prison not being able to vote in his native land,'' said Tutu. ''Thirty-seven years later he emerged from prison not being able to vote in his native land.

''We have come some way, when on Feb. 11 there was an extraordinary event as the entire world was as one to watch a prisoner emerge from jail,'' he said. ''The world erupted in celebration in the freedom of this man. We could see the walls of repression tumble down.

''Freedom is breaking out in so many places, so many unlikely places,'' Tutu said. ''We are going to have a free post-apartheid South Africa and then the leaders, black and white, can turn to other problems.''

Tutu said the future of blacks and whites in the African nation are tied together and likened the ties to manacles on two prisoners who have fallen into a ditch - neither can emerge without the other.

''Our humanity is bound together,'' he said. ''You won't be free until we are free.''

(MAY 18) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... the latest news from U-P-I.

Louisiana executed a man early this morning for murdering a state trooper. Dalton Prejean was electrocuted at the prison in Angola. Prejean, 30 at the time of his death, was 17 years old when the Louisiana trooper was shot to death. Prejean was the 128th person executed since 1976, when the Supreme Court lifted its ban on capital punishment. Two men were executed yesterday, one in Missouri and one in Texas.

A New York jury has convicted one young white man of second degree murder in the Bensonhurst racial slaying. But a second jury still has NOT decided the guilt or innocence of another defendant, who's accused of inciting the killing. As the guilty verdict was returned last night, a largely black crowd outside the Brooklyn courthouse chanted ''Yusuf,'' in memory of slain 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins.

A passenger plane caught fire shortly after takeoff and crashed into a home in the Philippines today. Officials say all 21 people aboard the twin-engine plane and four people in the house died in the crash in a Manila suburb. The crash of the domestic plane came one week after an explosion rocked a plane preparing to take off at Manila's airport... killing eight people.

Men wearing masks and riding in a taxi fired grenades into a building the U-S uses in Manila today. NO casualties are reported. The attack caused little damage to the offices of the U-S Embassy or the Thomas Jefferson Library. NO one has claimed responsibility. The Philippine government blames communist guerrillas.

Another car bomb exploded in Colombia yesterday. Radio news reports say 35 people were hurt in the bombing in Cartagena. About 130 pounds of dynamite exploded next to a shopping center. It's at least the 16th car bomb to explode in Colombia since August and the fourth in four days.

(MAY 18) UPI - A conviction in New York Bensonhurst racial slaying... actor Marlon Brando's son admits fatal shooting in Hollywood... those stories and more from across the nation and around the world... from the wires of United Press International.

Jurors in the case of the accused triggerman in the Bensonhurst racial slaying came back with a guilty verdict in New York yesterday, ending 11 days of intense deliberations.

The panel found Joseph Fama guilty of second-degree murder, charging the 19-year-old with ''acting in concert'' and displaying- quote- ''depraved indifference to human life.''

Jurors emerged to say there was NOT enough evidence to convict Joseph Fama of actually firing the bullets that killed 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins last August.

The jury's decision was held up by one panelist who wanted to acquit Fama on both murder counts. Juror Steven Bequist says he changed his mind once Judge Thaddeus Owens explained the legal definition of ''acting in concert.''

Owens illustrated his point by explaining that if two people are mugging a third person and the first mugger pulls out a gun and kills the victim, the second mugger can be convicted of second-degree murder.

Joseph Fama could be sentenced to 25 years to life in prison.

A separate jury deciding the case of Keith Mondello, the accused ringleader of the Bensonhurst mob, resumes deliberations today.

Los Angeles police say actor Marlon Brando's son has admitted killing his half-sister's boyfriend.

32-year-old Christian Brando was booked yesterday on suspicion of murder in the shooting death of 26-year-old Dag Dorllet of Tahiti. Police say young Brando killed Dorllet after his pregnant 20-year-old sister, Cheyenne, told him Dorllet physically abused her.

Quoting Lieutenant Ron Hall... ''Christian has indicated that he did, in fact, shoot the victim.''

Marlon Brando and his wife were in the 12-room house in the Hollywood Hills when the shooting occurred Wednesday night. But they told investigators they did NOT see what happened. The actor telephoned the 91 emergency line and paramedics found Dorllett dead of a single bullet in the head.

Christian was arrested at the estate and booked after hours of questioning. He is being held without bail. Police say all of the Brandos were co-operative.

Christian once had a minor role in a movie. He has recently done metal sculpture and listed his occupation as ''self-employed welder.''

(MAY 18) UPI - The New Jersey state Legislature has passed the nation's toughest ban on military-style assault weapons. Ownership of 38 types of guns now will be restricted to collectors and specially registered target shooters.

Governor Jim Florio made a campaign promise last fall to pass a ban on assault weapons and says he'll sign the measure passed yesterday.

The state Senate voted 21-17 in favor of the bill and the Assembly approved it 43-33. The votes came as more than 500 members and supporters of the National Rifle Association marched and chanted outside the Statehouse.

Some of the protesters said the measure would take guns away from law-abiding citizens but would be ignored by criminals.

The law would allow collectors to keep assault weapons purchased before May 1st, 1990, if the firing pins are removed, rendering the guns inoperable.

People who use the guns for target-shooting and are members of state-regulated sports clubs would have to register their weapons and pay a 75-dollar fee every two years.

President Bush says a unified Germany should be free from all outside authority.

Bush met with West German Chancellor Kohl in Washington yesterday. They agreed that a reunited Germany should have full sovereignty. Bush said the four major World War Two allied powers should end all authority over Germany when the east and west are united.

Bush and Kohl also say Germany should become a full member of NATO. The Soviet Union wants Germany to be in the Warsaw Pact. The issue is an obstacle to agreement at the unification talks.

Bush said he and Kohl agreed that U-S military forces should remain stationed in the united Germany and elsewhere in Europe to continue to promote stability and security.

Bush and Kohl made the formal statements after three-and-a-half hours of talks in the Oval Office and over lunch.

At a news conference later... Kohl repeated his view that Soviet troops might remain in what is now the territory of East Germany ''for a transitory period'' after unification.

(MAY 18) UPI - Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunkiene met with Soviet President Gorbachev in Moscow yesterday. The Lithuanian leader presented Gorbachev with a compromise proposal suspending the implementation of the republic's independence declaration.

The hour-long meeting was the first direct contact between top Soviet and Lithuanian officials since the rebellious republic initiated its drive for self-determination March 11th.

After the meeting, Prunskiene said she hoped it would be ''the first step in negotiations.'' Gorbachev previously has refused to consider negotiations unless Lithuania first rescinded the independence proclamation.

The official news agency Tass said Lithuania's offer ''carries certain steps toward normalization.''

Prunskiene is scheduled to meet with Secretary of State Baker today. Baker is in Moscow for pre-summit talks.

A former Northrop official has been sentenced to three years in prison and fined 10-thousand dollars for falsifying tests on nuclear-armed cruise missiles.

Assistant U-S Attorney William Fahey in Los Angeles says the false results from the defense giant created- as he put it- ''a very big and serious question mark'' about the accuracy of the missiles. Fahey says the question mark forced the Air Force to run its own tests on 200 of the missiles.

Federal Judge Pamela Rymer sentenced Clarence Gonsalves yesterday to the maximum possible penalty allowed under a plea bargain with the government. Gonsalves at one time managed Northrop plants in El Monte and Pomona.

The judge said Gonsalves approved cutting corners that cheated the country in the quality it was due and could have cost the country in lives.

Northrop pleaded guilty to 34 felony counts February 28th and agreed to pay 17-Million dollars in a plea bargain.

Under the plea bargain, Gonsalves and another employee, Howard Hyde, a former quality assurance supervisor, are to be the only defendants to receive prison terms. Hyde is to be sentenced today.

FORT WORTH, TX (MAY 18) UPI - Police arrested two brothers and sought a third suspect in connection with a robbery and the slayings of four people at a high-stakes dice game.

Members of the Police SWAT team and numerous other officers also raided two houses on the city's south side Thursday night, including the home of one of the suspects.

Paul Miller, 22, was arrested about 7 p.m. at an auto mechanic's shop. His brother, Timothy, 19, was arrested a short time later walking a block from two houses raided by officers.

Police Capt. Randy Ely said a third suspect is at large. Investigators also interviewed a juvenile they believe to be a fourth suspect but lacked evidenced to hold.

Ely said the arrests resulted from police ''just putting together pieces of the puzzle.''

Shortly after the arrests, police armed with tear-gas guns and search warrants burst into two residences near downtown Fort Worth, officials said.

''We had information that there were a large number of weapons in the house,'' Ely said. ''We used gas for the officers' safety.''

Several weapons were found in one of the houses but no shots were fired during the raids, police said.

A 5-month-old baby found in one of the houses was taken to a hospital and treated for tear gas exposure, officials said.

At least one person was arrested at one of the two houses on an unspecified, unrelated charge.

The Millers and the third suspect all were named in a warrant police secured before the raid, police spokesman Doug Clarke said.

From Paul Miller's home, police recovered a rifle with a scope, two handguns and camouflage clothing. Witnesses have said the four gunmen who burst into the Glass Key Cafe on Monday morning wore such clothing.

The masked gunmen, carrying high-powered weapons, hit the cafe and bar, interrupting a dice game reportedly involving between $90,000 and $400,000. Four people were killed and four wounded.

Investigators said they believe the motive was robbery, although they also are considering the possibility of a ''hit'' on one of the dice players or a narcotics connection, Ely said.

Ely said police began suspecting the arrested men about midweek.

''There were a number of things all through the week but we only had bits and pieces of the story,'' he said. ''As things were put together, we were led here.''

FRANKFURT, WEST GERMANY (MAY 18) UPI - Deutsche Bundesbank policymakers, adopting a calm stance amid concern over the cost of German reunification, said Thursday they were not raising interest rates to check inflation.

"No monetary policy decisions were made," an official said after the meeting of the Central Council, the decision-making body of the West German central bank, one of Europe's most powerful financial institutions.

Speculation earlier was that the bank might raise its Lombard interest rate, set on short-term loans to banks, and discount rate, a longer-term lending rate also applied to banks, to counter inflationary pressures. Since the last changes in October the Lombard rate has stood at eight percent and the discount rate has been set at six percent.

Spurring expectations of a rise was Bonn's announcement Wednesday of a $70 billion "German unity fund" to underwrite the industrial and economic rebuilding of East Germany after monetary union takes place July 2. The fund was established in large part to allay fears German taxpayers might foot a reconstruction bill of hundreds of billions of dollars.

About $12 billion of the fund was to be raised through issuance of deutsche mark-denominated bonds and other capital instruments later this year. The remaining $58 billion will be raised through loans over the next 4 1/2 years.

RALEIGH, N.C. (MAY 18) UPI - Police are trying to locate the source of a batch of tainted cocaine that killed three men and sent four others to a hospital.

Police discovered the bodies of Ernest Little, 38, and Michael Dolby, 37, both of Raleigh, about 1:30 a.m. Friday. They apparently died after injecting cocaine in Little's home in a downtown housing project, said Police Sgt. John Beasley.

Those deaths appeared to be connected to that of another drug user whose body was discovered Thursday, said Beasley.

Four others who likely obtained drugs from the same source were treated at Wake Medical Center Thursday.

''Illegal drug users run that risk on the street, (but) if it is shown that is was an intentional thing then (the distributor) could be charged with first-degree murder,'' Police Lt. W.L. Baker said.

State Bureau of Investigation lab tests indentified cocaine as the main drug the three dead men and the other users injected. But the substance used to dilute the drug has yet to be determined, said Beasley.

Police are trying to track down the source of the cocaine.

James Curtis Burnett, 27, of Raleigh was found dead Thursday in a housing project building that was apparently frequented by illegal drug users, Baker said.

''We don't know if it was a high concentration or something it was diluted or cut with that caused the reaction. We all feel the drug probably came from the same distributor,'' said Baker.

None of the four people recovering from the drug overdoses face charges in the incidents, but police plan to interview them about where they got the drugs.

The dealer could face homicide charges if it is determined that the drugs were deliberately cut with a lethal substance, Baker said.

INDIANAPOLIS (MAY 18) UPI - Artifacts dating back 12,000 years have been recovered from an auctioneer who paid $1,300 to remove them from a warehouse where they apparently had been stored by an archeologist who worked on government projects.

"It is a very important mass of information, some irreplaceable, that was about to be lost or sold. It would have disappeared," said Ruth A. Brinker a federal archeologist on the staff of the Hoosier National Forest at Bedford.

The material, including maps and reports, was from diggings by John T.

Dorwin, who operated the defunct Resource Analysts Inc. Officials said Dorwin apparently stored the items in the warehouse when his company went out of business. They were sold to Bloomington auctioneer Phillip Teague for $1,300 to cover unpaid warehouse fees.

The boxes contained bits of animal bone, arrowheads, prehistoric stone tools and bits of pottery. There were no human remains, but experts said the animal bones could provide evidence of food that early inhabitants of the areas involved might have consumed.

Officials said once Teague discovered what he had bought in the collection of cardboard boxes, he contacted a geologist. Information about the collection reached Indiana University and scientists contacted federal attorneys who convinced Teague he should turn over the materials to the government.

Dorwin and his company had been hired to do archeological studies in at least 15 Midwestern, Eastern, and Southern states under a 1979 federal law that required checks of construction sites, such as roads, river ports and power plants.

The value of the materials might never be determined, officials said. Dorwin might have been paid millions of tax dollars for his work. Some of the items were discovered at the site of the Clark Maritime Center near Jeffersonville, where the government paid about $200,000 for Dorwin's work.

KWANGJU, SOUTH KOREA (MAY 18) UPI - Rock-throwing students staged hit-and-run battles Friday with riot police armed with clubs and tear gas grenades in the southern city of Kwangju on the 10th anniversary of a pro-democracy uprising that killed nearly 200 people.

Students in Seoul reportedly threw firebombs and rocks at riot squads firing tear gas but there were no reports of casualties or arrests. Clashes also were reported in other major cities.

In Kwangju, 170 miles south of Seoul, about a dozen students were reported injured in the clash that erupted when police blocked a street march by more than 80,000 people who attended an afternoon rally in a central square.

Rally participants had demanded President Roh Tae-woo's resignation for economic failure and political suppression. They also alleged U.S. involvement in the crackdown on the nine-day 1980 revolt against government suppression, which left 193 people dead, and threatened a boycott against American goods.

The crowd, defying a police warning, started marching toward the Kwangju chapter building of the ruling Democratic Liberal Party at about 8 p.m. The marchers were met by riot squads about 500 yards from the rally site.

Students started hurling rocks and police threw tear gas grenades and charged into the crowd wielding clubs. A woman student bleeding from the head was helped away by friends. About a dozen students were reported injured in the initial clash, but there was no official word on injuries or arrests.

The crowd dispersed and ran into back alleys, staging hit-and-run battles with police. Sporadic clashes continued in downtown streets with small groups of protesters hurling rocks at police.

Earlier, the anniversary was marked by a memorial ceremony at a cemetery outside the city.

Bereaved family members and friends of the Kwangju victims burned Roh in effigy, accusing him of not taking necessary measures to heal the scars of the tragedy.

Roh was an army major general at the time and a close associate of President Chun Doo Hwan, who dissidents say was the mastermind behind the military action against the uprising.

The uprising erupted on May 18, 1980, to protest a sweeping government crackdown on political opposition. The insurrection was put down by army troops in nine days.

Police were on top alert across the country on the 10th anniversary. Dissident student leaders have set May 22-27 as an ''anti-American'' week and threatened to actions against the United States, one of Seoul's chief allies.

About 7,000 students rallied in Seoul, many of them clashing with police during street demonstrations, news reports said. Authorities posted 11,000 police near campuses of large universities and at strategic points of the city.

A planned massive rally by a dissident coalition at City Hall Plaza in central Seoul did not materialize because 5,000 police in stratetic positions prevented the youths from gathering.

During the memorial rite at the cemetery in Kwangju, where 113 victims are buried, the Association of Kwangju Victims Families accused Roh's government of failing to deal with the Kwangju tragedy.

In a statement, the families said the truths of the ''Kwangju Massacre'' have not been revealed and the government did not restore the protesters' honor and compensate for their deaths.

At the rally that followed the service, the participants adopted a four-point resolution demanding disclosure of all facts about the killings and punishment of those who ordered soldiers to fire on protesters.

The resolution accused the United States of being behind the Kwangju massacre and of orchestrating the recent merger of three political parties that gave birth to the ruling Democratic Liberal Party. It demanded an end to ''U.S. interference'' in South Korea's affairs.

''To express our protests against the United States, we hereby decide to stage a boycott campaign against American goods,'' the resolution said.

The protesters urged Roh to step down in taking responsibility for social unrest and economic failure. It warned of a determined struggle by Kwangju citizens if the government continues cracking down on political protests.

Dissidents accusing the United States of complicity in the Kwangju uprising contend that most South Korean troops are under the operational control of the U.N. Command headed by an American general and that no Korean troops could move to Kwangju without U.S. approval.

U.S. authorities deny any role in the Kwangju incident and say their authority over Korean forces applies only in event of external aggression.

MIDDLETOWN, CT (MAY 18) UPI - Wesleyan University officials said Friday they were optimistic that discussions would bring an end to a 10-day-old hunger strike and sit-in by 11 students protesting racism.

''It's still going on. We have no immediate plans to put an end to it,'' said William Holder, a spokesman for Wesleyan.

Students have occupied the basement of South College, an administration building, since May 9 to demand a written agreement to expand and improve minority programs.

The hunger strikers and supporters were demanding formal commitments from the university to address alleged racism at the exclusive, liberal arts school founded in 1831.

''The discussions are continuing and seem to be going in a very satisfactory way,'' said Holder.

He said he did not know what kind of progess was made on individual issues.

''The people who are conducting discussions are guarding the confidentiality of those discussions and I don't know on an issue-by-issue basis how it is going,'' Holder said.

Wesleyan officials have allowed the hunger strike by 11 students but university spokesman Bobby Wayne Clark warned the school was prepared to ''take appropriate action, if necessary.''

''We are monitoring the health of the students and their impact on university operations. So far, we have allowed it. If the situation were to change, the approach would change,'' said Clark, declining to be more specific.

The strikers want Wesleyan to hire more minority faculty members, boost financial aid to minority students, establish a multi-cultural center and divest about $1 million in a company which operates in South Africa.

Wesleyan's endowment totals $265 million.

Clark said top university would not be swayed by the strike, or change its policies because of recent attacks on campus.

A series of incidents, including two firebombings that caused thousands of dollars in damage but no injuries, have wracked the Wesleyan campus in recent months.

In the latest, graffiti including swastikas, symbols making reference to the firebombings, and racist and sexist references was found Wednesday on the wall of a men's room in the Wesleyan Science Tower.

Wesleyan President William M. Chace's empty office was firebombed early April 7, causing several thousand dollars in damage, and another attack with Molotov cocktails April 29 burned a wall of the Wesleyan boathouse.

''The hunger strikers claim they have been forced to desperate measures,'' said Clark, who described the incidents as ''blown out of proportion'' and insisted there was calm on the campus.

Classes end next week and graduation is June 3 at the university, which enrolls 2,700 undergraduates.

(MAY 18) UPI - Moscow is an unlikely site for a meeting between U-S and Lithuanian officials. But Secretary of State Baker and Lithuanian Prime Minister Prunskiene will meet in the Soviet capital today. Both Baker and Prunskiene went to Moscow for other purposes... Baker to work on a super-power arms control agreement and Prunskiene to discuss a compromise for Lithuania's independence.

U-S and Soviet negotiators had long meetings yesterday... trying to reach a strategic arms agreement that could make a success of the summit conference between Presidents Bush and Gorbachev later this month. A senior U-S official says they will NOT be working so intensively if they did NOT believe the gaps could be bridged.

An hour-long meeting yesterday was the first direct contact between top Soviet and Lithuanian officials since the Baltic republic declared its independence March 11th. Lithuania's prime minister sees the meeting with the Soviet president as a break-through. It follows the Lithuanian parliament offering of a compromise... with a transitional period before independence.

The second day of the budget summit ended without a consensus about the size of the federal deficit. White House and congressional experts gave varying figures at the summit yesterday. The White House estimates begin at 108-BILLION dollars for fiscal 1991. Congressional estimates range up to 246-BILLION dollars. The next budget session is scheduled Tuesday.

MIAMI (MAY 18) UPI - Florida's largest development company paid more than $20 million in legal fees to defend against charges of fraud rather than settle customer complaints, it was reported Friday.

The Miami Herald said that even as a grand jury was indicting the firm, the board of the General Development Corp. approved spending $22.58 million to fight its legal battles and $800,000 each in salaries, bonuses, and severance payments to two former executives who later pleaded guilty to participating in a fraud.

"Incredible. Just incredible," said New York investor Attilio F. Petrocelli, GDC's largest shareholder. "We're not happy about it." "Oh, my God," said Miami lawyer Douglas S. Lyons, who represents dissatisfied GDC customers. "That $22 million could have gone a long way toward settling the cases. Then it would have gone to clients instead of lawyers." The disclosures were obtained by The Herald from financial statements filed by GDC in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Miami.

Charles J. Simons, who for two months has been GDC chairman, president, and chief executive officer, defended the approval by the board, which includes former Gov. Reubin Askew and Shearson Lehman Hutton Chairman Howard L. Clark Jr. The bonuses to David F. Brown, former GDC chairman, and Robert F. Ehrling, former president, rewarded them for their performance last year, Simons said.

The company last year lost millions of dollars, $80 million in one quarter alone. Also, a federal grand jury was conducting an investigation that resulted in the indictment Brown, Ehrling and the company on fraud charges.

Simons said he negotiated the severance payments. Brown and Ehrling were each seeking more than $1.6 million from the company in return for stock warrants. Simons said he persuaded them to accept $550,000 each.

Brown's attorney, Robert Fiske of New York, confirmed that most of the severance money related to disputed warrants. Lyons said, "I would have paid a half-million to get rid of them, too."

The board fired Brown and Ehrling March 9. The two men and the company pleaded guilty March 22 to federal felony charges they conspired to defraud thousands of GDC home buyers. The company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection April 6.

U.S. District Judge Lenore Nesbitt was to decide Friday whether to delay sentencing, which is scheduled for Tuesday. That would allow a restitution plan in the criminal cases to be coordinated with a reorganization plan in the bankruptcy case.

Part of the $22 million in legal fees GDC incurred between April 1989 and April 1990 was spent on bankruptcy legal retainer fees, Simons said. The company is the defendant in 243 lawsuits, financial statements filed in the bankrupcty court said.

The company, Brown and Ehrling were charged in a federal indictment returned March 14 of bilking customers out of about $100 million by inflating home values and preventing buyers, many of them from northern states, from checking prices of competing properties.

The company and former executives were charged with seven counts of mail fraud, seven counts of interstate transportation of people to commit fraud and two counts of conspiracy to commit mail fraud.

General Development pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy, agreed to a $500,000 fine and to implement a 25-year restitution program that would cost as much as $100 million.

Ehrling and Brown each pleaded guilty to a single conspiracy charge, and each faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

AHOSKIE, NC (MAY 18) UPI - The mother of Muppet creator Jim Henson said Friday her son never complained of being sick and did not see a doctor when he visited her last weekend.

Barbara Henson said her son began feeling ill Sunday and decided to take an earlier flight back to New York. By the time Henson saw a New York doctor Monday, the illness had endangered his life. Henson, 53, died at New York Hospital on Wednesday.

The New York Times reported Henson saw a doctor in North Carolina who failed to detect pneumonia and other reports said he saw his cousin, a physician. But Barbara Henson said the reports are untrue. "No, he didn't go to a doctor," she said. "As a matter of fact, I can't remember when Jim went to a doctor."

Jim Henson said he thought he had a cold Saturday but did not complain, said Barbara Henson. "He played croquet out in the back yard all afternoon " she said. "He was sniffling a little bit. We teased him a little bit because he never had a cold. He never said he was sick."

But Sunday, his condition worsened and Henson's daughter called her grandparents to tell them they were going to return to New York early. "His daughter said 'Daddy doesn't feel like getting up so we changed our reservation," said Barbara Henson. "We had no idea that he really ill. The next thing I knew they called me on Tuesday and said he was terribly ill."

Dr. David Gelmont, director of New York Hospital's intensive care unit, said Henson arrived at the emergency room early Tuesday with abscesses throughout his lungs. He was treated with high doses of multiple antibiotics and placed on a ventilator.

But Gelmont said the infection had already overwhelmed Henson's system. He said the pneumonia was apparently a secondary infection following a bout of flu.

Gelmont said Jim Henson's only sympton was a mild cough but the illness spread unusually fast, attacking his lungs and other organs. Henson first noticed blood in his phlegm Monday, he said in a Knight-Ridder News Service report.

"Unfortunately, there were no signs of pneumonia at the time," Gelmont said. "The message I would like your readers to understand is that no yokel doctor did anything wrong down there." Henson's parents, Barbara and Paul Henson, moved to Ahoskie, about 120 miles northeast of Raleigh, from Albuquerque, N.M., in 1982.

(MAY 18) UPI - President Bush and key members of Congress are again locked in a showdown over civil rights legislation. Bush yesterday rejected a proposal aimed at eliminating his objections to minority quotas in the work force. He's still concerned about quotas. The president says he wants to sign a civil rights bill- but NOT a quota bill.

President Bush chided Congress yesterday for leaving its employees out of anti-discrimination and safety laws applied to the rest of the federal government and private industry. Speaking at a ceremony honoring the Civil Rights Commission, Bush said Congress should place itself and its employees under those laws.

New Jersey is on the verge of having the nation's toughest law against military-style assault weapons. The legislature passed the measure yesterday. Governor Jim Florio says he will sign it. The New Jersey legislation bans the sale of semi-automatic weapons. And... it restricts the ownership of 38 types of guns to collectors and specially registered target shooters.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (MAY 18) UPI - Philippine and U.S. negotiators, after meeting for five days to decide the future of American military facilities in the nation, announced a settlement Friday on a nagging compensation dispute.

Chief U.S. negotiator Richard Armitage departed for Tokyo after the end of the first round of the talks.

The two panels recessed indefinitely but spokesmen said the second round of discussions would focus on a treaty to replace the pact expiring Sept. 16, 1991.

Earlier Friday, masked men in a taxi fired rifle grenades at the U.S.-run Thomas Jefferson library in Manila's financial district, police and U.S. officials said. No casualties were reported.

Police also announced the arrest of an alleged member of the communist guerrilla hit squad suspected in the killing Sunday of two U.S. servicemen on the eve of the bases talks.

In closing remarks Friday, Armitage expressed disappointment that the compensation issue dominated the initial talks.

He said his frustration stemmed from the ''inappropriateness of constructing a renewed strategic relationship between our two peoples simply on the basis of money.''

The Philippines hosts the sprawling Clark Air Base, Subic Bay Naval complex and four smaller facilities under a 1947 treaty. Clark and Subic are home to some 15,000 servicemen and are the oldest and largest U.S. facilities overseas.

Philippine negotiators had threatened to scuttle the talks unless Washington settled a $222 million shortfall in the annual aid compensation of $461 million.

The U.S.-Philippine statement said Washington pledged to make its best efforts to fulfill its obligations and provide food aid, military and medical equipment and unspecified financial credits to make up for the shortfall.

The four-page document said the Philippine side would apply the new aid to the shortfall, thus settling the compensation dispute.

It also said the two sides agreed ''to move on to discussions of the nature of U.S.-Philippine relations in the future.''

''These discussions could include the consideration of a new agreement concerning friendship, cooperation and security on the basis of a new relationship between the Philippines and the United States in the light of the changing global environment,'' the communique said.

Armitage said Washington interpreted the effective termination of the bases treaty as Sept. 16, 1992 after a one-year notice, not next year as the Philippine panel contended, but that President Bush has made it clear ''we will leave if we are not wanted.''

U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Victoria Middleton, speaking of the attack on the building housing the library and other U.S. offices, said, ''There was minimum physical damage and no casualties.'' Middleton said no one has claimed responsibility for the attack.

Rusty Manalang, a salesman walking to his office, said he saw three masked men in the taxi fire shots in the air and then launched the two rifle grenades into the building. Police said they found two M-16 armalite rifle shells on the street.

President Corazon Aquino's spokeswoman, Lourdes Sytangco, said she believed guerrillas of the communist New People's Army were responsible.

''The communists have been trying to disrupt the exploratory talks,'' Sytangco told radio station DZXL.

The 19,000-member NPA, which has been battling the Manila government for 21 years, has claimed responsibility for the slayings Sunday of airmen John H. Raven, 19, of Delta Junction, Alaska, and James C. Green, 20, of Craig, Colo.

Since October 1987, 11 Americans have been killed in the Philippines in politically motivated attacks.

Lt. Col. Julious Yarcia, police chief of Angeles, where the latest slayings occured, identified the suspect arrested as Gabriel Warner, 24, an alleged member of an NPA hit squad. Two others were arrested with Warner, one of five suspects in the case.

Yarcia said documents seized during the raid at Warner's hideout showed the rebels would ''strike at Americans again and very soon,'' and that security in Angeles has been intensified.

PITTSBURGH (MAY 18) UPI - A resolution approved by the National Council of Churches condemns Christopher Columbus's "invasion" of the New World in 1492 because it resulted in church-supported racism, enslavement of Indians and moral decadence, the council said Friday.

The resolution approved Thursday night at a meeting of the Governing Board of the ecumenical Christian group was proposed by the Rev. George Tinker, an Osage Indian who teaches at the Iliff School of Theology in Denver.

"American people have so digested the myth of American history that they have lost signt of the truth - the pain of so many people who live on the continent," said Tinker, a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. "The only thing Columbus really discovered was that he was lost," he said.

The resolution is intended to influence the official year-long quincentenary celebrations of Columbus's arrival in America next year. The board defeated a competing resolution by the Right Rev. David Reed, an Episcopal bishop from Louisville, Ky., to soften the language.

"Many of us find it hard to state that this is not a time for celebration " Reed said. "There are many things over the past 500 years to thank God for."

The resolution, adopted after 2 1/2 hours of debate by the 220 delegates, said that "for the indigenous peoples of North America, (the settlement) brought slavery, genocide and theft, and exploitation of the land that has led to their descendants' impoverished lives."

The resolution called on churches to "recognize that what some historians have termed a 'discovery' in reality was an invasion and colonization with legalized occupation, genocide, economic exploitation, and a deep level of institutional racism and moral decadence.

"The church, with few exceptions, accompanied and legitimized this conquest and explotiation," the resolution said. "Theological justifications for destroying native religious beliefs while forcing conversion to European forms of Christianity demanded a submission from the newly converted that facilitated their total conquest and exploitation."

Reed's resolution aknowledged the injustice and pain of Indians inflicted after the arrival of Colubus and other European explorers, but sought to retain the "passion and words" of Tinker's resolution while adding positive aspects of the last 500 years.

"My feeling was, do we have to be so negative and only negative," Reed said. "I find there are many people with positive feelings about what this new world has meant to them, their families and church."

Joseph D'Andrea, the vice consul of Italy in Pittsburgh, said he understood the NCC's resolution but thought the anniversary should be a "celebration of the spirit of America" and what has been accomplished in 500 years rather than focusing on the negative effects of the landing.

The council's action makes it the second major church body to voice reservations about celebrations being organized by a 30-member federal agency, the Christopher Columbus Quincentenary Jubilee Commission. Among members of the commission are Secretary of State James Baker and Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher.

The United Church of Christ's Board for Homeland Ministries announced earlier this month it would join with Native American groups to plan and sponsor alternative events to the celebration.

"This puts our government and governments abroad on notice that we cannot any longer neglect the sins we have committed in the past," said the Rev. Tyrone Pitts, general secretary of the Progressive National Baptist Church.

"This is saying we in the United States can face up to some of our historic sins," said Benjamin Chavis Jr., executive director of the United Church of Christ's commission for racial injustice.

House and Senate leaders dropped a controversial abortion amendment from a package containing emergency aid for Nicaragua and Panama yesterday. That development clears the way for passage of the supplemental appropriations bill.

The Senate voted 92-0 yesterday in favor of economic sanctions on any nation which uses chemical or biological warfare against the other countries or on its own people. The sanctions also could be applied to foreign companies which help a country develop chemical warfare capability.

TAIPEI, TAIWAN (MAY 18) UPI - Organizers of the dissident radio ship Goddess of Democracy Friday accused Taiwan of breaking a promise to aid the vessel and decided to pursue their quest by seeking a friendlier port in Japan.

Meanwhile, organizers and their Taiwanese supporters alleged the United States had pressured Taiwan not to assist the boat in its mission to beam news, music and pro-democracy messages to China from international waters in the East China Sea.

Nicolas Druz, chairman of a local support group Boat For China Association said, ''The Bush government has put pressure on the Taiwan government to stop the Goddess of Democracy.'' Organizers aboard the ship made similar charges.

But a Taiwanese government spokesman Friday denied local media reports alleging U.S. pressure. A spokesman for the American Institute in Taiwan, Washington's unofficial embassy, said, ''The allegations were simply not true.'' He said there had been no meeting between U.S. and Taiwanese officials.

Project organizer Jean-Francois Bizot, publisher of the French magazine Actuel, condemned the Taiwan government for allegedly breaking a promise to help the ship. Actuel is one of 19 international media organizations backing the project to broadcast pro-democracy messages to China to commemorate the massacre of Chinese students at Tiananmen Square in Beijing last June.

''Taiwan made us understand that some people are afraid of freedom and don't keep their word,'' Bizot said at a news conference. ''Some Chinese are always afraid of losing face.''

Beijing has warned against helping the ship, which China has dubbed the ''Goddess of Plague.'' The ship was launched in La Rochelle, France, on March 17 and has confronted continual rejection from countries afraid of angering Beijing.

Bizot said while ship organizers felt enormous sympathy in the streets of Taiwan, he said, ''our boat was surrounded by police, as if we were pirates ... we were refused the help promised. That is why we have to leave Taiwan.''

Organizers have said Taiwan denied the crew access to telecommunications networks, pressued local companies against helping the ship and forbid a local radio station from renting a medium-wave radio transmitter essential to convey the boat's messages to China's 1.1 billion people.

Official government spokesman Shaw Yu-ming said in a statement, ''The republic of China... supports the objectives and goals of the Goddess of Democracy. But ... we also have great respect for the rule of law.

''The government of the republic of China cannot provide the ship with broadcasting equipment or render assistance to the ship's procurement of such equipment.''

Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of radio and television equipment remain tied up in customs at the northern harbor of Keelung, where the radio ship has been docked since its arrival Sunday.

''The (Taiwan) government said it wasn't involved in the Goddess of Democracy project,'' said local supporter Druz. ''In fact, they are involved - they are involved in stopping us.''

Organizers said the vessel will wait out a typhoon expected in the area this weekend before leaving for an unspecified port in Japan early next week. Japan has said it would allow to berth the radio ship, whose application to dock had been rejected by both Hong Kong and the Philippines.

Bizot Friday launched a worldwide appeal for assistance in obtaining the needed transmitter, or for money to purchase one and send it to Japan.

MOSCOW (MAY 18) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker reported making ''some progress'' Friday in a meeting with President Mikhail Gorbachev and said he hopes an accord on a strategic arms reduction can be reached in time for the Washington summit.

American and Soviet technical arms negotiators went into an unscheduled evening session after the five-hour Baker-Gorbachev meeting, working out the details of principles agreed to by the two men.

Baker gave no hint of what those agreements might be but the main sticking point has been disagreement over technical limits for air- and sea-launched cruise missiles.

''We made some progress on START,'' Baker said after his meeting with Gorbachev at the Kremlin, referring to the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty. ''We still have a number of issues out there.''

The draft treaty now under negotiation would cut the number of large Soviet land-based missile warheads in half and make smaller reductions in other types of strategic nuclear warheads, including cruise missiles.

Asked if there could be an agreement by the May 30-June 3 summit, Baker answered: ''We keep hoping we could accomplish that. I know President Bush would like to see agreement on the major substantive issues and so would President Gorbachev.''

The four days of talks, mainly between Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, were scheduled to end Friday with both men holding news conferences in Moscow early Saturday.

One U.S. official said the strategic arms treaty ''is the litmus test'' for whether the Soviets are serious about arms reduction.

Baker said he was ''very encouraged'' by the fact that Gorbachev had met Thursday night with Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene, and was ''very hopeful'' the meeting could signal the start of a dialogue between Baltic and Soviet leaders to end the crisis over secession from the Soviet Union.

Baker later met with Prunskiene, but the details of their discussion were not immediately available.

Also under discussion in the Moscow talks were human rights and regional issues, including the possible form of a political settlement in Afghanistan.

Gorbachev talked briefly with reporters at the opening of his meeting with Baker in an ornate Kremlin conference room.

At the suggestion of the Soviets, a planned meeting earlier in the day between Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was canceled apparently to give Shevardnadze a chance to brief Gorbachev on the course of the talks.

Asked about progress in the Moscow talks, Gorbachev said he had the impression ''we are moving closer'' to each other.

American officials were mildly optimistic but more guarded in their assessment, particularly on the key issue of a strategic arms reduction treaty.

''If we didn't think the gaps were bridgeable, we wouldn't be working so intensively,'' one official said.

Gorbachev was in a jaunty, even defiant, mood as he parried questions from American correspondents.

Asked about Western reports that he is in trouble politically, Gorbachev urged others ''to follow closely what is happening in the Soviet Union and reflect what is happening. They shouldn't panic more than the Soviets do.''

Asked by another journalist why the Soviet Union ''is afraid of a united Germany within NATO,'' Gorbachev responded with a question of his own:

''Why is the United States afraid of a united Germany joining the Warsaw Pact?''

Baker and Shevardnadze took most of the day off from the actual negotiating Thursday while technical-level teams worked their way through a 500-page treat that still has some gaps - particularly on rules limiting air- and sea-launched cruise missiles.

Both men toured a medieval Russian Orthodox church and monastery complex and Baker received an unvarnished look at a small Soviet village and some of the problems facing Gorbachev and his political and economic reforms.

The outing to the Orthodox monastery at Zagorsk, about 42 miles northeast of Moscow, was suggested by the Soviets. Baker also had expressed the wish to visit a small village and the Soviets chose Radonezh.

PARIS (MAY 18) UPI - Police in the eastern city of Nantes Friday arrested three young skinheads and charged them with defacing 90 tombstones at the Catholic cemetery of Saint-Herblain, authorities said.

Authorities discovered tombstones at the Catholic cemetery painted with slogans against the extreme right-wing party of Jean-Marie Le Pen, who has been widely blamed for creating a national mood of racism.

The inscriptions found on sculptures and tombstones included ''Death to Le Pen'' and ''Le Pen is an (Waffen) SS.''

Police said the three men arrested Friday admitted they had painted slogans against Le Pen's National Front Party on the tombstones in the Catholic cemetery to protest the bad publicity the skinheads have received as a result of the defacing of a Jewish cemetery in the southern town of Carpentras.

Police had concentrated their investigation into the Carpentras incident a week ago among skinheads in southern France because they are believed to be linked to extreme rightist elements.

Commenting on the investigation into the Carpentras incident, police said Friday testimony given to a local newspaper by a man who said he saw a Mercedes Benz car with Paris license plates pull away at high speed from the cemetery may help them break the case.

The government hsa said it was assigning 60 additional investigators to the case, but police admit they have few clues.

Thousands of French Jews were said to be considering immigrating to Israel after a spate of anti-Semitic acts.

The Jewish Agency, an international group that helps Jews immigrate to Israel, has received about 2,000 requests for aid since the tombstones were defaced with anti-Jewish graffiti a week ago in Carpentras.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) UPI - A subway robber who took $30 from a man on a train Friday shot and killed another passenger who rose from his seat and yelled, ''Leave him alone,'' authorities said.

The armed bandit staged his holdup in the next-to-last car of a train that was approaching a Lower Manhattan subway station shortly after 6 a.m., said Al O'Leary, a transit police spokesman.

As the robber took $30 from his victim, a man seated in the middle of the car, identified as Antonio Gonzalez, 45, rose from his seat and yelled at the gunman, ''Leave him alone!'' O'Leary said.

The remark prompted the gunman to walk to the middle of the car, where another man, who had been seated next to Gonzalez, got up to confront the robber, O'Leary said.

The bandit fired his weapon at that man but the gun jammed.

Gonzalez then stood up again, inciting the gunman to pull the trigger once more, this time successfully, O'Leary said.

Gonzalez was pronounced dead at the scene, he said.

The gunman fled the train at the next stop.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (MAY 18) UPI - Austria's foreign minister said Friday he expected his country would win European Community membership by the end of 1994.

Austria formally applied to join the 12-nation EC last July, and Foreign Minister Alois Mock said he hoped membership negotiations would begin by Jan. 1, 1993.

''I think we would make it by the end of 1994,'' he told a news conference after meeting with European Community officials, including Jacques Delors, president of the EC Executive Commission.

EC officials made it clear earlier this year that applications for new membership would not be considered until the European Community's internal market program is completed at the end of 1992.

Mock said his country's constitutionally mandated neutrality would not pose an obstacle to EC membership, because ''things have changed so much in Europe'' to lessen East-West tensions.

Many EC officials seek to add a security dimension to the community's economic mission. Of the community's 12 members, only neutral Ireland is not a member of NATO.

The Austrian foreign minister said negotiations on creating a ''European Economic Space'' between the EC and the six-nation European Free Trade Association should continue.

''Everything that comes out of these negotiations between EFTA and the EC is a downpayment for full (EC) membership,'' he said.

Mock also predicted that other EFTA countries would soon apply for EC membership. EFTA includes NATO members Norway and Iceland, and neutrals Austria, Sweden, Switzerland and Finland.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Arpad Goncz, Hungary's acting non-communist president, said Friday he received assurances from President Bush of continued U.S. aid for his nation.

''We are not coming here to beg,'' Goncz told reporters after a 35-minute meeting Friday with Bush. He said they also discussed the upcoming superpower summit and the drive for independence in the Baltic states.

''The president assured me about continuous support for the democratic process as well as the restablization of the Hungarian economy,'' said the silver-haired Goncz, speaking with the assistance of an interpreter.

''We did not discuss the amount in specific figures (but) I clearly stated to the president that we need assistance and the support,'' the Hungarian leader said.

The United States is now providing Hungary with $80 million over three years, and has also given the reform-minded Warsaw Pact country with most-favored-nation trade status.

Last week, Bush announced creation of a privately financed Citizens Democracy Corps to support economic and political changes in Eastern Europe. Hungary applauded the move as another step toward expanded trade and relations.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush, in his meeting with Goncz, ''expressed his great admiration for Hungary's progress in building democracy, and reaffirmed'' U.S. support.

Goncz, 68, was elected to Hungary's Parliment this spring in the first freely held political contests in that country in 40 years. He became speaker and was picked as president, pending virtually certain ratification by Parliment.

The more powerful position of prime minister went to Jozsef Antall, a leader of the center-right Hungarian Democratic Forum. Goncz is a member of the Alliance of Free Democrats.

A writer and playwright, Goncz was jailed in 1956 during a popular revolution that was crushed by the Red Army. He was released in 1963.

Goncz said in his talks with Bush he asked the president to seek further assurances from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that all Soviet troops will be withdrawn from Hungary by June 1991, as scheduled under an agreement.

''But I do not have any doubt that the Soviet Union will keep the set deadline,'' he told reporters.

Bush and Gorbachev are to open a summit in Washington on May 30.

Goncz said he also told Bush that he believes the drive for independence in the Baltic states ''cannot be reversed.'' Fitzwater said both leaders agreed on the need for ''dialogue'' between the Kremlin and the Baltic states.

TOKYO (MAY 18) UPI - It was not a bad week of shopping for Ryoei Saito.

Saito, the 32nd richest man in Japan according to tax records, said Friday he is the Japanese collector who purchased Vincent Van Gogh's 1890 ''Portait of Dr. Gachet'' for $82.5 million Wednesday and Pierre-Auguste Renoir's 1876 ''Au Moulin De La Galette'' for $78.1 million Thursday.

The two paintings, sold at auctions in New York, set records for the highest and second highest prices ever paid for paintings.

Saito, 74, obiviously pleased with his new possessions, invited Japanese journalists into his home in central Tokyo Friday to discuss the purchases.

''I have heard a lot of criticism (about pushing up the price of art work) but if I did not buy them now, they would never have come to Japan,'' Saito said.

''The people will understand the value of my purchases in 50 or 100 years '' he added.

Saito said he wants to display the Van Gogh in a museum he hopes to build to show the work of Ikuo Hirayama, perhaps the most famous of Japan's living painters, and will put the Renoir in a museum in his home state of Shizuoka.

Saito, a well-known art collector in Japan, inherited his father's fortune built around the Daishowa Paper Manufacturing Co., Japan's second largest paper company, and extensive real estate holdings.

Saito, who listed his income last year as $16.6 million, said he borrowed money to buy the Van Gogh and Renoir masterpieces.

''I borrowed the money from the bank, and I will continue to do it to buy good art when it becomes available,'' he said.

The cash-rich Japanese imported $1.87 billion worth of art works last year.

Nippon Autopolis Co. bought Pablo Picasso's ''Les Noces de Pierrette'' for $51.8 million in December.

At the Sotheby's auction Thursday, Japanese collectors bought 23 of the works, 19 were purchased by American buyers and 16 by European, said Laura Stewart, a Sotheby's spokeswoman.

Saito said he was surprised he won the bidding for the Renior, which had been estimated to be worth $40 million to $50 million.

''Au Moulin De La Galette'' is a summer scene of an open-air, lamplit Paris dance hall painted in 1876.

The previous record for a Renoir was $17,681,400 for a work sold at Sotheby's in London last year.

''This painting has been called the finest Renoir ever painted and the quintessential Impressionist painting,'' said John Marion, chairman of Sotheby's North America.

The Van Gogh masterpiece was auctioned off at Christie's.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (MAY 18) UPI - East and West Germany signed a key treaty Friday for economic, monetary and social union that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said marks the ''birth of the free and unified Germany.''

A West German newspaper reported that East Germany has agreed to Kohl's suggestion that West German elections set for Dec. 2 be expanded to include both Germanys.

Speaking at the signing ceremony in Bonn's historic Palais Schaumburg, Kohl said, ''After decades, a dream is starting to become reality - the dream of the unity of Germany and Europe.''

Kohl and East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere watched as West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel and his East German counterpart, Walter Romberg, signed the document in the Gobelin Hall of the former chancellery.

Palais Schaumburg had been the official office of West German heads of government for 27 years since Konrad Adenauer became the first chancellor of West Germany in 1949 after the division of Germany.

Both Kohl and de Maiziere said the signing of the draft treaty, effective July 2 if ratified by the two German parliaments, is a decisive step on the way to unification.

Kohl attended the ceremony shortly after his return from Washington where he told journalists he had no timetable for German unification.

But the newspaper Bild Zeitung, in an article released before publication Friday, said leading members of the East German government had agreed to Kohl's earlier suggestion that all-German elections be held Dec. 2.

''Even if this information is immedirliament will be elected on December 2 '' Bild Zeitung said.

''State unity has drawn closer and it is now necessary to complete it soon '' Kohl said Friday.

''What we are experiencing here is the hour of birth of the free and unified Germany: before the eyes of the world, the representatives of the two freely elected governments of both parts of Germany demonstrate their desire to jointly - as one people, one nation - shape their future into a free and democratic state,'' he said.

Under the treaty, which comes into effect July 2, East Germany will adopt West Germany's strong currency and its economic system. The agreement also states that East Germany will in future allow local and foreign private companies to acquire land and dispose freely of their means of production.

De Maiziere warned that the treaty was ''a compromise'' and that ''not all golden dreams which some people had linked with the state treaty could be realised.''

''But no one will be worse off than before. On the contrary. What East Bloc country gets such a good starting position as we do with this treaty? '' he added.

Concerns about German unity are to be resolved through the ''two-plus-four'' talks - the two Germanys plus the World War II Allies of France, Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States.

The toughest issue in the negotiations with the four former allies appears to be the Western concept - rejected by the Soviet Union - that a united Germany will be part of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

At a news conference after meeting with U.S. President George Bush in Washington Thursday, Kohl reiterated his view that Germany will be a member of the Western military alliance, but that Soviet troops might remain in what is now East German territory ''for a transitory period.''

JERUSALEM (MAY 18) UPI - Paramilitary forces shot and killed a 13-year-old Palestinian in the Israeli-occupied West Bank Friday a day after a Swedish human rights group condemned the army's use of violence against Arab children.

The teenager was killed when the border police dispersed youths from the Balata refugee camp who threw stones at an oil truck on the outskirts of the camp, military sources said.

A policeman fired a rubber bullet, killing Isam Al-Mughrabi, 13, military and Palestinian sources said.

The refugee camp, which is in Nablus, the largest West Bank city, was later put under curfew.

Elsewhere in the West Bank Friday, a Palestinian was wounded in the leg during a clash in the town of Ramallah, Palestinian sources said.

In the southern West Bank town of Hebron, the army imposed a curfew Friday to search for gunmen who ambushed a patrol Thursday and lightly wounded one soldier. The use of weapons against soldiers has been rare since the start of the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation.

The killing of the teenager came a day after the Swedish branch of the Save the Children human rights organization issued a lengthy report criticizing Israeli army practices that it said have led to the deaths of 159 children under 16 and the wounding of thousands during the first two years of the Palestinian uprising.

At least 661 Palestinians have been killed by Israelis since the start of the popular revolt against Israeli occupation.

The three-volume human rights report criticized the army for the ''indiscriminate beating, tear-gassing and shooting of children'' with intent to injure.

The Israeli army rejected the report's findings, saying the figures were distorted and were being used as anti-Israel propaganda.

Military sources said soldiers had clear orders not to fire at children, adding that children participating in violent demonstrations are sometimes wounded.

An army spokesman said Arab children were ''sent to the front of the confrontation'' with the army and leaders of the uprising had used children casualties for political purposes.

The Swedish Save the Children report said half of the children killed were not in the vicinity of a demonstration at the time of their deaths.

According to the Israeli human rights organization B'Tselem, 132 children were killed by the uprising's second anniversary on Dec. 9, 1989.

LONDON (MAY 18) UPI - Stock prices closed lower Friday in moderate trading on the London International stock exchange as investors took profits following Thursday's sharp advance.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which climbed 63.3 points Thursday, fell 15.3 points to 2,269.1, but for the week the key index gained 93.2 points.

The narrower top 30 industrial average slipped 2.4 points to 1,793.3 and climbed 84.5 points for the week.

An estimated 595 million shares changed hands, compared with 645 million shares Thursday.

Analysts said prices, which opened higher, eased slightly around midday on profit taking following Thursday's performance.

On Thursday, stocks posted their largest daily gain in more than two years after the Chancellor of the Exchequer said the government is relaxing its opposition to Britain joining the European monetary system as a full member.

The Financial Times 100-stock index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, scored its largest single day rise since November 1987.

Market analysts said the opening decline on Wall Street also encouraged investors to take profits.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Globe Investment Trust gained 8 cents to $3.14 after the company launched a defense against a hostile bid from the British Coal Board Pension Fund.

Conder Group, the construction company, tumbled $4.25 to $5.60 after the company issued a profits warning.

British Aerospace lost 13 cents to $8.15 amid worries of defense cuts.

Among the day's other highlights, Gus A fell 43 cents to $15.28, British Telecom eased 9 cents to $4.42, Bowthorpe added 8 cents to $3.28 and Priest Marians fell 16 cents to $4.01.

Elsewhere in Europe, prices were little changed on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange in light trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which eased 0.19 points Thursday, added 2.01 points to 1,843.59.

VATICAN CITY (MAY 18) UPI - Messages from statesmen, religious leaders and ordinary people from all over the world marked Pope John Paul II's 70th birthday Friday but the pope requested no special celebrations.

Among the messages were greetings from the three most important leaders in the pope's native Poland - President Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki and Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa.

In his message Walesa called John Paul ''the spiritual father of Solidarity'' and ''the maximum moral authority of the Polish nation.''

''There would have been no changes in Poland without the prayers of your holiness, without your wisdom, total love and paternal solicitude,'' Walesa told the pope, who supported Solidarity during the years the reform movement was outlawed.

Jaruzelski, who lost his struggle to suppress Solidarity, referred to John Paul in his message as ''the great son of our nation.''

''Your intellectual and moral contribution to the contemporary philosophy of peace, to the idea of social justice and brotherhood, so necessary today, is of particular value,'' Jaruzelski said.

The pope, who was born in Wadowice, near Cracow in southern Poland, May 18 1920, specifically requested that there be no special celebrations to mark his birthday.

Nevertheless the youth association of Rome's Sant' Anna parish - known as ''the parish of the Vatican'' - planned a prayer meeting in a Vatican courtyard late Friday ''to celebrate with supplications and prayers of thanks the 70th birthday the holy father John Paul II.''

The daily Vatican bulletin did not mention the occasion, although the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano paid a glowing tribute to John Paul on the front page of its Friday edition.

Most Italian newspapers carried full page spreads recalling the major achievements of the pope since he was elected head of the world's 840 million Roman Catholics Oct. 16, 1978. John Paul was the first non-Italian elected to the papacy in 455 years.

The press reports laid particular emphasis on the Polish pope's contribution to the defeat of ''atheistic communism'' in Eastern Europe, where the Catholic Church was known as ''the church of silence'' before John Paul II became pope.

One report recalled that 10 days after his election, John Paul said: ''The church in Eastern Europe is no longer the church of silence, because the pope speaks in its name.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - In the government's first admission linking Agent Orange to a serious medical problem, Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward Derwinski directed his agency Friday to pay $8 million year to Vietnam veterans afflicted by a broad class of cancers.

The decision to compensate veterans suffering from soft-tissue sarcomas was prompted by recommendations of an advisory committee that concluded there is ''at least as likely as not'' a significant statistical link between exposure to to the wartime herbicide and the difficult-to-diagnose cancers.

Agent Orange, which contained the deadly contaminant dioxin, was sprayed from January 1965 to April 1970 in Vietnam to destroy ground cover and crops.

An estimated 1,100 Vietnam veterans or their families are expected to receive compensation for soft-tissue sarcomas, tumors found in such tissues as muscles or body fat. Payments, some of which will be retroactive, are projected to cost $8 million a year.

''I believe this is another step forward in resolving a most difficult and emotional issue,'' Derwinski said. ''We intend to proceed as quickly as possible to award compensation to these veterans who are so deserving of our care and concern.''

About 36,000 Vietnam veterans have filed claims contending they were medically disabled by Agent Orange and the dispute over whether they deserve compensation has raged for 15 years. By regulation, the VA presumes all veterans who served in Vietnam were exposed to Agent Orange.

An estimated 2.6 million military personnel served in South Vietnam during the Vietnam War, which officially lasted from August 1964 through May 1975.

Veterans' groups welcomed the recognition of an apparent link between Agent Orange and serious illness but said the VA action did not go far enough.

''It's hard to be disappinted when the VA grants something for veterans. But it's almost too little too late. It affects too few people to be terribly meaningful,'' said John Hanson of the American Legion.

''The most meaningful part is the recognition that these particular cancers were caused, even if by inference, by Agent Orange. That's never been done before,'' he said. ''But we're convinced that sufficient research has been done to grant (compensation) for a range of diseases.''

In March, Derwinski announced the VA would grant about $20 million annually to about 1,700 Vietnam veterans stricken by non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, a rare cancer that veterans' groups claim is associated with Agent Orange exposure. At the time, however, the VA secretary refused to acknowledge a link to the herbicide.

Currently, the only compensation the VA offers related directly to Agent Orange involves veterans who developed a skin rash called chloracne within six months after being exposed to the herbicide.

Earlier this month, a scientific survey commissioned by veterans' groups found ''clear-cut'' evidence Agent Orange is linked to non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, soft-tissue sarcoma, chloracne, symptomless liver damage and a metabolism abnormality.

Although evidence was less convincing for three other problems - Hodgkin's disease, nerve damage and birth defects - the report said the disorders would still meet VA standards for disability compensation.

The VA advisory committee, which met Wednesday and Thursday, made no decision on possible health effects of Agent Orange other than soft-tissue sarcoma, saying it would meet again this summer to consider those ailments.

SEATTLE (MAY 18) UPI - The U.S. Postal Service unveiled Friday the first stamps to be sold through banks' automated teller machines.

Seattle is a test market for sales of the stamps, which will be available through Seattle First National Bank ATMs for six months.

The stamps are issued in booklets containing a dozen 25-cent stamps.

The stamps will be available at 22 ATMs to Seafirst customers or those carrying an ''ACCEL'' cash machine card. They will be issued like cash, with the $3 purchase price deducted from a customer's account.

The stamps are made of polyester film less than .005 of an inch thick, with a coat of varnish on one side and a pressure sensitive adhesive backing on the other.

The stamps also are designed with a water-soluble layer, allowing them to be soaked off envelopes so the envelopes can be used again.

Sales during the test marketing in Seattle will determine whether the stamps are sold in ATMs nationwide, the Postal Service said.

FORT WORTH, Texas (MAY 18) UPI - Ruling out diversification into the highly-competitive civilian aviation field, a senior official of General Dynamics Corp. says the company would prefer to lay off some 7,000 employees in face of deeper defense budget cuts.

In an interview published in Friday's Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Charles Anderson, vice president and general manager of the company which makes F-16 fighter planes, said GD is not prepared to risk financial disaster by switching to commercial jetliners to make up for the lost defense business.

''The commercial world is not as rosy out there as everybody thinks it is '' said Anderson, who is in charge of GD's Fort Worth division where the F-16s are made. ''It's easy for people to say you ought to diversify, but the main problem is it takes a tremendous amount of cash.''

GD, headquartered in St. Louis, has already laid off 350 workers from the F-16 production line in the past month. Anderson said the company, however will continue to make military planes in Fort Worth.

''In a commercial venture, you have to have a whale of a lot of upfront money and you do not get much of a return on your investment for a long time,'' he said. ''If most of the defense contractors had that kind of cash, they wouldn't be in the positonn they are today, which is heavily debt-laden because of all of the fixed-price contracts they have invested in.''

GD would face additional problems if it were to diversify because the Air Force owns the plant and much of the equipment it uses, he said.

Some 32,000 people work in GD's operations in the Fort Worth area. They are concerned further defense budget reductions would cut sharply into their employment ranks.

The plant is under contract to make 600 F-16 Fighting Falcons in the next four years. Anderson said that number could drop in the new budget.

''But even if we drop to 72 airplanes a year, you're still talking about the highest production rate of any fighter in the U.S.,'' he said.

The likelihood of a lower production schedule prompted unions representing the workers at the plant to suggest that GD begin looking into the civilian market.

Anderson said with all the likely cuts in production, the company is confident no more than 7,000 people would lose their jobs in the next five years.

''If we wind up going to 72 F-16s a year, plus another 30 or so in foreign military sales, that would be about half of the production rate we have scheduled this year,'' he said. ''But with the buildup in the A-12 (attack jet for the Navy) program and some of the other programs, that doesn't mean our employment is going to be cut in half.''

WARSAW, POLAND (MAY 18) UPI - Polish police said Friday Poland might start spying on the Soviet Union while East Germany has broken off its intelligence cooperation with Warsaw in advance of unification with West Germany.

Krzysztof Kozlowski, Solidarity deputy interior minister and chief of the Office of State Protection, which replaced the disbanded Security Police last week, told a news conference his ministry would seek closer cooperation with the NATO countries following the disintegration of the East bloc.

However, Kozlowski said Poland would not seek cooperation with Western nations in gathering intelligence on the Soviet Union, indicating Poland would do the job itself.

''We shall have our own information which will not be worse (than that of other countries),'' he said.

The police official said Poland will try to develop close links with police agencies of NATO countries to fight against terrorism and drug trafficking as well as other crimes.

He also revealed that Poland filed an application with Interpol Thursday to become the second East Bloc member of the international police organization after Hungary.

Kozlowski admitted that the operation of intellgence services in Poland as well as other East Bloc countries were influenced by the Soviet KGB secret police but he added that each of the services was mostly independent.

''The independence of operations was large but now they will be fully independent,'' he said.

The official said East Germany's secret police, the successor of the discredited STASI police, recently ''canceled cooperation in Poland due to the new political situation.''

It was believed that East Germany's police took the decision to solidify operations prior to the unification of two German states and eventual merger of the two secret police organizations.

Kozlowski said among Warsaw Pact countries, only Hungary's intelligence agency has expressed its readiness to cooperate with Poland. He did not say if the offer was accepted.

He vowed Polish intelligence will no longer ''spy on the Polish emigre centers in France, Britian and the United States,'' like the communist security service did, nor will it tail foreign correspodents any more.

''The department protecting foreign correspondents ceased to exist,'' he said. ''It is not in the present police structure.''

Kozlowski joked that it would be hard to find the person who shipped a parcel to former United Press International correspondent Ruth Gruber in 1982 containing photographs of military installations, which resulted in her expulsion from Poland on spying charges.

''I am not an optimist that the sender can ever be found.'' he said.

Following Gruber's expulsion, UPI's Warsaw bureau was closed and another Polish correspondent was stripped of his acccreditation. Martial law authorities allowed the office to reopen on April 1, 1983.

Elsewhere in Poland, a group of 3,000 shipyard workers, dissatisfied with proposed wage hikes, struck for four hours Friday in Gdnask, and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa condemened the protest action as illegal.

A source at the shipyard, the cradle of Solidarity which was formed in 1980 as a result of a national workers upheaval, said the strike was organized by a group of anarchists operating in the yard.

He said the anti-Walesa group urges workers to demand the highest wages possible without taking into account the financial situation of the enterprise.

''I am sad and I am concerned over the fate of the country,'' Walesa told the strikers at the rally.

''I have not organized this strike and I will not join it,'' he said.

Walesa condemned the anarchists who managed to attract so many to join the strike saying ''the whole world who wants to help us (to implement the economic reforms) will begin to think that we are not serious.''

The wages in the shipyard were much below the national average and management recently promised workers pay hikes of 78 percent starting from June 1.

WAUKEGAN, IL (MAY 18) UPI - A man accused of poisoning his infant son with sulfuric acid so he could win a product liability suit from the drug company that made the tot's formula was convicted of murder Friday.

Lake County Circuit Judge Harry Hartel Jr. issued the verdict against Ricky Irby Sr. and set sentencing for June 29.

In closing arguments Thursday, Lake County Assistant State's Attorney

Victoria Rossetti described Irby as a cold, heartless father who cared about nothing but money.

''Quinten Irby died after two years and three months of unbelievable pain and suffering,'' Rossetti said. ''All this suffering because his father wanted to make a little money.''

She said Irby, 28, conspired with his girlfriend, Sheila Smith, 27, to feed acid to their 3-month-old son, Quentin, to get a product liability settlement from Abbott Laboratories, the maker of the baby's formula.

Quentin became ill May 31, 1984, after ingesting acid-laced formula and spent the rest of his life - 27 months - in the intensive care unit of a Chicago children's hospital.

Smith pleaded guilty to murder earlier this year and prosecutors said she would be sentenced to prison, not death.

Rossetti said medical evidence indicated the baby was forced to drink nearly pure sulfuric acid. Doctors testified an infant would instinctively draw away from the toxic formula.

Irby's lawyer blamed the poisoning on a vicious girlfriend who framed Irby when she felt cornered by authorities.

''There is no credible evidence that ties Ricky Irby to this crime,'' said Tom Briscoe.

Irby testified he was unaware of the baby's injuries until Smith asked him for a ride to the hospital and that he only entered into the lawsuit against Abbott at the behest of her attorneys.

Briscoe said Smith attended nursing school for two years and worked occasionally as a nursing assistant for nine years.

''If anybody knew about acid, it was her,'' he said. ''If anybody here was alone with the baby, it was her. It was Shelia Smith who committed that crime, not Ricky Irby.''

Smith did not testify, although prosecutors earlier billed as a key witness.

''If she had a credible story to tell concerning the guilt of this man, she would have been here,'' Briscoe said.

BEIJING (MAY 18) UPI - Authorities are steadily beefing up security for China's first Asian Games in August, training police to deal with disturbances outside foreign embassies and barring most Chinese from traveling to the capital, the official China Youth News said Friday.

The elite Ninth Branch of the paramilitary People's Armed Police, who guard Beijing's 120 foreign missions, are undergoing rigorous indoctrination in anticipation of possible protests or violence, the newspaper reported.

''In order to prepare for any contingency that could arise during the Asian Games, the Ninth Branch Team has encouraged cadres and soldiers to think up dozens of 'What if?' questions,'' the youth daily said.

''Examples include: What if criminal elements stir up trouble outside a foreign embassy, and, what if people with an ax to grind try to distribute leaflets or make illegal speeches outside an embassy?'' it said.

The paramilitary guards also are improving their hand-to-hand combat and shooting skills and being tested on discipline, personal appearance, speech and manners, the daily said.

Chinese authorities announced this week that nonresidents of Beijing will be barred from the capital during the 11th Asian Games - the first ever in China - unless they get special permission from regional officials.

Beijing Vice Mayor Zhang Baifa told the official China Daily newspaper that the restrictions were necessary to avoid traffic congestion in the city, which expects an influx of 1 million visitors each day of the quadrennial sporting event that opens Aug. 19.

Residents of Shanghai have reported that it is increasingly difficult to obtain train tickets for travel to Beijing in the period leading up to the games.

(MAY 18) UPI - Secretary of State Baker is meeting with President Gorbachev at the Kremlin today. Before their meeting, Gorbachev said American and Soviet negotiators are getting closer to an agreement as they try to hammer out a strategic arms accord in time for the U-S-Soviet summit later this month. But American officials are expressing more caution.

Baker also will meet with Lithuanian Prime Minister Prunskiene to discuss her republic's drive for independence. Yesterday, Prunskiene met with Gorbachev and presented him with a compromise proposal suspending the implementation of the independence proclamation. Prunskiene said she hoped the one-hour meeting was ''the first step toward negotiations.''

Hungary's first freely elected president is in Washington where he'll meet with President Bush today. President Arpad Goncz says Hungary would like to do business with American firms. Goncz, who favors eventual neutrality for Hungary, says the death of communism in his country is ''final and irreversible.''

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela travels to Libya today where he'll be welcomed by Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi. Mandela's visit is part of an African tour and is being viewed as an effort by Libya to underline its support of international liberation movements. BANGKOK, THAILAND (MAY 18) UPI - Thailand handed over six smuggled diaper-clad baby orangutans to Indonesian authorities Friday for eventual return to their jungle homes.

The six orangutans, along with two siamang gibbon monkeys, were presented to Indonesian Ambassador to Thailand Gatot Suwardi in a ceremony at the Agriculture Ministry.

Pairot Suvanakorn, director-general of the Royal Forest Department, said Thai customs and forestry officials earlier this year seized the orangutans and siamangs which were smuggled into Thailand in three small bird cases on a flight from Jakarta via Singapore.

He said the animals were supposed to be transfered to another plane at Bangkok airport to Yugoslavia last February.

''Three of them (the animals) were nearly dead and the others were in weak condition,'' he said.

Pairot said Thai officials immediately took the eight animals to the Zoological Park Organization for urgent treatment.

Ambassador Suwardi said the animals will be returned to Indonesia Monday. He said officials at Tanjung Puting National Park on the island of Kalimantan will take care of the animals.

''There, the capable staff of the Orangutan Research and Conservation Project and the Indonesian Forestry Department will work together to rehabilitate these orangutans to life in the wild,'' he said.

''It will not be easy, it may take months or years, but it will be done,'' Suwardi said.

(MAY 18) UPI - Philippine officials say a twin-engine plane crashed shortly after take-off from Manila today and slammed into a house, killing all 21 people aboard and four others on the ground. A witness says the plane looked as if it were ''dragging itself'' and had smoke coming out of its right engine. It was the second plane crash in Manila during the past week.

Also today in the Philippines, police and U-S officials say masked men in a taxi fired rifle grenades at the U-S-run Thomas Jefferson Library in Manila's financial district. There were NO casualties. The attack came as Philippine and American negotiators continue meeting to decide the future of U-S bases in the Pacific nation. Discussions have been dominated by a compensation dispute.

In New York, the jury considering the fate of the accused ringleader in the Bensonhurst slaying of a black teen-ager will resume deliberations today. Keith Mondello is accused of murder for instigating the attack on 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins. Yesterday, another jury convicted the accused triggerman, Joseph Fama, of second-degree murder for his part in the slaying.

The White House says Raisa Gorbachev will accompany Barbara Bush to Wellesley College June 1st. Both first ladies will deliver commencement addresses to the graduating class. About 150 students complained about the selection of Mrs. Bush as a speaker, saying her successes are entirely based on her husband's achievements. The appearance by the two first ladies is expected to overshadow those protests.

KELSO, WA (MAY 18) UPI - A decade after Mount St. Helens blew its top, funding to study the biologic recovery of the volcanic landscape has dried up like the ash that still cakes much of the nearby countryside, said scientists who gathered Friday to mark the decennial of the deadly eruption.

''We haven't had a real grant to work with since 1983,'' said Don Zobel, a botany professor from Oregon State University who has conducted studies of ashfall on forest vegetation. ''The funding has been practically non-existent since then.''

Many of the scientists who spent a decade measuring the effects of the May 18, 1980, eruption and studying the way life has reestablished itself in the blast zone met Friday for a day-long symposium.

The meeting was one of several events commemorating the eruption that blew away the top 1,300 feet of the 9,677-foot mountain, flattened 230 square miles of forest and left 57 people dead or missing.

Nearly 60,000 acres of private timberland and national forest were replanted with trees but 110,000 acres were set aside as a national monument for scientists to study the natural recovery.

But the researchers say funding for Mount St. Helens studies today is about 10 percent of what was available in the early 1980s when scientists were receiving nearly $1 million a year.

Other issues, such as the environmental battle to save the northern spotted owl, have won budgetary favor over the volcano, said Fred Swanson, another OSU professor who worked with the U.S. Forest Service as a project leader in studying the effects of the blast.

''The thrill at Mount St. Helens may be gone but the biology is still there,'' said Swanson. ''It's true that some of the areas are now past their major changes.

''But other sites, such as the pumice plains at the base of the caldera, are just now beginning to recover some primary life forms,'' he said. ''All of these changes can help answer different ecological questions.''

Arthur McKee, a forestry researcher, said he is still tracking the recovery of the mountain but has been piggybacking his work on other research projects.

Peter Franzen, the resident scientist at the Mount St. Helens National Monument, noted that $200 million was spent on roads and tourist facilities around the mountain but funding for research ''is in a state of decline.''

''This decline comes at a time when many changes in these ecocystems are accelerating,'' he said. ''I'm convinced we're missing a tremendous opportunity.''

While the scientists discussed their work, nearby residents were planning reunions and hoping to lure tourists with weekend celebrations.

The town of Toutle, where mudflows destroyed many homes and sent people fleeing for their lives, planned a blue grass music jamboree, a parade, dancing and a loggers poetry gathering. A reunion dinner was scheduled in Kelso and Castle Rock opened a new museum.

The Army Corps of Engineers is planning to dedicate Saturday a sediment control structure on the North Fork of the Toutle River to hold back ash from a 17-mile-long volcanic deposit area. Ash sediment continues to wash down the Toutle and Cowlitz River and could clog shipping lanes in the Columbia River if it were not held back.

The structure was completed last December, one of three projects to control flooding for the next 50 years. It is an 1,800-foot-long structure with rows of 3-foot diameter pipes.

''This is a unique project, designed especially for this site and this purpose,'' said Capt. Michael J. Picard. ''We could have built a dam, which stops all water, but that wasn't needed. The structure controls, but doesn't stop, water. It stops sediment, using the stream's natural action.''

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - In the midst of efforts to nail down a successful superpower summit, President Bush was poised Friday for a work-and-play weekend cross-country pursuit of megabucks for the Republican Party.

Politics and golf were on the agenda for a four-day swing through three states where GOP hopes run high for the fall elections and where Bush was expected to help pump more than $2 million into Republican campaign coffers.

Before hitting the road, Bush declined to comment on reports of possible progress on arms control and other summit priorities during meetings in Moscow between Secretary of State James Baker and top Soviet officials.

With Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev due to arrive May 30 for a summit both had hoped to see showcase cuts in strategic, conventional and chemical weapons, the pressure was on to overcome nagging problems exacerbated by what U.S. officials criticized as recent Soviet backsliding.

Administration officials remained guarded in their assessments of the Moscow talks and forecasts of whether the appearance of conciliatory moves in the conflict over Lithuania will remove potential irritants from the summit.

Bush acknowledged Wednesday that the Soviet coercion of Lithuania had ''certainly put some tension'' into preparations for the summit, but held to the official U.S. line that the meeting with Gorbachev would at least serve as evidence that U.S.-Soviet relations had entered a new phase where even disagreements can be aired without rancor.

The first leg of his political trip took Bush home to Texas, where he labored in the fields for the GOP in the 1960s and where the comments of colorful Clayton Williams have injected extra spice into a hot campaign for governor.

Williams stirred no small amount of controversy by comparing rape to bad weather - ''If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it,'' he quipped - and admitting that he frequented prostitutes while growing up in West Texas.

The wisecracking Williams is locked in a hard-fought battle with Democratic State Treasurer Ann Richards, who has been on the political defensive herself over a refusal to say whether she used illegal drugs.

GOP State Chairman Fred Meyer estimated the dinner in Dallas could bring in up to $1.5 million and suggested the stakes were high. With Republicans within reach of solid gains this fall, he said, ''This dinner had better be good.''

Bush, who got the campaign season off to an early start this year, will stump Monday for Dave Frohnmayer, the Republican candidate for governor in Oregon, and stop in California, the No. 1 GOP target for the fall, for a big-money fund-raiser at the home of industrialist David Murdock.

In between, the ever-active 65-year-old chief executive was slated to drop in on the headquarters of the 1990 Economic Summit in Houston, hit the PGA Seniors golf tour, deliver a commencement address at the University of Texas and dispense awards for voluntarism.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (MAY 18) UPI - Police searched Friday for suspects who planted a car bomb that exploded in the Carribean resort city of Cartagena wounding 38 people, including two French tourists.

The car bomb Thursday was the fourth in four days. Three car bombs May 13 in the cities of Bogota and Cali killed 27 people and wounded more than 100 others.

Police have blamed the bombs on the warring Medellin cocaine cartel. Another car bomb contained 660 pounds was defused by police Thursday in Bogota.

''We have been the victim of terrorism,'' Cartagena Mayor Manuel Rojas told a Bogota radio station. ''The tranquility has been interrupted by bands of criminals that want to create chaos in the city.''

A false alarm of a car bomb in Bogota created panic Friday in buildings housing the Colombian secret police known as the Department of Administrative Security, the Bogota Department of Transportation and courts.

Several hundred people poured into the streets and fled the area as a bomb squad searched a car that had been left in the area, officials said. The car did not contain dynamite.

''There was a moment in which there was spontaneous panic in the three buildings because of the alarm that a bomb had been planted,'' said Rubiel Valencia, head of the Bogota Department of Transportation.

A truck loaded with 1,100 pounds of dynamite exploded Dec. 6, 1989, in front of the secret police headquarters, killing nearly 60 people.

Callers to Medellin radio stations claimed the bomb was the work of the cartel, which police say is responsible for dozens of attacks.

The car, loaded with some 220 pounds, exploded at 6:28 p.m. in a tourist hotel district of Cartagena, 415 miles north north of Bogota.

The vehicle located next to a shopping center wounded 38 people, including four people seriously wounded in the explosion, Rojas said.

''Fortunately it did not produce any deaths,'' the mayor told a Bogota radio station.

Two French tourists, a woman identified as Lorenzana Vivier, 47, and her 14-year-old son, Eric, were among the injured, the newspaper El Espectador reported.

''The information we have presumes the great majority (of the wounded) were residents of Cartagena, not tourists,'' Rojas said.

Some 55 to 60 businesses and hoteles were damaged in the explosion, the mayor said.

''I saw a man get out of an automobile and take off immediately. Afterwards, the explosion was heard,'' witness Jorge Mendoza said. ''I was deaf for a moment but I got better right away and I saw a big column of smoke.''

Rojas said the explosion would likely seriously affect the flow of international tourists to the city that already has suffered huge business losses because the nation's war on cocaine traffickers has caused a dramatic drop in tourism.

Cartagena was the site of a Feb. 15, 1990, anti-drug summit between President Virgilio Barco, President Bush and their counterparts from Peru and Bolivia.

At least 17 car bombs have exploded in Colombia since the Aug. 24, 1989, declaration of war by The Extraditables, a hit squad controlled by the Medellin Cartel. Police say at least 400 people have died in the explosions and other attacks.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The Office of Thrift Supervision declin to confirm that it has joined the ranks of agencies investigating the junk bond ties between Columbia Savings and Loan Association and bankrupt Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Columbia, a beleaguered Beverly Hills, Calif., thrift, initially disclosed the investigation in its first-quarter report to the OTS.

''We don't discuss any investigations at all,'' said Tom Mason, an OTS spokesman.

According to Columbia's quarterly report, the investigation began late last year but only recently came to the thrift's attention. The Securities and Exchange Commission and the U.S. Attorney's office in Manhattan also are examining the ties between Columbia and Drexel.

Drexel, once the nation's leading dealer in junk bonds - high-risk securities that promise high returns - declared bankruptcy earlier this year.

Columbia also said depositors have withdrawn $243.3 million since it declared a substantial 1989 loss last month. The thrift said its April deposit outflow, when conbined with all first-quarter withdrawals, dwindled its $2.8 billion retail deposit base by about 16 percent.

The withdrawals followed Columbia's announcement of a $591.1 million loss last year and a first-quarter loss of $293.3 million. The loss was attributed to Columbia's $2.9 billion junk bond portfolio, which has shrunk in value by about $1 billion.

Columbia also said it is omitting its semi-annual payment on $38.8 billion in subordinated debt.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Rates on 30-year fixed mortgages fell to 10.37 from 10.54 and adjustable-rate morgages dipped to 8.56 percent from 8.63 during the week, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Friday.

The fixed-rate average is for a 30-year loan covering 80 percent of a home's cost. The average adjustable-rate mortgage also is for 30 years, but for 75 percent of the home price.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - House and Senate negotiators failed Friday to agree on a long-awaited spending bill granting $720 million in emergency aid for Panama and Nicaragua, adding to delays that have prompted anger at the White House.

President Bush requested the foreign aid months ago, and he stepped up his campaign for the money this week with a public call for the Congress to delay its planned Memorial Day holiday if the bill is not finished.

Members of a conference working out the differences between the House and Senate supplemental spending bills have agreed on all new spending in the legislation. They were to complete their agreement Friday by specifying the defense cuts that will offset the non-mandatory spending in the bill.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, said the conferees had reached ''a conclusion'' on defense cuts. But he said ''as a matter of courtesy'' they would discuss the cuts with leaders of congressional defense committees before disclosing them.

Inouye said the defense cuts would be made public Monday. Rep. John Murtha D-Pa., chairman of the House Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, said the cuts totaled $1.7 billion. He declined to provide specifics, but complained that some cuts would reduce U.S. combat readiness.

The $420 million for Panama and $300 million for Nicaragua is contained in both the House and Senate bills. The House bill provided $2.4 billion in new spending, the Senate's provided $3.7 billion, and hundreds of millions more has been added in conference.

Bush has complained that Congress has gone overboard in adding domestic spending. But Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., leader of the Senate negotiators, said many of the additions were made in response to administration requests.

Once the conference committeee completes its work, the bill must go back to both the House and Senate for final passage before being sent to Bush.

However, for Bush to spend the money, Congress must pass a separate authorization bill, which has created another obstacle to the aid.

House Democrats, angered by the killings of six Jesuit priests by government troops in El Salvador, added a provision to the authorization bill cutting in half military aid to that country in 1990 and 1991.

The Bush administration opposes the Democratic proposal, and a floor fight next week in the House could be expected if behind-the-scenes talks to reach a compromise on the issue are not successful. The House is tentatively scheduled to consider the authorization bill Tuesday.

OAKLAND, CA (MAY 18) UPI - About 200 women students rallied at Mills College Friday, claiming their two-week strike against coeducation has been a success and saying they expect the board of trustees to reverse its decision to admit men.

''It's just a matter of time before they reverse it,'' Amy Hutto, 26, a student protest leader, said as Mills' 33 trustees met at a secret site to consider the future of the financially ailing 138-year-old women's college the oldest on the West Coast.

''We have taken over here. It doesn't matter if it's not today. We'll just hang on until they figure out we're not going to give up,'' she said.

The students on Thursday ended their protest - a blockade of administration buildings that interfered with campus operations and a boycott that wiped out five days of classes - as a gesture ''of good faith'' to the trustees.

''We are victorious,'' Anna Stravato, another student leader, declared.

''We have made our point. ... This strike is a dam stemming the tide of closings of women's colleges across the country.''

Trustees voted on May 3 to turn Mills coeducational beginning in the fall of 1991, but began backing away from the decision after upset students and alumnae objected.

The trustees promised to reconsider their decision if presented with a plan that would ensure Mills' economic survival as an all-women's college.

Representatives of students, faculty, staff and alumnae on Thursday presented proposals to the board's executive committee on specific ways each group could help with recruitment and cost-cutting.

The proposed solutions ranged from promoting Mills at high schools to increasing faculty course loads and class sizes and raising the amount and number of alumnae donations.

Trustees decided to add men to the student body because efforts to raise the school's enrollment of women to 1,000 had failed. The current undergraduate enrollment is 777.

The problem, trustees said, was attracting more qualified women at a time when the number of high school graduates is shrinking and interest in single-sex education is waning.

In six days of intensive telephone campaigning, more than $3 million in five-year pledges was raised. Many alumni threatened to withhold future contributions if Mills went coed.

The controversy at Mills focused attention on the diminishing number of U.S. women's colleges. More than two-thirds of the 300 women's colleges in existence 20 years ago have turned coeducational, merged or closed.

HANOI, VIETNAM (MAY 18) UPI - Communist Party leader Nguyen Van Linh marked the 100th anniversary Friday of the birth of the nation's communist founder, Ho Chi Minh, by reaffirming the party's commitment to socialism and accusing ''imperialist forces'' of trying to undermine it.

Linh's speech came amid a wave of detentions of foreign travelers and domestic dissidents by Vietnamese officials apparently worried over threats to the country's socialist government.

''We continue to adhere perseveringly to uphold the banner of Marxism-Leninism (which) has taken the revolution of our country from victory to victory,'' he told senior officials in the 700-seat National Assembly hall commemorating the 100th anniversary of Ho Chi Minh's birth.

Linh said the party would continue with its economic reforms while allowing limited political reforms. However, he warned if political reform is introduced too quickly, it could cause ''chaos.''

Reform, he said, was ''vital for the country to come out of its crisis and advance further,'' but it should be done gradually.

Linh accused outside forces of trying to disrupt Vietnam's socialist system and warned dissidents against ''democratic extremism.'' ''Our enemies wish nothing more than internal disorder that would spread beyond our control in the hope of causing the renewal process to stray away from socialism,'' the party general secretary said.

''Imperialist forces have been thoroughly exploiting the difficulties of the socialist countries in order to step up their interference and sabotage, and carry out peaceful subversion in the aim of wiping out the socialist countries,'' he said.

The three-hour commemoration in Hanoi also addressed by Nicholaievich Zaikov, a secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, Cambodian Communist Party leader Heng Samrin and Lao leader Kayson Phomvihan.

But it was Linh who took the toughest line against rapid political change.

He admitted the main economic problems facing the state include unemployment, inflation, finance and banking difficultie and price controls.

Linh has earlier cited sharp drops in industrial production. In Ho Chi Minh City, the country's main industrial area, production was down 13.2 percent in April, leading to the layoff of 26,700 workers this month. In Hanoi, 16,000 workers lost their jobs, he said, and other localities had similar problems.

Linh warned against bribery, corruption and special privileges in the party, quoting Ho Chi Minh's ideal ''the party must be kept truly wholesome.''

''We must bring to trial major negative cases and inform the public of the outcome,'' he said.

Diplomatic sources said Linh is battling hard-line conservatives and more eager reformers in formulating party policy for next year's seventh party congress.

Internal disputes over the pace of liberal reforms on top of security fears have touched off security actions against Catholic priests, intellectuals, potential dissidents, businessmen and foreign travelers over the past month.

In Bangkok, Thailand, travelers and diplomats told of the recent arrests in Vietnam of dozens of foreign visitors and potential Vietnamese dissidents. The foreigners are believed to have been released, but many Vietnamese are still being held, they said.

''I think they (Vietnamese) are really scared of some kind of U.S. effort to overthrow the system,'' said Michael Morrow, a U.S. publisher and business consultant released this week after three weeks of interrogation by Vietnamese security agents.

''My interrogators said this included Contra-style military infiltration plus efforts to create an uprising against the party,'' Morrow said in Bangkok.

The actions have contrasted to declarations of ''Visit Vietnam Year'' to develop Vietnam's tiny tourist industry amid Ho Chi Minh's birth anniversary.

An American traveler in northern Vietnam said he was arrested and expelled for trying to bicycle without permission to Dien Bien Phu, site of the historic Communist victory over the French colonialist army.

A Thai archeologist who requested anonymity said she was detained five days for staying with Vietnamese friends and visiting a central Vietnamese city without permission.

''They wanted the name of every Vietnamese I spoke to and what we spoke about,'' she said. ''When I was released they said I had been associating with people who are hurting Vietnam.''

ORLANDO, FL (MAY 18) UPI - The president of the new Braniff International Airlines Inc. has been arrested on a 1988 warrant charging him with failing to return a rental car.

Scot M. Spencer, 25, was arrested Thursday on a Hillsborough County warrant while he was at an auction of equipment owned by Braniff Inc., the bankrupt predecessor of the company he now heads.

Spencer, who faces the third-degree felony charge of failure to redeliver a hired vehicle, immediately posted on a $1,000 bond. He was freed from the Orange County Jail Thursday, records showed.

He was at the sale as a bidder for the new Braniff, based at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, when he was led away by Orange County officers. Spencer was on his way back to Dallas and was unavailable for comment Friday, his assistant said.

Spencer was arrested for failing to return a rental car in Hillsborough County in April 1988. Hillsborough County Sgt. Rod Van Trump said the car was eventually returned. He has a history of writing bad checks and was placed on probation for theft by deception after pleading guilty in Westfield, N.J.

Spencer worked as a consultant to BIA-COR Holdings Inc., the holding company of bankrupt Braniff, but resigned in October amid allegations of his criminal wrongdoing. His resignation came less than a month after Braniff filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in Orlando on Sept. 28.

He was recently named president of the new Braniff, a much smaller airline expected to begin service to seven cities this summer. Its chairman is Jeffrey Chodorow, a close associate of Spencer.

Chodorow, a Philadelphia developer, was one of the old Braniff's major stockholders and last month bought its trademark and flight certificates to launch the new company.

SPRINGFIELD, IL (MAY 18) UPI - All Illinois newspapers regardless of size would have to be printed on 28 percent recycled newsprint by 1993 or face mandatory state recycling standards under legislation approved Friday by the Illinois House.

The legislation, drafted by a House task force on newspaper recycling that is trying to revive the newspaper recycling industry by providing new markets for recycled paper, moves to the state Senate.

The two bills would require all Illinois dailies and weeklies - and out-of-state newspapers with an average daily Illinois circulation of more than 40,000 - would voluntarily increase the percentage of recycled fibers in their newsprint over the next three years.

Beginning next January, at least 22 percent of the newsprint would have to consist of recycled fiber. The target would rise to 25 percent by 1992 and 28 percent by 1993.

Rep. Bill Edley, D-Macomb, sponsor of the recycling plan, said the voluntary target would become mandatory in 1994. Newspapers falling short of the goal would face a $1,000 fine.

''We want the recycled fiber to be at a 28 percent level statewide by 1993 '' said Edley, who said Wisconsin, Missouri and other states have newsprint recycling standards.

Edley said when the standards become mandatory, newspapers would have to tell the state Energy and Natural Resources Department how much recycled fiber they used each year. Publishers who knowingly furnish false information to escape the mandatory provisions would be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by up to 30 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Newspapers could escape the targets if they prove the recycled paper was more expensive than virgin newsprint, was not available in quantity or did not meet quality standards set by the state.

The task force drafted the bills with help from the Illinois Press Association, which took a neutral position on the measures but objects to the penalties.

SANTO DOMINGO, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC (MAY 18) UPI - President Joaquin Balaguer, 82, held a narrow lead in election vote-counting Friday, but rival octagenarian Juan Bosch claimed fraud and urged supporters to take to the streets.

With 79 percent of polling stations reporting, the Central Election Board said Balaguer - a five-term incumbent who is blind - held a narrow lead over Bosch, a Marxist former president.

In balloting monitored by former President Jimmy Carter and other international observers, the board said Balaguer led with 516,938 votes to Bosch's 507,663 with 1.5 million votes counted, or 34.9 percent to 34.2 percent.

Jose Francisco Pena Gomez of the Dominican Revolutionary Party had 343,197 votes, or 23 percent, and Jacobo Majluta of the Independent Revolutionary Party 99,721 votes, or 6 percent. Four other candidates also ran in the presidential election.

''We announce that the PLD is going to come out on the streets for the people who have been defrauded by the Central Electoral Board and by Dr. Balaguer,'' said Bosch, the 80-year-old leader of the Dominican Liberation Party.

''Whatever life I have left will be no use if I accept this fraud,'' Bosch said at an earlier news conference.

''If there is violence, they will have provoked it,'' he said. ''Yes sir, there will be confrontations and in those confrontations whoever's turn it is to die, will die.''

The capital and other towns were reported calm Friday morning. Demonstrations are banned until after the vote counting is finished.

While the board had not declared a victor, Vice President Carlos Morales Troncoso declared Balaguer the winner Thursday. Morales said that according to his own count, Balaguer garnered 36 percent of votes from two-thirds of the Caribbean island nation's polling stations.

''We can assure (you) that the Social Christian Reformist Party is the winner of the elections,'' Morales told reporters at a news conference.

Bosch, favored to win in pre-election surveys, said a ''colossal fraud'' had been committed in the official vote count. Bosch's party gave its own version of results and claimed he had beaten Balaguer by more than 30,000 votes.

More than 100 Bosch supporters gathered outside his house Thursday afternoon, although no violence was reported. Pre-election violence earlier in the week left one person dead and several hurt.

Carter, who visited about 40 voting booths Wednesday and was present at the official count, said he had not seen evidence of fraud.

''Any responsible person or representative who can present any evidence that there was fraud, please, present it to us. We will examine it carefully and reach a decision and make any corresponding denunciation,'' said Carter.

Carter, in apparent reference to Bosch, said it would be irresponsible of any leader to make a call to violence.

''My belief is that any party that invites its followers to go out on the street shows the party would not be willing to accept the results of an election and accept the democratic process,'' Carter said.

Dominicans also voted for national legislators and local officials. The election suffered from some irregularities, including a shortage of ballots and late openings at some polling places.

Balaguer, 82, said he would seek to increase productivity and take other economic measures to rein in inflation and address a shortage of imported goods, including medicines, rice and milk.

Bosch, 80, was president from 1962 to 1963 until he was ousted by the military. He has called for the industrialization of the nation, which shares the Caribbean island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

Left-wing forces loyal to Bosch fought against the military in 1965, prompting the United States to send in Marines to stop Bosch from taking power.

Bosch, who has described himself as ''a Marxist but not a Leninist,'' has spent many years in exile, including 19 years in Cuba. Despite his socialist background, he has said he would sell off some state-owned industries to boost public funds if he was elected.

A lawyer and poet, the bachelor Balaguer projects an enigmatic, austere image with his thick glasses, baggy suits and fedora hats. He has never married, a situation which provokes frequent comment in the Catholic country.

NAIROBI, KENYA (MAY 18) UPI - One year after Kenya declared a war on elephant poachers with a public burning of ivory, the threat from poachers continues to hurt tourism, delegates to a tourist conference said Friday.

"The importance of the (tourist) industry to the economy cannot be overemphasized," vice president and finance minister George Saitoti told the country's 1990 National Tourism Seminar.

He said tourism, which overtook coffee and tea exports as the leading foreign exchange earner two years ago and earned Kenya $734 million in 1989, has suffered because of tourist fears about security and health. "Although there have been remarkable growth and economic achievements, the industry has not been void of serious problems," Saitoti said.

Last summer, the United States advised its citizens against travelling to Kenya after two Americans were killed in an attack on a tourist bus. It has not rescinded the advice, despite high-level appeals. Nor is it likely to, diplomats said, until Kenya offers proof of a decline in crimes against tourists.

Kenya's Indian Ocean coast, meanwhile, has lost European tourists after a series of health scares about cerebral malaria, AIDS, and even cholera. The death last year of an Italian diplomat from malaria sharply reduced the large number of Italian tourists who normally visit the coast. Exact figures were not available.

Saitoti said his government was committed to boosting tourism, however. "In recognition of tourism"s important role in the economy, the government of Kenya has pursued policies directed at maintaining a high level of growth," he said, pointing to new legislation aimed at security, the protection of wildlife, prevention of foreign exchange leakage and increasing incentives to investors both domestic and foreign.

Kenya plans to attract 1.1 million tourists to visit its game parks and coastal resorts by 1993, Saitoti said. This year, the government projects 890,000 people will visit the country.

(MAY 18) UPI - Leaders of East and West Germany signed an accord that paves the way for German unification. Speaking in Bonn, West German Chancellor Kohl hailed the pact as ''the birth of the free and unified Germany.'' He also praised East Germans for what he called a ''peaceful revolution,'' which ended 40 years of Communist Party rule last fall. The draft treaty for economic, currency and social union is subject to ratification by the two German parliaments.

U-S and Soviet negotiators are reported to be ''moving closer'' on issues crucial to the success of the upcoming Superpower summit in Washington. Talks between U-S Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze hit a few snags yesterday, including arms control and Lithuanian independence. But a U-S official says the ''gaps are bridgeable.''

Hungary's first freely elected president in more than 40 years is in Washington, D-C, where he'll meet with President Bush at the White House. (MAY 18) UPI - Jurors in the trial of three Swiss Franc traders today will likely begin hearing tapes recorded by an F-B-I agent who infiltrated the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. It is the second day of testimony by undercover F-B-I agent Randall Jannett... the government's key witness in the racketeering and fraud trial of traders Robert Mosky, Danny Scheck and David Zatz.

After 11 days of deliberation, the jury has convicted the accused triggerman in New York's Bensonhurst racial killing trial. 19-year-old Joseph Fama was convicted of second-degree murder for shooting a black teen-ager during a white mob attack last year. Fama's lawyer says he'll appeal the ruling on the grounds that the presiding judge favored prosecutors. Fama faces 25 years to life in prison.

CHICAGO (MAY 18) UPI - Predictions by some private weather forecasters of drier weather early next week pressured the grain market Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Grain futures were lower and soybeans were sharply lower at the final bell.

Widespread rain was expected during the weekend for the entire Grain Belt, but the return of favorable conditions early in the week could allow farmers to complete their corn and soybean planting.

New-crop corn and beans tested their recent lows in active trading. The lack of export business contributed to the weakness.

Higher prices for soybeans and meal in Rotterdam kept a floor under the soybean complex.

Wheat was at or near session lows, partly on sympathy with losses on the rest of the floor. Commission houses were featured sellers of wheat.

Country movement was light.

At the close, corn was off 2 1/2 to 4 1/2, soybeans down 7 to 12, wheat off 2 3/4 to 4 1/2 and oats down 5 1/2 to 7 1/4 cents.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - NASA engineers focused the Hubble Space Telescope Friday in preparation for taking the observatory's first picture possibly as soon as Sunday.

As the telescope orbited 381 miles above Earth, engineers at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., proceeded with a 36 1/2-hour process that began at 10 p.m. Thursday of locating and locking onto stars to focus the telescope's mirrors.

''During the data takes, the telescope did not maintain locks onto its guide stars; operators are awaiting data to determine exactly why the guide stars were not acquired,'' a NASA statement said.

''However, the objective of the test, the acquisition of target stars, was highly successful,'' it said.

Engineers also completed other routine tests on the 12-ton, $1.5 billion telescope, including power checks on one instrument called the Goddard

High Resolution Spectrograph, the statement said.

If all goes well, the telescope's wide field planetary camera could take the telescope's first picture Sunday, probably in the afternoon, officials said.

The subject of the picture will be a 3 billion-year-old star cluster known as NGC 3532, located about 1,500 light years from Earth in the constellation Carina. A light year is about 5.8 trillion miles.

The first picture is intended as a test and is not expected to yield any discoveries.

Ferried into space by the shuttle Discovery, the telescope is expected to revolutionize astronomy by studying stars, galaxies and planets in greater detail then ever before during its 15-year mission.

Officials had hoped to take the first picture about a week after the telescope was deployed April 25. But a series of problems put the careful work of turning on and adjusting the telescope about 10 days behind schedule.

Most of the glitches have been solved, but analysts are still trying to fix three problems, including a vibration that occurs whenever the telescope goes into or out of sunlight. The calibration will take eight months to complete.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Portions of Oliver North's diaries released Friday reinforced questions about when George Bush knew the United States was trading arms to Iran for hostages.

They also suggest the government may have tried to get Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega to help the Nicaraguan Contra rebels even after reports of drug running by the military strongman.

However, the 1,209 pages of North's diaries - obtained under a court order by a private group studying the Iran-Contra scandal - were often only cryptic notes, making it impossible to determine exactly what most of the entries mean.

The group, the National Security Archive, last week obtained and released about 1,400 pages of North's diaries. It obtained the new pages Thursday night and said about 40 percent of the information was blacked out by the government for security reasons. The group also estimated that another 200 pages of North diaries are still being withheld.

North, one-time aide in Ronald Reagan's National Security Council, was at the center of the Iran-Contra scandal, helping to ship arms to Iran in exchange for American hostages and arranging covert aid for the Nicaraguan Contras after Congress had banned formal U.S. help to the rebels.

Included among the pages released Friday were several references to Bush, who was then Reagan's vice president.

One was from a White House meeting held May 29, 1986, two days after former national security adviser Robert McFarlane completed an unsuccessful trip to Iran where McFarlane discussed arms shipments and the release of hostages. In attendance, according to North, were Reagan, Bush, White House chief of staff Donald Regan and McFarlane's replacement at the NSC, John Poindexter.

A North note from the session said: ''No further meetings until hostages come out.''

Malcolm Byrne of the National Security Archive conceded that no firm conclusion could be drawn from the notation, but added it ''suggests that Bush was much closer to the loop'' than he has disclosed.

''It suggests that Bush knew earlier that this could be arms for hostages '' Byrne said.

Bush has said he was ''out of the loop'' concerning the events that generate the Iran-Contra scandal and did not realize the United States was trading arms for hostages until after the affair became public in late November 1986.

Another reference to Bush was from Nov. 25, 1986, when the Iran-Contra scandal was exploding into public view. Under a heading that indicated a call from Poindexter, North noted: ''VP call Peres'' - a likely reference Bush and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres. There was no other explanation of the notation.

Other notes released Friday were of a Sept. 22, 1986, meeting North held in London with Noriega. The meeting has been known, although specific details of the discussions have not been revealed.

Some notes released Friday suggested North was authorized by other government officials to talk with Noriega about ''cleaning up (his) image.'' The meeting took place, the group said, after published reports linked Noriega to drug running.

North's notes of the London meeting, the group said, show discussions about commando activities and the Contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

Other notes made public suggested that Elliot Abrams, who was the State Department's top official for Central America, may have known more about secret efforts to help the Contras than he has testified.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MAY 18) UPI - JCPenney Co.'s strategy of targeting middle- to middle-upper income shoppers by offering affordable, quality merchandise will lead to consistent growth during the 1990s, Chairman William R. Howell said Friday.

"The challenge is to continually move up with the taste level America wants," he said after addressing shareholders at the Dallas-based retailer's annual meeting.

Howell said JCPenney, with more than 100 million square feet of mall space and plans to open 50 stores this year, is positioned well to serve mid- to upper- income mall shoppers. Shoppers in this group buy about 60 percent of all department store merchandise, the company said.

Penney's long-term prospects are bright, he said, because the company has not shifted from one marketing strategy to another and is attuned to consumers. "It's (retailing) not a one-time event," he said. "It's a continuum, a walk through life with customers."

Since 1983, the company has focused on sales of apparel and home fashions at its stores after discontinuing lines of hard goods such as home electronics and photographic equipment that had brought in $1.5 billion in sales annually. The JCPenney catalog offers hard good products. Last year, Penney reported sales of $15.1 billion from its stores and catalog operations.

Howell told shareholders Friday that Penney's annual rate of return averaged more than 23 percent during the 1980s. Return on equity has doubled in the last five years. He said improved margins at JCPenney stores during the quarter were offset by lower margins for catalog merchandise and drug store operations.

On a related topic, Howell said consumers apparently have not forsaken trips to the mall or shopping by catalog to use television shopping services.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The Soyuz capsule docked to the Soviet Mir space station was damaged during launch, leaving the station's two-man crew without a reliable escape vehicle in case of an emergency, an aerospace magazine reported Friday.

Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine reported in its May 21 issue that cosmonauts Anatoly Solovyev and Alexander Balandin plan to conduct an emergency spacewalk early next month to attempt repairs.

But until then, the magazine said, the space fliers are without a reliable landing vehicle in case of a major problem with Mir that might require an emergency return to Earth.

Cosmonaut Alexander Serebrov, who recently returned to Earth from Mir, told Aviation Week the Soyuz TM-9 capsule that carried Solovyev and Balandin into orbit Feb. 11 apparently was damaged when three large insulating blankets were torn out of place.

The out-of-place ''thermal blankets'' are blocking critical sensors needed to properly position the Soyuz for re-entry and making it difficult to keep the capsule warm.

''Soviet engineers are concerned that condensation in the spacecraft's circuits could cause an electrical malfunction during a re-entry,'' Aviation Week said.

To keep the lander as warm as possible until repairs can be made, the entire 109-foot-long Mir complex has been reoriented so increase the amount of time the Soyuz is in direct sunlight.

Serebrov returned to Earth Feb. 19 aboard the Soyuz TM-8 capsule and as he departed the Mir space station, the cosmonaut took revealing pictures of Soyuz TM-9 that showed three large thermal blankets ''have been ripped upward from their bottom attach points and are floating nearly perpendicular to the side of the descent module,'' Aviation Week said.

To repair the damage, Solovyev and Balandin plan to erect a 20-foot space ''ladder'' between the Mir complex and the damaged Soyuz that will allow them to make their way to the stricken craft.

The ladder is expected to be launched to Mir June 1 aboard an unmanned rocket ferrying a new space station module into orbit.

''Ground controllers have been studying whether the crew should cut away the damaged blankets or reattach them to the side of the spacecraft,'' Aviation Week reported.

Cutting away the damaged blankets would prevent any sensor blockage but it would worsen the temperature problem. Reattaching the blankets, however, is a more difficult task to accomplish.

Problems with re-entry sensors in 1988 forced the two-man crew of the Soyuz TM-5 capsule to remain in orbit a day longer than planned.

MADRID (MAY 18) UPI - The Spanish government granted temporary asylum to Amparo Depestre, 29, a member of the famed Cuban dance troupe Tropicana, officials said Friday.

She asked for asylum when Cuban Embassy officials here ordered her back to Cuba.

Depestre, an assistant manager of the troupe who is five months pregnant, said she was told by the embassy that, as a Cuban, she was required to give birth to the baby she is expecting in Cuba and should go home.

Depestre said it was the high-handed action of the Cuban Embassy and of the directors of ARTEX, a Spanish firm that is managing Tropicana's tour here, that made her decide to stay in Spain.

''I have nothing against Cubans,'' she said at a news conference Thursday. ''Cubans are fantastic people.''

Depestre said she was pregnant by and married to a Spanish physician, though she said she no longer lived with him.

Police here on Thursday detained two Spanish employees of Artex, Juan Claramunt and Angel Enriique Valencia, in connection with the handling of Tropicana's earnings, after a complaint by a Spanish woman who alleged they had swindled her out of about $50,000.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The Energy Department, ending some 40 years of secrecy, said Friday it will release medical records detailing the health impact of low-level radiation on workers at the government's nuclear weapons plants.

In an agreement with lawyers representing independent radiation health researchers, the department promised to disclose data on radiation exposure and cancer rates among 200,000 current and former workers at federal nuclear facilities dating back to the invention of the atomic bomb in the 1940s.

The agreement is intended to carry out recommendations by an independent panel of medical experts convened by Energy Secretary James Watkins to evaluate the department's handling of the worker health data.

The panel criticized the department's longtime refusal to allow independent researchers to review the data and called for the greatest disclosure possible. It said the department's recalcitrance raised concerns about the credibility of the government's radiation health research program.

Independent researchers have accused government scientists of manipulating or covering up data to minimize the health risks posed by low-level radiation exposure.

The critics charge the Energy Department, as the operator of the government's nuclear weapons plants, has a vested interest in discrediting any evidence that its workers face greater-than-admitted health threats on the job.

The controversy over the worker health data has escalated following recent revelations that the department for decades covered up massive environmental releases of radioactive and toxic substances from its 17 major nuclear weapons facilities in 12 states.

The department has denied misrepresenting the worker health data, but refused to allow to independent researchers to conduct their own analyses. Until Watkins took office last year, department officials said worker medical records could not be opened up because of privacy and confidentiality concerns.

In announcing the agreement to release the records, department officials expressed hope the new disclosure policy would help restore public trust in the department.

''I believe that making this data available to these independent researchers will enhance the credibility of the department's own epidemiologic program,'' said John Tuck, under secretary of the Energy Department.

Independent researchers say the worker health records are sure to shed new light on the health risks of low-level radiation and could raise questions about the adequacy of federal regulations setting radiation exposure limits for nuclear industry workers.

The medical records are unique in that they track the development of cancer and other illnesses in a large, statistically significant population that were exposed to small amounts of radiation over long periods of time.

In contrast, virtually all the long-term radiation health studies done to date are based on medical data involving Japanese who survived the dropping of atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki during World War II, which released big, one-time pulses of radiation.

Those studies have been subject to uncertainty and differing analyses. Most recently, the National Academy of Sciences released a report last December that said new medical information on the atomic bomb survivors indicated the health risks of radiation exposure were three to four times higher than currently believed.

Some independent researchers question whether the studies on atomic bomb survivors can accurately determine safe radiation exposure levels for nuclear industry workers.

The department reached its disclosure agreement with the Three Mile Island Public Health Fund, a Philaldelphia group set up under court order following litigation over the 1979 Three Mile Island nuclear plant accident in Pennsylvania. The group is supposed to conduct research on the health effects of low-level radiation and has been seeking the worker records since 1987.

Under the agreement, the department will release data on workers at Hanford, the Rocky Flats plant in Colorado, Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, Fernald plant and Mound Laboratory in Ohio, Pantex facility in Texas, Oak Ridge plant in Tennessee, Savannah River Plant in South Carolina and the Mallinchrodt facility in Missouri. It said records at other plants still had to be compiled.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (MAY 18) UPI - The pro-democracy coalition that led last November's velvet revolution Friday accused members of the former secret police of preparing a major disinformation campaign to disrupt next month's elections.

As the campaign for the June 8 and 9 parliamentary elections heated up, four other leading political parties called for Communist Party members to withdraw from the campaign or be banned.

Jan Urban, chairman of Civic Forum, the pro-democracy coalition, said dozens of members of the StB, the former secret police, had been fired from the Interior Ministry in the past 48 hours. Urban suggested they were part of an extensive disinformation campaign organized by ex-StB members and aimed at smearing Czechoslovakia's political parties and disrupting the June elections.

''There is a disinformation campaign planned with the aim not only to discredit the heads of all political parties but also to destabilize the situation in the state and discredit the trustworthiness of the government and the state which will come out of the elections,'' Urban said.

''We are not willing to be actors in a play directed by others,'' he added explaining that Civic Forum and several other parties have agreed not to comment on any accusations that could be part of the disinformation campaign.

Asked if the Communist Party was behind the campaign, Urban said: ''The leadership of the Communist Party is not responsible for everything its members do.''

Urban said the disinformation campaign may try to discredit the Charter 77 human rights movement as well as stir up trouble between Czechs and Slovaks with false information about economic disparity between the two republics.

He said the campaign may also try to paint older Civic Forum members as collaborators with the Gestapo, the Nazi secret police.

Urban said more members of the former StB would be fired from the Interior Ministry in the coming weeks, as the ministry is purged of people loyal to the previous totalitarian regime.

An Interior Ministry spokesman, who identified himself only as Mr Havel, confirmed that tens of StB men had been let go in the past two days.

Most of the major political parties have agreed to vet the StB files of their own candidates, and Urban said it was likely that the files had been tampered with, and could lead to more disinformation.

He said Civic Forum had learned that until at least the middle of last November, copies of nearly every StB document were sent to the KGB in Moscow, and that every StB department had a Soviet liaison officer. Urban said the liaison officers had all been ''neutralized,'' but some were still in the Soviet Embassy in Prague on diplomatic passports.

But Urban he said it was unlikely foreign sources were behind the disinformation campaign.

On Monday, the top leadership of the People's Party was accused of being secret police informers, according to a story in the Austrian news weekly Profil. The party has denied the charge.

Urban said the major non-Communist parties had agreed to stand together and not reply to the disinformation campaign.

Warning Czechoslovak and foreign journalists that much fabricated ''evidence'' of disinformation may be floating about, Urban said: ''I'd like to appeal to journalists to use their heads more than their desire for a front page story."

The parties accused the Communists of ''aiming to seize power anew,'' and said its activities were ''endangering Czechoslvakia's fragile democracy.'' The statement was made by the People's Party, the Social Democrats, the Socialist Party and the Slovak Democratic Party, all trailing Civic Forum in the polls.

In a front-page reply Friday to calls for their banning, the Communist Party daily Rude Pravo called the statement a ''cheap'' pre-election trick.

''The rebirth of the Communist Party into a legitimate political force of the left is a long and painful process for many of its members,'' Rude Pravo said, before going on to accuse its opponents of collaborating with the previous totalitarian communist regime.

''Even the Socialist Party and the People's Party for four decades were part of the now destroyed totalitarian system, and brought to it willingly or unwillingly the required sacrificial offerings.'' Rude Pravo said.

The election campaign has taken on a decidedly anti-communist tone in the past several days. At a Civic Forum election rally Thursday night Prague, President Vaclav Havel told the nation he would vote for Civic Forum candidates, not the Communist Party.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Payments to farmers under the 1989 farm disaster relief law are nearing the $1.53 billion mark - 40 percent more spending than anticipated when the law was passed, the government said Friday.

The law, the second enacted in two years in response crop-killing weather, was estimated to carry a $897 million pricetag when it was signed into law last August.

In a summary, the Agriculture Department said $1.528 billion in assistance had been given to 372,102 farmers and ranchers as of May 1. The bulk of the aid, $1.4 billion went to 352,455 producers with crop losses.

Six Wheat Belt states - Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota - have received 58 percent of the money. Texas was the leader with $325.4 million.

The law was inspired by drought and freeze damage to the wheat crop, spring floods in cotton country and excessive rainfall in the eastern Corn Belt. Aid also has gone to farmers who lost crops due to Hurricane Hugo last fall and the devastating December freeze that slashed citrus production in Texas and Florida. Producers had an April 2 deadline to apply for aid.

After Texas, the leading states were Kansas, $204 million; North Dakota, $141.5 million; Nebraska, $79.7 million; South Dakota, $76.2 million and Oklahoma, $57.5 million.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Branding President Bush's policy toward China a "clear and complete" failure, Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said Friday he opposed extending Bejing's most-favored nation trading status.

In a Senate speech, Mitchell said, "The president's China policy has been based on secrecy, it has been inconsistent and its outcome has been dismal failure." "I urge the president not to compound that failure by now proposing the renewal of most-favored nation trading status for China," Mitchell said.

Bush must decide by June 3 whether to seek an extension of the MFN status that treats trade from China on the most favorable terms, which makes Chinese goods more attractive in American markets.

Bush said at a news conference this week that he had not reached a decision but pointed out that even some critics of his China policy have supported renewing most-favored nation status. The president has been criticized for being to lenient in responding to the communist government's crackdown last June on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, saying he has not taken position on renewal of MFN for China, noted, however, that granting the special status would be a renewal - "it's not a new benefit."

Dole questioned whether China or American exporters would suffer and said, "It's a nation that we shouldn't drive back into isolation." But the Senate GOP leader said "we do need to see some strong action and positive action" from China and warned, "The clock is running."

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., pointed out that Winston Lord, former U.S. ambassador to China, had criticized Bush's veto of legislation providing refuge for Chinese students in the United States, but favored extending MFN status. "This is hardly a place where there is unanimity," Chafee said.

In challenging Bush, Mitchell said, "A policy may initially be measured by its intentions. But it must ultimately be judged by its outcome. And the outcome of the administration'a China policy is a failure, a failure that is clear and complete."

Despite administration claims in December and January - after revelation of secret U.S. contacts with Beijing - that China would soon send a signal to substantiate the success of Bush's policy, the Chinese government has sent no such signal and has not moderated its course. "To the contrary, it intransigence has intensified," Mitchell said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The government legally conducted secret electronic surveillance of suspected spy Felix Bloch, a federal judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Harris ruled that the undercover surveillance of Bloch was legal and denied a request by Bloch's lawyers for access to all information related to the electronic monitoring.

Bloch, who is suspected of unauthorized contacts with the Soviet Union while in Vienna, was a career State Department official. He was fired in March but has never been charged with spying.

Harris signed his order late Thursday and it was released Friday. The judge also released several legal motions that had previously been sealed from public view.

In one of the previously sealed motions, Bloch's lawyers said the former diplomat had been the target of government electronic surveillance ''for as long as 18 to 24 months.''

''This invasive surveillance has been repeatedly reported in the press and media as a result of disclosures by various unnamed government officials that Mr. Bloch's telephone, residence and automobile were tapped or bugged '' Bloch's lawyers said.

They also cited news reports ''that privileged conversations were extensively monitored, taped and transcribed.''

Bloch's lawyers complained that were provided with only two wiretapped conversations and a portion of a third.

Bloch's lawyers argued that ''even these minimal disclosures in the face of such massive surveillance raise serious questions'' about the legality of the wiretapping.

Bloch was first suspended from the State Department, then fired. He earned an annual salary of more than $80,000.

A 30-year State Department employee, Bloch is fighting the firing before an administrative panel.

Federal law enforcement officials have said privately that the Bloch investigation was so bungled by that it is highly unlikely he will ever be charged with spying, much less convicted.

Bloch was deputy chief of mission of the U.S. Embassy in Vienna when he is suspected of having unauthorized contacts with the Soviets. He had returned to Washington at the time he was fired and headed the State Department office dealing with relations between the United States and the European Community.

Bloch was followed for months by teams of FBI agents who also surrounded his apartment building.

Bloch sometimes led the FBI - and a large entourage of reporters and photographs - on long walks around Washington and several high-speed automobile chases.

The visible FBI surveillance has since ended.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Brian Jenkins, an eighth grader from Malvern, Ark., won the national MATHCOUNTS contest Friday by leaving behind his young competitors as he ripped through complex math problems without the help of a calculator.

MATHCOUNTS is a national math competition for junior high school students similar to the national spelling and geography bees.

While Jenkins, 14, won the individual competition, the four-student team from Ohio won the state team competition.

Ten boys proceeded to the final round, based on individual scores in the written semifinals. Brian and Robert Shih of Palos Verdes Estates, Calif., tied for ninth. That pair began the final round with Brian defeating all of his competition to become the No. 1 math whiz.

The final question that Brian correctly solved to win the competition was: A series of basketball games is won when one team wins three out of five games. How many combinations of wins and losses are possible if a team is to win the series? The answer is 10.

He won a gold medal, an $8,000 scholarship, a personal computer and a week at the U.S. Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala.

At a news conference, Brian was asked if he felt like a winner when he came to the competition.

''Yes, I felt I had a pretty good chance, but when I was tied for ninth place, I found that hard to believe. But I gained a lot of confidence as the competition progressed and I thought I could win this thing,'' he said.

Brian acknowledged that math does not get the respect it should.

''No it doesn't,'' he said to applause from fellow math wizards, ''because without a functioning math education, you're not going to go anywhere in this world - even in sports.''

Contestant Peter Holderness, 14, of Albuquerque, N.M., admitted he didn't tell his friends the purpose of his trip to Washington because they would think he was a nerd.

''I told them I'm going to Washington but not to a math competition. Most of my friends are not into math. It's not considered cool to be good in math,'' said Peter.

Another contestant, Joshua Maher, 13, Baltimore, said math has always come naturally to him.

''Some kids I know spend a lot of time to get it right, but it comes pretty easily to me,'' he said.

Brian placed fifth in the MATHCOUNTS contest last year and participated in last year's national spelling bee. He is competing in next week's national geography bee, in which he participated last year.

Besides Brian, the other finalists were:

-Mathew Crawford, 12, Birmingham Ala., winning a silver medal, $8,000 - including $2,000 for receiving a perfect score on the semifinal test - and a week at the space camp. -Daniel Schepler, 14, Beavercreek, Ohio, winning a bronze medal, $6,000 - including $2,000 for a perfect semifinal score - and a week at the space camp. -Ravi Shanmugan, 12, Lawrence, Kan., winning $2,000 for receiving a perfect semifinal score. -Nicholas Loehr, 13, Midlothian, Va. -Shamik Das. 12, Baton Rouge, La. -Benjamin Davis, 13, Wayne, Maine. -Stephen Wang, St. Charles, Ill. -Ben Tu, 13, State College, Pa. -Robert Shih, 12, Palos Verdes Estates, Calif.

Here are a few of the questions Brian and his fellow finalists were asked. Contestants were given up to 45 seconds to answer:

-When the length and width of a rectangle are each increased by two feet, its area is increased by 16 square feet. Find the perimeter, in feet, of the original rectangle. Answer: 12 feet.

-Sixteen times the reciprocal of the circumference of circle A equals the diameter of circle A. What is the area of circle A? Answer: 4.

-Given a Fibonacci sequence 1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13 ... if the 53rd term of the sequence is x and the 54th term is y, represent the 56th in terms of x and y. Answer: x + 2y or 2y + x.

-Three concentric spheres have radii, 3r, 5r, 7r. The ratio of volume of the largest sphere to the volume of the smallest sphere, expressed in lowest terms, is p:q. Find p + q. Answer: 370.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Farmland values, which have posted gains for three years in a row, are likely to rise 3 percent to 4 percent this year, the government said Friday.

If the forecast is correct, the increase would be similar to 1989's rate of 4 percent. Land values averaged $693 an acre at the start of this year, according to an Agriculture Department report issued April 20.

''During 1990, U.S. farmland values are expected to rise 3 (percent) to 4 percent,'' the department said in an agricultural ''outlook'' report. ''The forecast incorporates expectations of near-record net farm income, slightly lower interest and inflation rates, and trends in farmland values.

''However, weather, the looming 1990 farm bill, possible revisions in the capital gains tax, and the (world) trade liberalization talks all are uncertainties that will affect returns to land and land value expectations over the next several years.''

Land values are important because land is a farmer's major asset and land values reflect the health of the agricultural economy.

Values peaked at $823 an acre in 1982 but crashed during the farm recession to bottom out at $599 in early 1987. A 5 percent gain was recorded in 1987, 6 percent in 1988 and 4 percent in 1989 to reach the current level of $693.

Even with the recovery, land values still are 16 percent their record level. In 15 states, values remain at least 25 percent below their peak.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MAY 18) UPI - A documentary film that premiered Friday portrays Nicolai and Elena Ceausescu as desperately seeking to survive while complaining to their captors of cold quarters and bad salami sandwiches.

The documentary, produced by the filmmaking house Alexandru Sahia, contains interviews with witnesses to the deposed president's frantic flight from Bucharest on Dec. 22 until his execution with his wife at a military barracks outside the city of Tirgu Viste on Christmas Day.

One man whose car was hijacked by the Ceausescus after they were whisked by helicopter to Snagov said they pleaded with him to take them to safety.

''I'm old, I'm sick, I'm not a (Communist) Party member. What can do?'' he said he told the couple. ''How can I describe the look of terror in their eyes? It was if I had condemned them to death.''

Through a long chain of involuntary drivers, the Ceausescus were moved from one spot to another, until one of their chauffeurs stopped at an agricultural center outside Tirgo Viste west of Bucharest, where he ran inside to seek help.

The driver, Nicolae Petrica, found the entire staff of the center huddled in one room around a television set that was broadcasting news of Ceausescu's fall from power after 24 years.

''I tried to find someone to save me, but a woman screamed, 'Why did you bring them here?' and they all ran away,'' the driver said.

At that moment, police in the area closed in.

''When the police came in and took them away, it was the happiest moment of my life,'' Petrica said, his voice breaking.

The 90-minute documentary said the Ceausescus were then turned over to the army and taken to a military barracks in the area. Soon Ceausescu's dreaded police force, the Securitate, found them through a transmitter in the fallen president's watch and the barracks came under attack.

''At the barracks they complained of the cold, at a time when others couldn't stand the heat of the room after an hour,'' said Sgt. Maj. Ion Enache.

The couple was offered brown bread and salami, a traditional soldiers' meal.

''He told us we kept him hungry and thirsty and we were traitors, and the salami was bad and the bread was stale and he wouldn't eat it because he had to have a special diet,'' the army man said.

A doctor, describing Ceausescu's inability to come to terms with reality, said when the ousted president submitted to a medical examination, he waited in vain for someone to remove his coat - and waited again in vain for someone to put it on after the exam was complete.

Ceausescu told the doctor he had diabetes, but was unable to describe the medication he took every morning - another indication his every whim was attended to when he was at the pinacle of power in one of Europe's poorest countries.

The trial of the Ceausescus began on Christmas Eve at 11:30 p.m. The verdict was deliverd at 2:30 p.m. the next day. Then they were immediately taken out and shot.

As the film described the last grim details of the Ceausescus' lives, giggles and laughter erupted from many in the crowd of Romanian as well as foreign journalists.

The film premiered as journalists have convered on Romania for its first free elections in four decades. The first round of voting is scheduled on Sunday for a Senate, an assembly of deputies and a president. A second round will be held in districts where less than 50 percent of eligible voters go to the polls.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The Defense Department designated the Philippines Friday as an area of imminent danger for special pay purposes, which means U.S. military and civilian employees will be getting slightly larger paychecks.

The Pentagon said it took the action because of the ''current unstable conditions'' in the Philippines, where three American servicemen have been killed in politically motivated attacks this month alone.

Imminent danger pay is an additional 15 percent of basic salary for American citizens who are department employees and $110 per month for all U.S. military personnel.

The Pentagon said there are 14,745 U.S. military personnel stationed in the Philippines and 1,355 Defense Department civilian U.S. citizen employees.

The State Department will also provide imminent danger pay to all of its U.S. citizen employees.

A day earlier, the Pentagon said it stepped up security for the military and civilian defense employees who live off-base in the Philippines and is working on a long-term plan to protect Americans there.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Federal agents wielding jack hammers raided a high-tech multimillion-dollar drug tunnel built by smugglers across the Mexico-Arizona border to funnel cocaine into the United States, authorities said Friday.

Lightning raids took place Thursday, with U.S. and Mexican agents assaulting the entrance to the football field-length tunnel at a luxury home in Agua Prieta, Mexico, and its exit at Douglas Building Supplies and Materials Co., in Douglas, Ariz., a block from the border.

A government spokesman said two ''security guards'' were arrested at the house by the Mexican Federal Judicial Police. ''Those were relatively low-ranking people,'' the spokesman said.

There were no arrests in the raid on the American side of the border, and no cocaine was found by agents using the jack hammers to penetrate the subterranean complex, said Judy Turner of the U.S. Customs Service in Houston.

The drug tunnel, which extends 200 feet into the United States and 73 feet into Mexico, is 30 feet beneath the surface, five-feet tall and four-feet wide, officials said.

''This was engineered. It has sound architectural design,'' said Thomas McDermott, agent in charge of the U.S. Customs Service in Tucson, Ariz. ''It is not like a tunnel you would see in Vietnam or North Korea or anything like that.''

''It's a very functional tunnel. Fortified with cement,'' McDermott said. ''The ceilings, floors and walls are cement.''

A hydraulically raised 15-by-20 foot section of floor in the family room of the house led to a 500-square foot concrete block underground room. There was also a large compressor, an intricate sump pump and a trolley for carting drugs across the border.

''The tunnel itself cost in excess of $1 million,'' McDermott said. ''The investments on both sides of the border probably total another couple of million.''

Investigators believe the sophisticated tunnel had been in operation for six months to a year.

In November, the customs service first received information that the well constructed tunnel was being used to funnel cocaine and other illegal drugs into the United States, officials said.

''This clearly shows the desperation of the drug cartels to get their stuff through one way or another,'' U.S. Customs Commissioner Carol Hallett said. ''Where they will stop, no one really knows.''

About a week before the raids, on May 9, federal, state and local law enforcement authorities seized 2,258 pounds of cocaine in a flatbed truck Queen Creek, Ariz., near Phoenix, that had been smuggled through the tunnel, officials said.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MAY 18) UPI - Interim Prime Minister Ion Iliescu met with election observers from the United States and more than a dozen other countries Friday, assuring them Sunday's multi-party polls would be fair.

More than 100 observers have traveled to Romania from the United States alone to monitor balloting in the country's first democratic elections in half a century.

Their large number was believed to reflect international concern following a raucus, divisive campaign marked by sporadic violence and allegations of bullying and campaign sabotage by the National Salvation Front, which dominates the provisional government.

''The Romanians know the future of our relations will be determined at the outset by the question of whether the elections are truly fair,'' said Sen. Joe Lieberman, a democrat from Connecticut.

''But I do hope (the government) understands that our presence is a compliment to what happened here,'' he said, referring to the December revolution that ended four decades of communist dictatorship.

Iliescu, Romania's interim president since the revolution and the frontrunner in the three-way presidential race, told leaders of the foreign observer delegations that steps had been taken to ensure the ''normal course'' of the elections, the official news agency Rompres said.

A former communist party official under executed dictator Nicolae

Ceausescu, Iliescu and his top aides promised the observers the ''full support of the Romanian authorities in fulfilling their mandate,'' Rompres said.

After a day of massive and sometimes boisterous campaign rallies on Thursday - the last day campaigning was permitted - the relative calm in the capital on Friday sparked optimism among some observers for a peaceful election.

''Some of the dangers have been overstated,'' said Roy Hattersley, a Labor Party deputy leader from Britain. ''The enthusiasm we've seen for democracy is overwhelming.''

Hattersley said the meeting with Iliescu and separate talks with the two opposition candidates for president convinced him that all three were committed to democratic elections.

Some Romanians, however, were skeptical about the polls as well as the value of the approximately 1,000 observers who have descended on the Balkan country in the last few days.

''It's just a form of tourism. They'll come over and spend a few dollars and then go home,'' said Florin Badanici, an economist. ''Where were all these people who are so concerned about Romania when we were starving?''

The chief observer for the United States is Ambassador Alan Green Jr., who returned to Romania Wednesday after being recalled to Washington for ''consultations'' - a strong signal of American concern over campaign violence and alleged initimidation of opposition groups by Front supporters.

The State Department was particularly alarmed by an attack two weeks ago on Radu Campeanu, presidential candidate for the opposition National Liberal Party, who was assaulted by a mob following a campaign rally, U.S. Embassy officials said last week. Campeanu's chief advisor was nearly strangled with his own necktie in the incident.

CHICAGO (MAY 18) UPI - Jurors in the racketeering and fraud trial of three Chicago Mercantile Exchange traders Friday began listening to a series of audio tapes of allegedly illegal trades recorded by an FBI undercover agent in the Swiss franc pit. But the first tapes played were of poor quality, with the voices obscured by the clamor of the trading floor.

In one tape, recorded Feb. 25, 1988, the government contends undercover agent Randall Jannett made an illegal, pre-arranged trade with defendant Robert Mosky.

The taped conversation began with Jannett asking Mosky, "Are you on your own stuff?" - jargon to ask Mosky if he was trading for his personal account rather than a customer's. "Yeah," Mosky replied, bidding "three on seven."

Jannett responded, "I've got three (customer orders) on paper to sell. What's your bid now? I'll just ... you've helped me out a couple times." Mosky responded, "I'll buy. I'll buy. I'll buy a couple at three." "Three?" Jannett queried. "I'll buy two at three if you want," Mosky replied. "How about five?" Jannett asked. "Okay. I'll buy five," Mosky said, giving the number of his clearing house as required.

Jannett then provided Mosky with the identifying number for Jannett's clearing house. "Sold you five at three, Bob," Jannett confirmed. The two then verified their clearing houses. The conversation concluded with Mosky saying, "Appreciate it."

The government has provided jurors with transcripts to help them make sense of the tapes. U.S. District Judge Ann Williams, however, cautioned the jury that only the tapes are evidence, and the transcripts are to be used only as a listening aid.

The government contends because the bid by Mosky and the offer by Jannett were in a normal conversational tone - as opposed to being shouted out so all in the pit could hear - the deal constituted an illegal pre-arranged trade.

The defense has contended the tapes contain merely confirmations of trades which are required by exchange rules, and those conversations are generally carried out in a normal tone of voice. The defense also has contended some of the confirmations were of trades completed only by hand signals, not by voice.

Defense attorneys say Jannett was inadequately trained in commodities trading and was so ignorant of trading practices he could not distinguish wrongdoing from strict compliance with trading rules. Jannett also testified to another conversation he had with Mosky that was not captured on tape.

The government contends Mosky was the kingpin in a group of brokers who pressured so-called local traders - those who trade almost exclusively for their personal accounts - to absorb losses from brokers' trading mistakes, for which brokers are personally liable to customers.

In exchange, the prosecution charges, Mosky and other brokers in the group handed cooperating locals sweetheart deals like the one Jannett described in which he made $100.

The first tape played to the jury involved what prosecutors contend was an illegal trade between two of the government's star witnesses - Swiss franc traders William Walsh and Mark Furman, who have pleaded guilty and agreed to testify, defense lawyers say, in expectation of more lenient sentences.

Mosky, 33, of Chicago, is charged with racketeering conspiracy, 28 counts of fraud and 51 counts of violating trading rules. He could face 415 years in prison and fines of more than $12.4 million if convicted.

Danny Scheck, 28, of suburban Skokie, is charged with eight fraud counts and ten counts of violating trading rules. Conviction on all counts could bring a sentence of up to 90 years in prison and a fine of up to $3 million.

David Zatz, 43, also of Chicago, is charged with six counts of fraud and eight counts of violating trading rules. He faces maximums of 70 years in jail and $2.1 million in fines.

They are the first three people to face trial on charges arising from a two-year FBI undercover investigation that led to indictments of 47 traders and a clerk at the Mercantile Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade, the largest commodities exchange in the world.

TRIPOLI, LIBYA (MAY 18) UPI - African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, saying, ''We consider ourselves comrades in arms,'' thanked Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi Friday for military training he gave ANC fighters and condemned the 1986 U.S. air raids on Libya.

About 3,000 cheering students greeted Mandela when he arrived in Tripoli from Algiers Friday afternoon as part of an African tour he is taking with his wife, Winnie.

The anti-apartheid leader was whisked to Gadhafi's Bedouin tent residence inside the heavily armed Babel Azizya barracks in the north African capital.

''This is a very unbelievable moment,'' Mandela, dresssed in a dark gray suit, told the Libyan strongman, who was wearing traditional white Arab robes laced with gold and a white turban.

"You have given military training to South Africans who wanted to obtain their liberation through armed struggle,'' Mandela said after embracing Gadhafi outside his tent. ''In our situation, as in other countries, an armed struggle is one of the most effective ways for fighting for political change in our country.

''Your readiness to provide us with the facilities of forming an army of liberation indicated your commitment to the fight for peace and human rights in the world,'' Mandela said. ''We consider ourselves comrades in arms.''

Mandela's visit was a diplomatic triumph for Gadhafi, who has made support of liberation movements from around the world a major plank of his controversial foreign policy since he seized power in a bloodless coup in 1969.

Diplomats say Libyan officials regard Mandela's visit as a triumphant symbol of Libyan policy that will considerably boost Tripoli's prestige in the African world.

On the way to the meeting with Gadhafi, Libyan officials stopped and showed Mandela the ruins of Gadhafi's former residence, bombed by the United States April 15, 1986, in retaliation for terrorist attacks allegedly sponsored by the Libyan strongman.

Mandela insisted on seeing every room in the building, which was littered with bomb shrapnel and wreckage from a downed U.S. Air Force plane.

''The Americans wanted to wipe out the whole family,'' Mandela said in apparent wonder.

Later, he told Gadhafi: ''We have just seen the destruction that was caused by the American bombings in 1986. It seems to us that, whatever the differences that exist between nations, between human beings, it is unacceptable for anyone to try an attempt on an opponent and his family.''

''It seemed to us that this was an operation with a specific intention to kill you. We were very happy to find that you had escaped and regret very much about the death of a child,'' Mandela said.

An adopted daughter of Gadhafi's was killed in the raid on Tripoli.

Gadhafi told the South African leader that ''we are in the same trench and we fight one common enemy.''

''We greatly appreciate your steadfastness during all your days in prison and we were very much affected by your suffering in prison,'' he said.

''Our hearts actually were bleeding and we were very much brokenhearted. We did not forget you even for one day,'' Gadhafi said.

Seated on a gray armchair in his vast tent, Gadhafi appeared healthy and relaxed as he chatted with Mandela, watched by the mercurial Libyan leader's wife, Safiya, who was dressed in a black cloak wrapped over a red and white traditional Arab kaftan dress.

Security was relatively light around the tent; only a few plainclothes bodyguards carried Soviet made AK-47 Kalashnikov assault rifles patrolled the surrounding gardens.

Gadhafi told Mandela he would award him on Saturday Libya's Fatah Medal of Highest Distinction and reminded him that Mandela's daughter had come to Tripoli last June and received the $100,000 Moammar Gadhafi Peace Prize on behalf of her father.

''You were the first person to receive this award,'' Gadhafi said.

Mandela was scheduled to leave for Cairo Saturday or Sunday. He was also scheduled to visit Kenya, but postponed the trip to return to South Africa Monday.

The sand-swept streets of Tripoli were decked with brightly colored lights Thursday night in anticipation of Mandela's visit. PLO leader Yasser Arafat arrived in Tripoli Thursday for talks with Libyan officials, but it was not known if he also would meet Mandela.

MALIBU, CA (MAY 18) UPI - Actress Jill Ireland, who for years fought against cancer, died Friday at her home surrounded by her family. She was 54.

Ireland had been confined to her bed for the past week and by early Friday had slipped into a coma. A family spokesman, Lori Jonas, said she died at 11:30 a.m. Her husband, actor Charles Bronson, and her children were at her bedside. Funeral arrangement were pending.

Ireland's last public appearance was on May 5, when she attended her son's wedding. The week before she attended ceremonies in Hollywood, where she was given a star on the Walk of Fame.

Ireland used her fame as an actress and the wife of Bronson to promote cancer research, offering support and encouragement to victims of the disease she had battled for so long.

She was first stricken with breast cancer and underwent a mastectomy in 1984, followed by chemotherapy and radiation treatments. In early 1989 she learned the malignancy had spread to her lungs and other vital organs.

Ireland, a blond English beauty with cornflower-blue eyes and a lilting voice, began her performing career as a triple threat - singing, dancing, and acting on stage, screen, and in television. But in recent years she was best known as an outspoken activist for cancer research and medical insurance coverage.

Born April 24, 1936, in London, Ireland made her professional debut at age 12 as a ballet dancer at London's Chiswick Empire Theatre. At 15, she gave up formal schooling to attend theatrical workshops between performances with repertory companies in plays or musicals in London or on tour.

While still in her teens, she signed her first movie contract with the J. Arthur Rank Organization and made her film debut in "Oh, Rosalinda" with Sir Michael Redgrave.

Her other English movie credits include "Three Men in a Boat" with Laurence Harvey, "Robbery Under Arms" with Peter Finch and David McCallum, "Hell Drivers" with Stanley Baker, and several films in the "Carry On Nurse" series. She also starred in "Twice Around the Daffodils" and "Jungle Street," the latter with McCallum, who she had married.

At the end of her contract with Rank, Ireland and McCallum went to Hollywood in 1962 and she made her American television debut in an episode of the "Ben Casey" series. She later made guest appearances in many episodic series, among them "Mannix," "Star Trek," "Night Gallery," "Daniel Boone" and "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." She also starred with David Carradine for one season in the Western series "Shane" for ABC.

Ireland and McCallum divorced in 1967. A year later she married Bronson and went on to work with her new husband in more than a dozen films, including "From Noon Till Three," "The Valachi Papers," "Breakheart Pass," "Somewhere Behind the Door" and "Hard Times." Her last motire, also with Bronson, was "Assassination," a 1987 feature in which she played the wife of a U.S. president.

In the early years of her marriage to superstar Bronson, Ireland abandoned her solo acting career to work only with her husband in order to keep the family together.

She and Bronson often took their seven children with them to film locations through the United States and abroad, where the actors found larger audiences than in the states. The actress also stepped behind the scenes to co-produce a number of Bronson's movies, including "The Evil That Men Do" and "Murphy's Law."

Ireland was an award-winning horsewoman who competed in hunting and jumping shows around the country. For the past dozen years she owned and operated Zuleika Farm East on the couple's 500-acre property in Vermont, and Zuleika Farm West, in Malibu, for training hunting and jumping horses and their riders.

Her two autobiographical books, "Life Wish," dealing with her battle with cancer, and "Life Lines," about her adopted son Jason McCallum's drug addiction, became best-sellers.

Last November, Ireland had to face Jason McCallum's tragic death. Jason, adopted by Ireland shortly after his birth, accidentally overdosed on a combination of painkillers and muscle relaxants.

In addition to Jason, she had two other sons, Paul and Valentine, from her marriage to McCallum. She also helped raise Tony and Suzanne, Bronson's son and daughter from a previous marriage. With Bronson, Ireland had a daughter, Zuleika, and an adopted daughter, Katrina.

Ireland received awards from many organizations for her contributions to the war on cancer. Two years ago she was appointed National Crusade Chairwoman for the American Cancer Society. In 1988, she testified before a U.S. Senate committee and was involved in the passage of a Medicare bill involving mammography, a test that can detect breast cancer earlier than other examinations. She was presented with the Medal of Courage by President Ronald Reagan in 1988.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 18) UPI - Prosecutors filed murder charges Friday against the son of actor Marlon Brando, who admitted killing his pregnant sister's boyfriend after accusing him of physically abusing her.

The District Attorney's Office also charged Christian Brando with possession of an assault rifle and possession of a silencer. Neither of those counts pertained to the weapon used in the slaying late Wednesday.

Brando, 32, was to be arraigned later Friday. Prosecutors were expected to argue against releasing him on bail.

Brando allegedly shot and killed Dag Dorllet, 26, of Tahiti, after an argument over the alleged abuse. Police said Christian was extremely protective of his 20-year-old half-sister, Cheyenne Brando, who is six months pregnant.

''Christian has indicated that he did in fact shoot the victim,'' said Lt. Ron Hall.

Marlon Brando and his wife, Tarita Tariipia, were at their walled and barb-wired mountaintop estate on Mulholland Drive in the Hollywood Hills when the shooting occurred late Wednesday night, but told investigators they did not see what happened.

Christian was arrested at the estate and booked shortly before dawn after hours of questioning and was being held without bail. Police said all of the Brandos were cooperative.

''He's upset - as any person would be in his situation,'' said Dan Stormer an attorney representing Christian Brando. He described the situation as ''a family tragedy.''

Police said a .45-caliber pistol registered to Christian Brando was recovered at the house.

Marlon Brando also asked police to remove four other guns, including two fully automatic weapons, an Uzi and an M-14, from the home. He told police the weapons belonged to his son, whom he described as a gun enthusiast.

''I can only surmise he just didn't want any weapons around in light of what happened,'' Hall said, adding that Christian faces possible weapons charges because the other guns were not registered.

Hall said Cheyenne told her brother that Dorllet had physically abused her and the two men began arguing minutes before the shooting. Marlon Brando and the two women told police they were in another part of the 12-room house.

Marlon Brando tried to revive Dorllet with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and called the 911 emergency line about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, Hall said. Paramedics found Dorllet in a den, dead of a single shot to the head.

Dorllet, reportedly a member of a prominent Tahitian family influential in the politics of French Polynesia, had been staying at the house since arriving from Tahiti with Cheyenne 10 days before the shooting. Al Prince, publisher of the English-language Tahiti Sun Press said Dorllet and Cheyenne Brando had lived together more than a year before separating two months ago.

Brando's house is part of a sprawling, three-home complex on 2 acres in the Hollywood Hills. The two other houses belong to Jack Nicholson, who apparently was not home when the shooting took place.

The complex gained notoriety in 1977 when director Roman Polanski was charged with having unlawful sex with a 13-year-old girl at one of the Nicholson homes while the actor was on vacation. Polanski pleaded guilty but fled the country and lives in Paris.

William Kunstler, the noted civil rights lawyer and longtime friend of the actor, said in New York that a ''distraught'' Marlon Brando had called and asked him to help in Christian's defense. Kunstler agreed, calling the shooting ''a tragic accident.''

(MAY 18) UPI - U-S and Philippine negotiators reached a settlement on a nagging compensation dispute after five days of talks on the future of American military bases in the island nation. But chief U-S negotiator Richard Armitage left the talks today expressing disappointment that the compensation issue dominated initial sessions. Armitage says his frustration centered on what he called ''the inappropriateness of constructing a renewed strategic relationship between our two peoples simply on the basis of money.''

President Bush welcomed the president of Hungary to the White House, where the Eastern European leader is expected to make a pitch for more U-S financial aid. President Arpad Goncz told Washington, D-C, reporters yesterday that he wants to attract American business to Hungary and widen cultural ties. The United States is already providing Hungary with 80-Million dollars over the next three years.

South Korean police battled rock-throwing students on the 10th anniversary of a pro-democracy uprising that killed nearly 200 people. About one dozen students were reported injured today in a city 170 miles south of Seoul after police blocked a march by 80-thousand people at a rally. Marchers were met by riot police armed with clubs and gas grenades. The crowd dispersed, but staged hit-and-run battles with police.

Colombian police say Medellin drug cartels planted a car bomb that exploded yesterday in the Carribean resort city of Cartegena, wounding 38 people. The city's mayor says the incident will further cripple the town's tourist trade, which has already suffered serious losses because of the nation's war on drug traffickers. It was the fourth car bombing in as many days.

WASHINGTON (MAY 21) UPI - The Transportation Department Friday said it has issued a license to General Dynamics Corp. authorizing it to conduct commercial launch activities.

The department said that General Dynamic's first commercial launch will carry a National Aeronautics and Space Administration-owned payload, the Combined Release and Radiation Effects Satellite, a scientific research experiment.

The launch is expected to take place June 23 at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida.

The launch is worth $64 million to St. Louis, Mo.-based General Dynamics, which entered a barter agreement with NASA to be paid in ''assets related to previous aerospace programs, such as (fuel) tanks,'' said General Dynamics spokeswoman Julie Andrews in San Diego.

The DOT authorization represents a breakthrough for General Dynamics' Space Systems Division, which builds the Atlas launch vehicle, and its wholly owned subsidiary Commercial Launch Services Inc., both based in San Diego.

''Until now, we were limited to selling our Atlas rocket to NASA, which then sold launch services to customers,'' Andrews said.

General Dynamics is in the process of building 60 Atlas rockets in four different configurations, and has 33 of them already committed, Andrews said.

Of the committed launch vehicles, 10 are committed to the U.S. Air Force and 23 to commercial companies, she said.

The Commercial Space Launch Act of 1984 requires the Transportation Department to regulate and license private U.S. companies that conduct commercial launch operations.

CALGARY, ALBERTA (MAY 18) UPI - Calgary assistant general manager Doug Risebrough, a four-time Stanley Cup champion in his playing days, Friday was named coach of the Flames and given a three-year contract.

Risebrough replaced Terry Crisp, who was fired after the Flames were upset in the first round of the playoff by Los Angeles. Crisp guided the Flames to the Stanley Cup and best overall regular-season record last year but players grew tired of Crisp's vocal outbursts and many sniped at his coaching ability.

Risebrough, who will retain his assistant GM duties, said some changes are planned for next year but did not get specific.

''Certainly the direction of the team will be changed and somewhat of my direction will be changed as well,'' Risebrough said. ''But I also realize you can't win at this level with one type of player. You have to win with all types.''

Risebrough, 36, played for 13 seasons in the NHL, the first eight with Montreal, followed by five with Calgary. He was a member of four Cup-winners with Montreal and played on Calgary's losing finalist team in 1986.

Following his retirement in 1987, he spent two years as assistant coach with Calgary, rising to assistant general manager this past season.

It has been speculated that Risebrough was reluctant to accept the coaching post because it could jeopardize his expected eventual rise to general manager when Cliff Fletcher discards those duties.

''It took a while to think about this but I go back with this organization to 1982,'' Risebrough said. ''I've been here as a player, as a coach and in my management capacity last season. I think that's very significant. I've seen all sides of the hockey operation here, and I really believe that will help me in this job.''

Risebrough said he did not take the job immediately because his capacity as assistant GM required him to make sure that the best possible coach was selected.

''I have a job to coach. You can't worry about one thing, when you're trying to do another. This is I what I want to do and I'm happy to have the opportunity.''

Risebrough said he would decide on the role of Crisp assistant coaches Tom Watt and Paul Baxter within the next week.

DETROIT (MAY 18) UPI - A group representing more than 9,700 import auto dealers once again ripped Chrysler Corp. and company Chairman Lee Iacocca by saying ''no amount of complaining'' is going to change the fact that American buyers know imported cars are better built than domestics.

The American International Automobile Dealers Association, in a statement issued Friday to coincide with Chrysler winding up its six-city road show in Los Angeles, said Iacocca has been blaming American buyers for Chrysler's failures.

''We think Americans know a lot more about American cars than Chrysler gives them credit for,'' AIADA President Walter Huizenga said, saying that ''study after study'' has shown that Chrysler products rank below imports in terms of quality and customer satisfaction.

The AIADA has been issuing statements chastising Iacocca and Chrysler at every stop of the carmaker's national media tour that began Feb. 21 in Washington D.C.

Chrysler spokesman Tom Jakobowski responded to AIADA's latest attack by saying the association ''must be feeling a little vulnerable'' to Chrysler's massive advertising campaign, now focused on a consumer comparison showing its smaller cars to be preferred to similar-sized Honda cars.

''All along we have been saying that (import carmakers) don't have a monopoly on good products or quality, and that's our message,'' Jakobowski said. ''We are not Japan bashing. We are just putting the emphasis on Chrysler products and their advantages because (imports) have kind of had a free ride.''

Chrysler has been hoping to raise brand awareness of its cars and trucks while reinforcing its message that the No. 3 carmaker is alive and well and well-positioned to compete during the 1990s.

''Our purpose is to get the message out in different cities,'' an AIADA spokesman said from the association's Washington, D.C., headquarters. ''He (Iacocca) is hitting us in all six cities so we feel obligated to hit him back.''

''Iacocca says that Chrysler has to wake Americans up to the truth about Chrysler's product quality,'' Huizenga said. ''The truth of the matter is that Americans do know the facts, and they aren't in Chrysler's favor.''

(MAY 18) UPI - East and West German leaders are heralding the birth of a new Germany. The leaders today signed a key treaty in Bonn which officially ushers in unification... economically and socially. East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere says the treaty is NOT between two states, but between fellow countrymen who NO longer want to be separated. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl described unity as a ''dream.''

Administrators at Wesleyan University say they're optimistic that negotiations will end a 10-day-old hunger strike and sit-in by 11 students protesting racism. Strikers are demanding written guarantees to end discrimination at the Middletown, Connecticut, college. In recent weeks, the exclusive liberal arts school has been plagued by increasingly violent racial tensions.

History books may be forced to re-write chapters on Christopher Colombus. The National Council of Churches says the man credited with discovering the New World engineered church-supported racism, enslavement of Indians and ''moral decadence.'' The council passed a resolution in Pittsburgh last night which throws cold water on plans for celebrations marking Colombus' discovery 500 years ago.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The Public Health Service officially proposed Friday a policy change long sought by AIDS activists to give people infected with the deadly virus quicker access to promising experimental treatments.

The statement outlining the new ''parallel track'' system will be published in the Federal Register Monday and will be followed by a 60-day period for public comments.

''We are proposing this initiative because of its potential for prolonging lives. It is an appropriate step to take at this time,'' Assistant Health Secretary James Mason said.

Under the plan, some experimental drugs would be provided to AIDS patients who have no other treatment options but who cannot take part in traditional drug tests for medical or travel reasons. A second track would consist of patients eligible for the more strictly monitored tests required for government drug approval.

Currently, it takes about eight years for the average drug to reach the market. AIDS activists say past efforts to speed up the delivery of drugs to AIDS patients, including allowing early use of experimental drugs on a case-by-case basis, have not met the widespread need.

At first, the parallel track policy will be limited to people infected with the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, but the government is seeking comments on whether drugs for other life-threatening diseases should be included, Mason said.

The parallel track plan, long pushed by AIDS activists, was first embraced by government health leaders last summer. An expert panel submitted a proposal for such a system to the Health and Human Services Department in December.

Friday's announcement comes just three days before a demonstration planned by AIDS activists at the National Institutes of Health to protest the government's AIDS research effort.

''This is definitely an important step forward in a process that has been underway for quite a period of time,'' said Jean McGuire of the AIDS Action Council. ''It is a tribute to the (pharmaceutical) industry and government, as well as the activists, that we have been able to achieve a certain level of consensus.''

However, McGuire noted major questions about parallel track - like who will pay for the drugs - still remain to be answered. Under Food and Drug Administration rules, companies can only recover cost on experimental drugs. However, many medical insurers refused to pay anything for drugs that have not received full FDA-approval.

Some researchers have expressed fears that the parallel track may make it impossible to conduct the strictly monitored tests required for government drug approval and may also endanger patients.

But Mason said: ''We believe we have built sufficient safeguards into parallel track to ensure it neither compromises the drug approval and clinical trials nor delays the speedy delivery of promising investigational agents from the laboratory to the bedside.'' Bristol-Myers Squibb Co.'s free ''early access'' distribution of the AIDS drug DDI, started last fall, is considered by many to be an informal prototype of the parallel track plan.

The DDI distribution effort came under attack in March when more deaths were reported among patients in the early access track than among those in the traditional tests. But NIH officials attributed most of the disparity to the tendency of the patients in the expanded access track to be sicker than those in the traditional tests.

Bristol-Myers officials have said the innovative plan has not created major problems in getting enough patients enrolled in traditional drug tests.

EAST BERLIN (MAY 18) UPI - The East German government moved Friday to tighten its visa regulations in an effort to stem the influx of refugees from Romania, many of them Gyspies, who have been arriving by the hundreds in recent days.

The move brought sharp criticism from some government and church officials who pointed out that - because of its past persecution of Gypsies - Germany had a duty to come to the assistance of the refugees.

At a meeting Friday, the East German government introduced an amendment to its immigration law, stating that Romanian citizens traveling to East Germany must show a ''formal letter of invitation'' or prove that they have booked tourist accomodation.

State Secretary for Foreigners' Affairs Almuth Berger condemned the decision and said, ''Our historic and humanistic responsibility toward oppressed minorities requires more foresight, tolerance and patience.''

Anneta Kahane, another official in the department, described the decision as ''scandalous.''

A Berlin Protestant church official commented that because gypsies were persecuted by the Nazi regime during World War II, Germans now should show gypsies that ''we have overcome the ugly German arrogance and inhumanity and are now ready to help.''

Officials said that more than 3,000 refugees have arrived from Romania in recent weeks, traveling to East Berlin by train, with often little more than a small bundle containing their meager belongings.

Many of them are Sinti and Roma Gypsies who say they have fled Romania because of poverty and harrassment.

The East German authorities decided Friday to seek further accomodation for the refugees, as the military barracks currently sheltering some of the Romanians can only accomodate a few hundred.

Many of the refugees have been sleeping at East Berlin's railroad station.

Some East Germans have expressed outrage at the presence of the Gypsies in their capital.

''Wherever they gather, they make the place look filthy,'' East Berlin housewife Maria Peters said.

In the West German city of Hamburg, a spokesman for the Roma and Sinti Union said in a statement that members of the Roma clan ''in eastern European countries are subjected to the worst persecution and continuously threatened by violent attacks.''

He also said that about 300 Romas were on a ''begging march'' to the West German capital, to protest threatened eviction from their homes in West Germany.

He said that, in one town along the way, a local citizens' committee was planning to stop the march by blocking the road with tractors and lorries.

PITTSBURGH (MAY 18) UPI - National Intergroup Inc. said Friday it will attempt to buy back shares sold to the public in its subsidiary Permian Partners, L.P., a distributor of crude oil and petroleum products, in a deal valued at about $59 million.

NII said it will make a cash tender offer for all outstanding cumulative convertible preference units of Permian at $3.75 each. The offer will be made no later than May 25.

NII is trying to buy back Permian shares sold to the public in June 1987 because Permian ''isn't doing real well in its industry,'' said NII spokeswoman Judy Hale.

''We're hoping .. its financial and competitive positions can be strengthened,'' she said.

NII sold 55.3 percent of the Permian Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary and the general partner of Permian Partners, but has retained ownership of 44.7 percent. About 15.75 million outstanding shares are publicly owned, Hale said.

Permian's board of directors rejected a buyback offer in April and the offer will now be made directly to shareholders, she said.

NII, based in Pittsburgh, has holdings in drug distribution chains and in National Steel Corp.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - An innovative welfare-to-work program in San Diego has shown the most encouraging results to date on the effectiveness of aiding welfare recipients get jobs, a study said Friday.

The report, by the Manpower Demonstration Research Corp. of New York, studied the Saturation Work Initiative Model, or SWIM, a demonstration project operated between 1985 and 1987.

It found that by the second year of participation in the program, the average welfare recipient with school-age children was earning 50 percent more and getting 13 percent less in welfare benefits than people in a similar control group not in the program.

Moreover, according to the study, the program achieved its resuls at a moderate cost, resulting in savings for taxpayers.

''These positive findings are particularly relevant to states andcommunities as they implement the Jobs Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) program,'' said Judith Gueron, president of the research firm. The JOBS program is the centerpiece of the 1988 welfare reform law.

While SWIM and JOBS are somewhat different, Gayle Hamilton, who directed the SWIM study, said it could provide ''valuable lessons to states designing and operating JOBS.''

Under the program, both single mothers in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program and heads of two-parent households, usually men receiving AFDC-Unemployed Parent benefits, participated in the program.

The San Diego project set two major goals, both relatively new at the time to welfare employment programs, and included heavy doses of education and training among its services. First, the program required participation as long as participants remained on welfare. Second, it attempted to apply the requirement to a large portion of welfare recipients.

The two goals were translated into a program with a strict, fixed sequence of activities that began with an instensive, two-week job search workshop designed to provide job-seeking skills and to build self-confidence.

Those who did not find work were assigned to three months of unpaid work experience.

The study said found ''the most encouraging results to date on the effectiveness of interventions designed to help a wide range of welfare recipients get jobs.''

And, it found, that ''for every dollar spent on SWIM, government budgets saved $3'' and total savings were as much as $12 million in welfare costs.

But it also said that for the research sample as a whole, ''SWIM had little effect on individuals' net income: gains in earnings were largely offset by reductions in welfare payments.''

Nonetheless, Hamilton said, ''The finding that participants depended more on employment and less on government programs for their income is encouraging.''

As encouraging as the results were, Hamilton also noted that even two years after participating in SWIM, 51 percent of those targeted by the program were wtill receiving welfare and only 19 percent of those employed during the second year had earnings of $10,000 or more.

SEATTLE (MAY 18) UPI - Two Chinese stowaways claiming to be refugees from last year's Tiananmen Square crackdown were being held Friday while their requests for political asylum were being considered, the Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

The two boarded separate container ships in Honk Kong bound for the United States, INS agents said. A third Cinese stowaway was believed to be en route to Seattle aboard another cargo ship, also to seek asylum, agents said.

The three apparently fled from China to Hong Kong after the massacre of pro-democracy demonstrators at Tiananmen Square in Beijing last June, U.S. officials said.

Shimin Li, 27, who arrived this week in Tacoma, south of Seattle, aboard the ship Brijid Maersk, was a Chinese army captain who was a supporter of the student uprising and took part in the Tiananmen Square demonstrations, attorneys for the men said.

The other stowaway, Jian Huao Zhong, 23, was a student involved in the uprising, they said. He also arrived this week, hidden aboard the Asian Venture that docked in Seattle.

The two said in petitions seeking asylum they fear persecution if they return to China.

INS officials said they were awaiting an advisory opinion from the State Department before deciding whether to grant asylum.

''They must show a well-founded fear of persecution based on race, religion, nationality, membership in a certain social group or political opinion'' for their asylum requests to be granted, said Mary Von Brieson, director of the State Department's Office of Asylum Affairs.

Feng Ming Liu, a lawyer for the two stowaways, said the men were happy to be in jail while awaiting a decision. She said they had feared they would be returned to Hong Kong.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 18) UPI - Bechtel has been awarded a contract to help build a $320 million golf course and hotel complex near Tokyo's Narita International Airport, the construction and engineering giant said Friday.

Overseas Bechtel Inc. will provide project management services for Aijishi Co. Ltd. before and during construction of the complex, to be known as the Zaishi Club.

The completed project will include an 18-hole golf course with driving range, a 110,000-square-foot clubhouse, a training and conference center, and a 349-room luxury hotel.

The 30-month job is expected to be finished in August 1992.

''This is another example of Bechtel's increasingly significant involvement in the Japanese construction market,'' said John L. Moore Jr., Bechtel's senior regional executive for the Far East.

Moore, a director of parent company Becthel Group Inc., was named head of Far East operations last year to oversee the company's growing business in Japan and the Pacific Rim.

The company's recent projects in the region include a role in construction of a new $800 million terminal at Tokyo's Haneda airport and a technical study for a nine-mile tunnel and bridge linking Tokyo and the Chiba prefecture.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) UPI - Stocks closed mixed Friday in moderate trading as most issues gained on buying related to the expiration of May stock options and futures but the blue chips finished lower.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 12.03 Thursday to a new record high of 2831.71, lost 11.80 to close at 2819.91.

Broader market gauges were mostly higher. The New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 0.02 to 193.47 but Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.17 to 354.64 and the price of an average share rose one cent.

Advances pulled ahead of declines 750-715 among the 1,989 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 162,520,000 shares, compared with 164,770,000 shares traded Thursday.

Analysts said technical buying related to the expiration of May stock-index futures and options, known as "double-witching hour," boosted most stocks in the last hour of the session, except for the Dow industrials.

For most of the day the market drifted with modest losses, pressured by weakness in the bond market and simply pulling back after the three record highs hit this week in the Dow industrials.

The bellwether long bond was down 1/2 point in late trading after another piece of evidence that the Federal Reserve is not currently in the process of lowering short-term interest rates.

The Fed again drained funds from the banking system, as it did Thursday, in what analysts say was a sign that it wants the rate banks charge each other on overnight loans to remain at 8.25 percent. The rate had slipped to 8 3/16 when the Fed acted. Analysts said the declines in Treasuries made investors turn cautious since some had expected that the Fed might soon loosen the reins on credit.

After the market's close, word came out that the Federal Open Market Committee, the Fed's policy making arm, had voted at its March 27 meeting to leave monetary policy unchanged. Analysts also said it would be perfectly normal for the market to ease slightly after the recent rally.

"We're just having a bit of a correction from what has been a pretty substantial move in the market over the last two weeks, reaching new highs " said Jeff Kaminsky, head of institutional sales trading at Mabon, Nugent & Co. "And it's a Friday, so you're seeing some profit taking."

On the trading floor, AT&T was the most active issue, up 5/8 at 43 1/2. Texas Utilities followed, down 3/8 to 36 1/2. Philip Morris was third, off 5/8 to 43 3/4.

Prime Motor Inns was the fifth most active issue, jumping 1 5/8 to 13 3/4 as those who sold the stock short apparently tried to cover their positions before it rose further. Manor Care is reportedly still interested in buying the company.

Among the other blue chips, IBM was down 3/4 to 115 3/8, McDonald's rose 7/8 to 32 3/4, Woolworth lost 3/4 to 63 1/4 and General Motors was down 5/8 to 47 7/8.

Elsewhere, Par Pharmaceutical sank 1/2 to 4 7/8 after reporting a loss for its March quarter and saying it expects losses for at least the next two quarters and for the 1990 fiscal year.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 195,163,900 shares, compared with 201,751,380 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in moderately active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 1.38 to close at 356.32. The price of an average share rose four cents. Advances led declines 285-270 among the 809 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 15,477,100 shares, compared with 16,217,000 traded Thursday. Nortankers led the Amex issues, up 1/8 at 12 5/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 2.57 to close at 448.31.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The Export-Import of Japan Friday signed a cofinancing agreement with the World Bank to provide a $40 million untied loan facility in support of the economic reforms of Trinidad and Tobago, the World Bank said.

The Japanese Eximbank loan is provided to cofinance an earlier $40 million World Bank loan to the Caribbean island nation. The loans are designed to assist the government's economic structural adjustment program.

The World Bank loan, the first to Trinidad and Tobago since 1979, was approved Jan. 4.

The multilateral organization said Trinidad and Tobago's structural adjustment program is aimed at raising the efficiency of public sector management, removing the inefficiencies produced by a restrictive trade regime and providing the social basis to sustain the adjustment process.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (MAY 18) UPI - Nicaragua's Contra rebels, citing the ''progressive deterioration'' of President Violeta Chamorro's authority, said Friday they are canceling an agreement to disarm and disband.

Israel Lewis Galeano, the Contra leader known as Comandante Franklin, announced the decision in a three-page letter that mentioned ''the progressive deterioration of the authority of the new government'' as one of several reasons for canceling their disarmament plans.

In the letter, to be made public later Friday, Galeano also referred to alleged attacks by the police on Contra units returning from the field and the failure of the armed forces to collect weapons distributed to civilian Sandinista supporters before Chamorro took office April 25.

''On the basis of all this we have arrived at the unilateral conclusion ... to suspend indefinitely the disarmament and demobilization of the troops of the Nicaraguan Resistance,'' said the letter, a copy of which was obtained by United Press International.

On April 19, the Contras signed an agreement promising to completely disband and disarm by June 10.

To date, about 1,000 of the estimated 10,000 U.S.-backed Contras have turned over their weapons to U.N. peacekeeping troops under the agreement, and most of the rest are gathered in special security zones in the Nicaraguan countryside.

Chamorro took office April 25 after defeating former Sandinista President Daniel Ortega in Feb. 25 elections. But the army and police remain largely under Sandinista control.

Chamorro faced a crippling five-day strike earlier this week by thousands of state employees grouped in Sandinista-led unions.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Farmers enrolled 163.3 million acres of wheat, feed grain, cotton and rice land in the farm program this year, a slight decrease from last year, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

As part of enrollment, farmers will idle 24.8 million acres. In exchange, they will be eligible for benefits such as crop loans and support payments.

The 163.3 million acre total amounts to 75.4 percent of the 214.6 million acres of acreage ''bases'' established for the seven crops that are covered by the farm program.

Last year, farmers enrolled 168 million acres, or 76 percent of the acreage bases for the seven crops.

The set-aside requirements for this year's crops range from 20 percent for rice and 12.5 percent for upland cotton to 5 percent for wheat, oats and American-Pima cotton and 10 percent for corn, sorghum and barley.

Rice had the highest sign-up percentage, 92.2 percent, followed by upland cotton, 86.7 percent; wheat, 79.7 percent; corn, 76.1 percent; sorghum, 75.4 percent; barley, 65.7 percent; American-Pima cotton, 23.1 percent and oats, 9.9 percent.

The oat rate was half of 1989's figure while American-Pima cotton enrollment was up sharply from the 2.1 percent participation rate last year. Rates for most crops changed by only a point or so.

In an attempt to encourage wheat production this year, the department gave farmers the opportunity to plant up to 10 percent more land in exchange for an acre for acre reduction in the amount of land eligible for crop supports. The offer attracted an additional 1.2 million acres.

A program to spur oilseed production led to approval for farmers to plant 1.9 million acres of soybeans and 10,000 acres of sunflowers on land normally devoted to wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) UPI - Genetic tests performed on a semen-stained sock of the woman jogger gang raped in Central Park failed to positively link any of the teenage suspects to the crime, am official said Friday.

''The DNA profiles obtained from the sock does not match the profiles of any of the defendants,'' said Gerald McKelvey, a spokesman for Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau. ''It does not match anyone of whom we have profiles.''

The prosecutor has genetic profiles of 15 people, including eight youths arrested in the April 19, 1989, rampage, three juvenile suspects, the woman jogger, her boyfriend and two male joggers who were attacked.

Six youths have been indicted on rape and attempted murder charges in the gang rape of the Wall Street investment banker. They and two other youths were also indicted for assaulting male joggers during a two-hour ''wilding rampage'' through a moonlit Central Park last spring.

The negative results mean prosecutors will rely almost exclusively on the testimony from several young witnesses and the suspects' videotaped and written confessions.

Because the youths point fingers at one another, their trials have been severed. The first three youths scheduled to go on trial are Antron McCray 16, Yusef Salaam, 16, and Raymond Santana, 15.

Jury selection in the first trial was slated for April 16. But in March, prosecutors preparing for trial discovered a semen stain on the jogger's sock, which had suddenly became noticeable due to discoloration. The sock was rushed to the FBI for genetic testing.

''This development does not materially affect the prosecution's case and will not delay the trial,'' McKelvey said.

At the same time, McKelvey said, the prosecution will press ahead with its efforts to find a new suspect who would match the DNA.

''This profile is indicative of a person who is not in this case at this point,'' he said.

At a hearing in the case Monday, Justice Thomas Galligan was expected to set a new date for the first trial at state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

Colin Moore, an lawyer for another of the suspects, Kharey Wise, 17, said the test results indicate someone else is responsible for the attack on the 29-year-old unidentified woman jogger.

''It's either that some of the kids were not apprehended or that someone else who was not in the group did it,'' Moore said.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The U.S. Export-Import Bank Friday announced it is offering short- and medium-term financing support for U.S. exports to Namibia.

Namibia became an independent nation March 21 after 75 years of South African control.

''We are enthusiastic about supporting applications for Namibia in light of the country's substantial resources and potential for economic growth

'' Eximbank President and Chairman John D. Macomber said.

According to the bank, the Southern African nation's independence opens up a new market for U.S. exporters.

Namibia has a well-developed infrastructure and vast mineral resources that contribute one-third of its gross domestic product and account for two-thirds of its exports.

The Eximbank noted that the country leads the world in output of gem-quality diamonds and contains the largest uranium mine in production.

HONOLULU (MAY 18) UPI - President Bush Friday declared a major disaster on the island of Hawaii, where Kilauea Volcano has destroyed 139 homes and caused an estimated $61 million damage, Gov. John Waihee announced.

The president's action makes federal funding available to affected individuals and local governments. The Federal Emergency Management Agency will coordinate the effort and designate specific areas eligible for aid.

''Assistance can include temporary housing, grants, low-cost loans to cover uninsured property losses, and other programs to help individuals and business owners recover from the effects of the disaster,'' the White House said.

''Federal funding also is available to eligible local governments on a cost-sharing basis for the repair or replacement of public facilities damaged by the lava,'' the announcement said.

Waihee hailed the president's action and said the state would link up immediately with federal and county officials to coordinate recovery operations on the ''Big Island.''

Waihee said he was also grateful that the action was made effective Jan. 24, 1983, when the volcano started its devastation, and that officials had recognized that this had been ''a unique, slow-moving disaster.''

Bush's letter to Waihee said ''We will also be asking the state to develop an appropriate mitigation solution to prevent future damage.''

Meanwhile, civil defense authorities ordered the evacuation of some of the few remaining homes in Kalapana as a new lava flow snaked down the volcano's slopes and completely cut off the Kalapana Gardens housing area.

Civil defense spokesman Lanny Nakano said the molten rock crossed Highway 130 about 7 p.m. Thursday, followed the road for about 15 yards, and then headed downslope into the deserted housing area.

He said the lava crossed Lokelani and Leilani streets at about 11 p.m., Lokelani was the final entrance to Kalapana Gardens that had been untouched by the flows that destroyed most of the development.

Seven homes, five of them occupied, upslope of the highway in the housing area were not touched by the molten rock. They had been ordered evacuated Thursday afternoon.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The Agriculture Department, whose announcements often deal with millions of dollars and billions of bushels, Friday calculated the support payments due to American-Pima cotton growers -

$6,000.

The payment is based on the 0.4 cent a pound difference between the target price of 96.7 cents a pound and the average market price, 96.3 cents a pound, between last August and March 31.

Payments will be made to producers beginning later this month, the department said.

American-Pima cotton constitutes a small part of U.S. cotton production. Growers harvested a record 663,000 bales of Pima cotton last year, compared to the nearly 11.6 million bales of upland cotton that were grown. Growers indicated they would reduce Pima acreage by 26 percent this year.

A bale of cotton weighs 500 pounds.

WILMINGTON, DE (MAY 18) UPI - Du Pont Friday said it will consolidate computer manufacturing operations at two Eastern Pennsylvania plants and eliminate about 150 positions.

The company said it will stop making electronic systems and assemblies at its Green Valley, Delaware County plant. Those operations will be moved to an existing plant at Emigsville, York County.

Engineering, distribution and marketing functions will be maintained at the Green Valley facility.

In addition to the cuts in manufacturing jobs, about 30 managerial and professional positions will be eliminated. Du Pont said it will try to move those white-collar workers to positions in other plants.

''This consolidation will help us control costs and concentrate on product lines that will provide Du Pont with the greatest return and have the most value for our customers,'' said E. Norris Tolson, director of Du Pont Connector Systems.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) UPI - A woman claiming to have been an eyewitness to the racial shooting in Bensonhurst has stepped forward to say she heard the accused ringleader urge another youth to gun down a black teenager, it was reported Friday.

WABC-TV's report came as a jury in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn cleared the alleged ringleader, Keith Mondello, 19, of murder and manslaughter charges in the killing of 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins last Aug. 23.

Mondello, who was convicted on lesser charges, had been accused of rallying the gang of bat-wielding whites who converged on Hawkins and three black friends on a Bensonhurst street in the attack that ended with the fatal shooting of Hawkins.

A separate jury in the same case Thursday found Joseph Fama guilty of murder in the slaying, which ignited racial tensions citywide.

An unidentified woman, with her face hidden and her voice electronically disguised, appeared on WABC-TV and said she saw Fama shoot Hawkins as the gang of white thugs confronted the four black teens and that Mondello urged him on.

The whites had gathered in an effort to prevent a rumored visit by black and Hispanic youths to the neighborhood.

The woman came forward less than 24 hours after Fama was declared guilty of second-degree murder with depraved indifference. He was cleared of a charge of ''intentional'' murder in the second degree; jurors said the prosecution had not proved that Fama was the triggerman.

A spokesman for the Brooklyn prosecutor refused to comment on the report.

The mysterious witness said she spoke up because her conscience was bothering her. She said a second youth, whom she could not identify, pleaded with Fama not to shoot. Mondello, she said, then urged Fama to pull the trigger.

WABC-TV said prosecutors had reviewed the tape, and an informed source said it was being evaluated for possible use in future cases, noting, ''At first blush, it appears credible.''

The woman reportedly was sitting in a car near the scene of the slaying.

Even if the woman is determined to be a credible witness, her appearance after the trial could not alter the Fama or Mondello verdicts.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - Portions of Oliver North's diaries released Friday reinforced questions about when George Bush knew the United States was trading arms to Iran for hostages.

They also suggest the government may have tried to get Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega to help the Nicaraguan Contra rebels even after reports of drug running by the military strongman.

However, the 1,209 pages of North's diaries - obtained under a court order by a private group studying the Iran-Contra scandal - were often only cryptic notes, making it impossible to determine exactly what most of the entries mean.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, traveling with Bush in Texas responded to the disclosures by saying the Iran-Contra affair had been ''thoroughly investigated'' by both Congress and the special prosecutor's office and, after a cost of perhaps $50 million, ''there's nothing we can add.''

The group, the National Security Archive, last week obtained and released about 1,400 pages of North's diaries. It obtained the new pages Thursday night and said about 40 percent of the information was blacked out by the government for security reasons. The group also estimated that another 200 pages of North diaries are still being withheld.

North, one-time aide in Ronald Reagan's National Security Council, was at the center of the Iran-Contra scandal, helping to ship arms to Iran in exchange for American hostages and arranging covert aid for the Nicaraguan Contras after Congress had banned formal U.S. help to the rebels.

Included among the pages released Friday were several references to Bush, who was then Reagan's vice president.

One was from a White House meeting held May 29, 1986, two days after former national security adviser Robert McFarlane completed an unsuccessful trip to Iran where McFarlane discussed arms shipments and the release of hostages. In attendance, according to North, were Reagan, Bush, White House chief of staff Donald Regan and McFarlane's replacement at the NSC, John Poindexter.

A North note from the session said: ''No further meetings until ostages come out.''

Malcolm Byrne of the National Security Archive conceded that no firm conclusion could be drawn from the notation, but added it ''suggests that Bush was much closer to the loop'' than he has disclosed.

''It suggests that Bush knew earlier that this could be arms for hostages '' Byrne said.

Bush has said he was ''out of the loop'' concerning the events that generate the Iran-Contra scandal and did not realize the United States was trading arms for hostages until after the affair became public in late November 1986.

Another reference to Bush was from Nov. 25, 1986, when the Iran-Contra scandal was exploding into public view. Under a heading that indicated a call from Poindexter, North noted: ''VP call Peres'' - a likely reference Bush and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres. There was no other explanation of the notation.

Other notes released Friday were of a Sept. 22, 1986, meeting North held in London with Noriega. The meeting has been known, although specific details of the discussions have not been revealed.

Some notes released Friday suggested North was authorized by other government officials to talk with Noriega about ''cleaning up (his) image.'' The meeting took place, the group said, after published reports linked Noriega to drug running.

North's notes of the London meeting, the group said, show discussions about commando activities and the Contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

Other notes made public suggested that Elliot Abrams, who was the State Department's top official for Central America, may have known more about secret efforts to help the Contras than he has testified.

FORT EDWARD, NY (MAY 18) UPI - General Electric Co. Friday agreed to take steps to begin cleaning up 30 years worth of toxic PCBs it dumped into the Hudson River, signing court papers to begin capping contaminated sediment at two locations.

General Electric signed documents in U.S. District Court in Syracuse with the U.S. Justice Department agreeing to ''reduce the potential threat to the public and environment'' posed by the exposed PCBs.

The cleanup, only a ''small part'' of the pollution allegedly caused by three decades of dumping by General Electric, will cost about $10 million, said Rich Cahill, a spokesman for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

''This will prevent the future migration of (the PCBs) into the river, and will prevent them from being reintroduced into the Hudson River,'' he said.

The cleanup of the so-called ''remnant deposits'' is separate from an agreement being negotiated between the EPA and GE over the cleanup of tons of PCBs dumped in the river itself.

GE will construct a soil and clay cap over the PCBs at sites in Fort Edward and Moreau, plant vegetation and stablize the river banks to prevent erosion into the Hudson.

General Electric will also fence in some of the area to prevent public access, Cahill said. Work is expected to begin this summer.

General Electric and the EPA are still negotiating the cleanup of the larger amount of PCBs deposited in the Hudson for 30 years by two GE capacitor plants at Hudson Falls.

River sediment containing PCBs collected behind a dam at Fort Edward, and when the dam was removed in 1973 the sediment - helped by floods in 1976 and 1983 - moved down river. The contaminated sediment formed 40 ''hot spots,'' Cahill said.

General Electric and the EPA are currently monitoring a large-scale demonstration project and are debating whether dredging, using biological organisms, or a combination of methods is the way to clean up the river bottom.

LIMA, PERU (MAY 18) UPI - Peruvian coffee growers this year converted nearly 40 percent of their land to grow coca leaves, the raw ingredient in cocaine, a representative of the country's coffee growers said Friday.

Juan Iglesias, president of the Cooperative of Peruvian Coffee Growers, said the farmers ''are going through their worst crisis in history'' because of low prices in the world market.

Iglesias, who represents about 20,000 families that grow coffee beans, has asked the government to pay his group $3 million to make up for a contract the Peruvian government lost last year with the Soviet Union.

''We need the money to sustain us through the next harvest and to avoid increasing the cultivation of coca leaves,'' Iglesias said.

Peru is the world's leading producer of coca, which is processed into cocaine for export.

Iglesias said coffee growers are tempted to switch crops in part because coca plants mature faster than coffee, yielding more produce each year.

It takes three years to grow coffee plants and the beans are later harvested annually from mature plants.

Coca plants, on the other hand, take eight months to grow and the leaves are then harvested every three months, Iglesias said.

Geronimo Porras, president of the Federation of Coffee Growers in the central Amazon jungle, said that ''the government practically pushes us into growing coca by not buying our crops and by maintaining export controls and taxes.''

He said the subsequent money problems of coffee growers make transportation difficult, bank credit scarce and put the high prices of fertilizers and pesticides out of reach.

''Along with violence from terrorists and drug traffickers, thousands of peasants find themselves with two alternatives: emigrating or dedicating themselves to growing coca plants,'' Porras said.

''The situation is discouraging and the authorities don't seem to understand,'' he said.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) UPI - The accused ringleader of a white mob that killed a black teenager and inflamed already heated racial tensions in the nation's largest city was acquitted Friday of murder charges.

Keith Mondello, 19, was cleared of all murder and manslaughter counts but convicted of lesser charges in the fatal shooting Aug. 23 of Yusuf Hawkins 16, whose violent death marked one of New York City's most explosive racial cases in years.

The verdict came a day after a separate jury found Mondello's co-defendant Joseph Fama, also 19, guilty of murder in the frenzied attack last summer in the predominantly white Brooklyn neighborhood of Bensonhurst.

Mondello, who stood with tears streaming down his face, was found guilty of riot, weapons possession and a series of lesser charges.

The courtroom erupted into pandemonium as the verdict was announced in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn, with scores of angry demonstrators rushing outside, some of them overturning trash cans as they marched through the streets. At least one injury was reported.

When the ''not guilty'' verdicts were announced, the Mondello family embraced in tears as the family of the slain youth shouted at them, one saying, ''You'll get yours.'' Diane Hawkins, the dead boy's mother, wailed uncontrollably, pounding her fists on her knees and fighting off all attempts to console her.

Outside the courtroom, Mondello's attorney, Stephen Murphy, said, ''I think Mr. Mondello was happy with the verdict. But when a young man's dead and another young man's in jail for murder, I don't think there's any winners.''

Prosecutor James Kohler said he was concerned the verdict would be ''misunderstood,'' noting that ''Keith Mondello was not acquitted of all crimes ... (he) was found guilty of several crimes.''

Bail for Mondello was revoked after the verdict and he was to be sent directly to jail. Sentencing was set for June 11. Mondello faces a minimum of one and one-third to four years in prison, and he could get a maximum eight to 24 years if Justice Thaddeus Owens orders consecutive sentences.

Two groups of demonstrators numbering about 150 marched to the back of the courthouse, overturned and ripped up four blue police barricades, scattering parts of them onto the courthouse steps and onto cars.

At least one person, a freelance photographer, was reported injured in the melee.

As jury forewoman Mimi Snowden announced the first ''not guilty,'' Mondello's father, Michael, screamed out, ''Oh, thank God'' and began to sob hysterically.

''It's God! It's Jesus! Jesus has risen!,'' the elder Mondello said.

Mondello was found guilty of riot, three counts of unlawful imprisonment, three counts of menacing, four counts of discrimination, and one count of weapons possession.

Fama was convicted Thursday of second-degree murder with ''depraved indifference to human life'' but acquitted of the charge of intentional murder.

He was the accused triggerman but the jury said it was not convinced he fired the fatal shots that killed Hawkins and the panel acquitted him of first- and second-degree weapon possession.

Mondello and Fama were the first of eight young men to be tried in the slaying that triggered months of bitter racial demonstrations, marches and vigils.

In the hours before last August's attack, about 30 young white men, many armed with baseball bats, had gathered near the home of Gina Feliciano, Mondello's former girlfriend.

According to testimony during the trial, Mondello and Feliciano argued after she told him she was dating black and Hispanic youths and said she had invited a group of them to her 18th birthday party.

The defense said the dispute between Mondello and Feliciano escalated after she told him some of her new friends were coming into neighborhood to beat him up, and he recruited his friends and armed them with the bats.

As the gang of youths milled about the street, Hawkins and three black friends came into the neighborhood to look at a used car. The mob mistook them for the rumored group of Felicianos' friends and attacked,

In the melee, four shots rang out, and Hawkins fell mortally wounded on the sidewalk.

During the trial, the most damaging evidence against Mondello was a statement he gave to police shortly after the killing. In it, he described recruiting his neighborhood friends for the attack.

Feliciano testified that Mondello bragged about getting ready to attack any blacks who came to her birthday party.

A neighborhood woman testified she saw the mob run by seconds before the attack on Hawkins, with Mondello in the lead.

In a surprising twist to the case, a woman claiming to have been an eyewitness to the shooting came forward and said she heard Mondello urge Fama to shoot the black teenager.

The unidentified witness, with her face hidden and her voice electronically disguised, appeared on WABC-TV and said she saw Fama shoot Hawkins as the gang of white thugs confronted the four black teens and that Mondello urged him on.

Prosecutors said they would interview the woman to determine whether her statements could be used against the remaining defendants in the case.

(MAY 18) UPI - Philippine and U-S negotiators have settled the nagging issue of compensation during five days of preliminary talks in Manila to renew a bi-lateral military treaty. Washington says it will make good on the remaining half of a promised 481-Million-dollar aid package to the Philippines.

Five times the usual amount of water is feeding into the already-bloated Trinity River in southeast Texas following the opening of floodgates upriver. The additional water is expected to prolong the flooding that officials had already predicted would last for weeks. One resident calls it a ''nightmare.''

WEST HAVEN, CT (MAY 18) UPI - Post-traumatic stress disorder may result from changes in brain chemistry that occur when combat soliders or others experience traumatic events, researchers said Friday.

The finding could help in the development of drugs and psychiatric treatments for the many Vietnam veterans and others who suffer from the disorder, the researchers said.

The study by the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in West Haven and the Yale University School of Medicine is one of the first to link a specific brain mechanism to symptoms of the disorder, the researchers said.

Post-traumatic stress disorder was classified as a disease in 1980 on the basis of symptoms found in Vietnam veterans. In earlier wars, it had been known as ''shell shock'' or ''battle fatigue.''

The condition develops in people who have endured a tremendously traumatic experience such as combat, child abuse, rape, torture or natural disasters such as earthquakes, doctors said.

The researchers said enduring trauma may substantially alter the brain's chemistry, sensitizing victims to adrenaline surges decades later and accounting for the symptoms of the disorder.

''Even though the trauma that they experienced was about 20 years ago, this may account for many of the symptoms that they may experience - flashbacks, anxiety, et cetera,'' said Dr. Dennis S. Charney, director of the neuroscience division of the National Center for PTSD.

''When we examined studies from laboratory animals, it became clear that uncontrollable stress in animals produces long-term persistent changes in brain function,'' Charney said.

''It certainly is very strong evidence that post-traumatic stress syndrome is a real diagnosis and it has a biological aspect to it. We should now be able to develop better treatments,'' he said.

The study also found that yohimbine, a drug used to elevate blood pressure and treat impotence, triggers panic attacks and flashbacks in PTSD victims.

''Even 20 years after coming back from Vietnam - or more in some cases - people are still suffering from problems in modulating alarm and behavior '' said Dr. John H. Krystal, chief of the PTSD center's laboratory of clinical psychopharmacology.

He said 60 percent of the patients who were given yohimbine experienced a panic attack, but had no attack when given a placebo.

''Forty percent of 15 patients had a flashback. This was the typical flashback, oftentimes replaying traumatic scenes, for example, a Jeep blowing up or a helicopter going down,'' said Krystal.

The researchers said the finding provided important insights into the biochemistry of the disorder, because scientists already know how yohimbine works in the brain.

(MAY 18) UPI - The bloated Trinity River, fed by five times the usual volume of upstream water releases, surged through southeast Texas Friday and caused a ''nightmare'' of flooding, as tornados in central Texas overturned mobile homes, uprooted trees and knocked down fences.

Forecasters said the Mississippi River was expected to crest Saturday at St. Louis. The National Weather Service also reported flooding across portions of New Jersey, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio due to heavy rains this week.

No injuries were reported, but forecasters said the rivers that are flooded in those states are not expected to fall below flood stage before the middle of next week.

Hundreds of residents have been evacuated from homes in 11 central and southern Indiana counties. Sinkholes as large as 20 feet by 20 feet threatened some homes and landslides closed roads in two counties. More rain was expected through Wednesday.

Elsewhere, a thin layer of dust extended across western Pennsylvania and West Virginia earlier Friday. Strong winds had carried the dust almost a thousand miles from a storm over western Quebec.

In Texas, the Trinity River Authority increased the release of water through the Livingston Dam to 100,800 cubic feet per second, more than five times the normal rate and one that would probably be maintained for several days. A flow of 20,000 cfs is enough to cause flooding.

''It's a bigger flood than was projected,'' TRA spokesman John Jadrosich said. ''This flood is everything it was advertised and more.''

He said any rain in the watershed feeding the river could mean bigger releases and prolong the flood, already expected to last for weeks.

Red Cross disaster administrator Bubba Haley estimated 900 houses in San Jacinto County and 40 homes in Polk County have been destroyed or seriously damaged.

''It's a nightmare around here. The worst part is not knowing when the water will stop coming. I didn't believe it would get this bad until now '' said Charlotte Hinze, 45.

She was staying at her convenience store to escape floodwaters surrounding her home in Holiday Lake, a subdivision about 75 miles northeast of Houston.

Howard Pipkins, manager of the Liberty Bell Ranch in Liberty County, built a dirt dike around his home, an island surrounded by dirty water.

''It's a brand new house and brand new furniture. It's worth it, except I probably shouldn't be talking to none of you media because if it doesn't work, I'll just look like the biggest fool around here,'' he said.

Pipkins said his wife and two children are with relatives and he moved the livestock to higher pastures days ago.

In central Texas, witnesses said tornados blew out of intense thunderstorms and touched down north of Waco near the community of Chalk Bluff and on either side of Interstate 35 between Austin and Round Rock. Witness Sonya Ward said the Austin-area twister she saw ''just whooshed through and knocked down some fences and trees and started blowing everywhere.''

One trailer home at the Pluger Estates mobile home park was turned upside down and about 50 of 300 trailers at the Dessau mobile home park were damaged.

No injuries were reported in any of the twisters.

''We really lucked out on this one,'' said Lt. George Meek of the Travis County Sheriff's Office. ''We really came out good.''

In Missouri, Army Corps of Engineers spokesman Mike Cullen said the Mississippi at St. Louis had a flood stage of 32.1 feet Friday morning, a rise of 3.1 feet. He said it should crest at 34 feet Saturday morning.

The Cuivre River crested at Troy and the Missouri River at Hermann and St. Charles Thursday evening. The Missouri was down 6 inches Friday at both cities from its Thursday reading, Cullen said. The forecast was for three days of rain.

Winds gusted to 50 mph near Flagstaff, Ariz., Friday, creating dangerous conditions for motorists and campers.

Fargo, N.D., posted 27 degrees early Friday, breaking a 1929 record of 29 degrees. Jamestown, N.D., had 28 degrees, 1 degree less than the record cold for the day in 1915.

(MAY 18) UPI - Hope is being expressed by both sides trying to work out an accord on strategic arms reduction before this month's superpower summit in Washington.

Secretary of State Baker reported ''some progress'' after a five-hour meeting today with Soviet President Gorbachev in Moscow. After the lengthy disccusion, American and Soviet technical arms negotiators delved into an UNscheduled evening session to work out the details of agreements between the two men.

The draft treaty being negotiated would cut the number of large Soviet land-based missile warheads in half. And it would make less drastic reductions in other types of strategic nuclear warheads, including cruise missiles.

The four days of talks are scheduled to wrap up today, with Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze holding news conferences in Moscow tomorrow.

On another issue, Baker says he finds last night's meeting between Gorbachev and Lithuania's prime minister ''very hopeful.'' Baker adds that the talks may be a start in ending the crisis over the republic's drive for independence.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl says today marks the birth of a ''free and unified Germany.''

In Bonn, leaders from the two countries signed a historic treaty calling for economic, monetary and social union.

The pact goes into effect on July 2nd, when East Germany will adopt West Germany's strong currency and economic system.

Kohl called the union a ''dream'' which is ''starting to become reality.''

And although more cautious, East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere acknowledged that reunification will give his country a huge head-start on other struggling East Bloc countries.

Kohl attended the ceremony shortly after his return from Washington where he told journalists he had NO timetable for German unification.

But a German newspaper today reported that leading members of the East German government have agreed to Kohl's earlier suggestion that all-German elections be held December 2nd.

(MAY 18) UPI - The head of Veterans Affairs is calling it ''another step forward in resolving a most difficult and emotional issue.''

The agency says it will pay an estimated eight-Million dollars a year to Vietnam veterans afflicted by a broad class of cancers. Today's announcement is the first government admission linking Agent Orange to a serious medical problem.

The V-A decision to compensate vets with soft-tissue sarcomas follows an advisory panel's report. The panel concluded there is ''at least as likely as NOT'' a significant link between exposure to the wartime herbicide and difficult-to-diagnose cancers.

An estimated 11-hundred Vietnam veterans or their families are expected to recieve government compensation. However, about 36-thousand vets have filed claims contending they were medically disabled by Agent Orange.

Veterans groups say they are pleased by the action, but add it does NOT go far enough. In the words of the American Legion it is- ''too little, too late.''

South Korean police remain on alert as students armed with rocks and gasoline bombs enter the third day of protests to commemorate the 10th anniversary of a pro-democracy uprising that killed nearly 200 people.

In Kwangju, 170 miles south of Seoul, about a dozen students are reported injured in a clash that erupted when police blocked a street march by more than 80-thousand people attending an afternoon rally in a central square.

Rally participants are demanding the resignation of President Roh Tae-woo who, they say, helped engineer the 1980 pro-democracy crackdown.

The uprising erupted in retaliation against a sweeping government ban on political opposition. The insurrection was put down by army troops in nine days.

Dissident student leaders have alleged that Washington supported the 1980 government and are calling for a boycott of American products.

BALTIMORE (MAY 18) UPI - The Baltimore Orioles, snapping out of a long batting slump, tied an American League record Friday night with eight consecutive singles in a seven-run first inning against the Texas Rangers.

Bobby Witt was the victim of the continuous attack, which tied the AL record set by the Washington Senators on May 7, 1951, against Cleveland and tied by Oakland in a game against Chicago on Sept. 27, 1981.

The eight straight singles was two shy of the major-league record, set by the St. Louis Cardinals on Sept. 17, 1920 against the Boston Braves.

The rally also helped the Orioles score their most in one inning since August 30, 1989. It was also the most hits in an inning by a Baltimore team since July 18, 1982 at Kansas City.

(MAY 18) UPI - Actress Jill Ireland, who for years fought against cancer, has died at the age of 54.

Ireland had been confined to her bed for the past week and slipped into a coma early this morning.

A family spokesman says Ireland died just before noon, with her husband, Charles Bronson, and her children at her bedside.

The blond English beauty with cornflower-blue eyes and a lilting voice began her performing career as a triple threat... singing, dancing and acting on stage, screen and in television.

But in recent years she was best known as an outspoken activist for cancer research and medical insurance coverage.

Ireland was first stricken with breast cancer and underwent a mastectomy in 1984, followed by chemotherapy and radiation treatments. In early 1989 she learned the malignancy had spread to her lungs and other vital organs.

Her autobiographical book, ''Life Wish,'' became a best-seller.

The National Council of Churches has voted on a new resolution which shatters the school-yard myth of Chistopher Columbus.

The ecumnenical Christian group called Columbus's discovery of the New World in 1492 an ''invasion'' because it resulted in church-supported racism, enslavement of Indians and moral decadence.

A sponsor of the resolution, an Indian, says the American people have neglected the pain of so many native Americans.

The resolution called on churches to recognize that Columbus paved the way for- quote- ''slavery, genocide and theft and exploitation of land.''

The council is the second major church body to voice reservations about federal plans to celebrate the 500th anniversary of Columbus's landing.

The United Church of Christ's Board for Homeland Ministries announced earlier this month it would join with Native American groups to plan and sponsor alternative celebrations.

NEW YORK (MAY 18) UPI - Jurors in the second Bensonhurst racial killing trial issued a statement Friday instead of meeting with reporters to talk about their bombshell acquittal on murder charges of the accused ringleader of the crime.

Five visibly shaken jurors gathered in an unused courtroom, and the forewoman of the panel spoke briefly before a packed crowd of reporters. All cameras were banned and the jurors refused to take any questions.

Forewoman, Mimi Snowden, a letter carrier from the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, read a statement that revealed nothing about how the verdict clearing Keith Mondello of all murder and manslaughter charges was reached.

The acquittal was striking because a separate jury that found co-defendant Joseph Fama guilty of second-degree murder Thursday had sat in the same courtroom to hear virtually the same, if not less damning, evidence.

The Mondello case had included what had seemed an incriminating confession by the defendant made to police hours after the Aug. 23 killing of Yusuf Hawkins, 16, at the hands of a frenzied white mob.

In the room at state Supreme Court in Brooklyn, Snowden nervously read a prepared statement from the jury of seven women and five men that said:

''It has been a long and difficult process. We have heard and reheard several testimonies. We also asked for numerous explanations of the law to guide us. Our decision is based on the evidence that is presented in this case.''

The jury - composed of six whites, three blacks and three Hispanics - deliberated for 11 days before reaching a verdict.

Fama's jury had repeatedly asked for explanations of the meaning of ''acting in concert,'' a key concept in the judge's charge to them.

They were told that a defendant could be found guilty of a crime that he aided or encouraged, and they then decided Fama had acted in concert with the mob to shoot Hawkins and convicted him of second-degree murder.

Mondello's jury came to a different conclusion in its case, without asking the judge to elaborate on that legal concept.

One of the prosecutors in the case suggested that given the lack of evidence that Mondello himself fired a gun, the jury had difficulty convicting him of murder.

As another official tied to the case said: ''I just think they found it hard to understand how a person carrying a bat could be guilty of shooting someone.''

HOUSTON (MAY 18) UPI - Chicago Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg's 123-game errorless streak ended Friday night in the fourth inning at the Astrodome.

With two outs and Ken Caminiti on first, Houston's Eric Anthony hit a grounder that deflected off first baseman Mark Grace's glove toward Sandberg. Anthony had already reached first when Sandberg threw the ball past Grace, allowing Anthony to take second and Caminiti to move to third.

WASHINGTON (MAY 18) UPI - The chief of naval operations said Friday the service will ''not tolerate'' sexual harassment or other mistreatment of students following reports a female student at the U.S. Naval Academy was hazed.

Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost did not mention the incident nor the alleged victim, nor did he comment on allegations a non-student was raped by a midshipman at the academy's campus in Annapolis, Md.

The Navy said a group of naval and congressional officials will investigate allegations a male midshipman handcuffed a second-year female student to a urinal as other men jeered and took photographs last December.

The alleged victim, Gwen Dreyer, 19, said the hazing culminated a series of other incidents in which she and other female students were the subjects of sexual harassment and discrimination by male students.

Dreyer, who resigned from the academy, said she was outraged at the punishment of those involved. The Navy, after an academy hearing, imposed campus restrictions and demerits against two midshipmen.

''I am very much aware and concerned about various complaints concerning incidents at the U.S. Naval Academy involving the harassment of individual midshipmen by other midshipmen,'' Trost said.

''The Navy has the responsibility to review these cases and to take appropriate action based upon the facts. The Navy does not condone and will not tolerate sexual harassment or other mistreatment of individuals '' he said.

In another case, the Naval Academy charged a midshipman with rape and turned the case over to a military prosecutor who will decide if the man should be tried, a spokesman said Thursday.

The 22-year-old midshipman, whom academy officials refused to identify, was accused of raping a 21-year-old Annapolis woman on academy grounds early last Sunday. The woman said she met the midshipman at a local night club.

A Brooklyn courtroom erupted into pandemonium this evening as a teen-ager was acquitted of murder in a racial attack that left a black teen-ager dead.

19-year-old Keith Mondello was acquitted of all murder and manslaughter charges in the fatal shooting last August of Yusuf Hawkins.

Mondello stood with tears streaming down his face as he was found guilty of riot, weapons possession and a series of lesser charges.

Mondello's family embraced in tears on hearing the verdict, with his father screaming out- ''thank God'' before sobbing hysterically. The Hawkins family shouted at relatives of the defendent, with one yelling- ''You'll get yours.''

Outside the court, two groups of demonstrators numbering about 150 marched overturning and ripping up police barricades and scattering the debris.

Bail for Mondello was revoked... with the teen-ager headed to jail.

President Bush requested the foreign aid months ago... and stepped up the pressure for it this week. Bush has suggested Congress delay its upcoming Memorial Day holiday if work on the legislation is NOT finished.

Secretary of State Baker reported ''some progress'' today in arms talks with Soviet President Gorbachev in Moscow.

Baker said he hopes an accord on a strategic arms reduction can be reached in time for the Washington summit May 30th.

American and Soviet technical arms negotiators went into an UNscheduled evening session after the five-hour Baker-Gorbachev meeting. The negotiators were to work out the details of principles agreed to by the two men.

The main sticking point has been disagreement over limits for air- and sea-launched cruise missiles.

The draft treaty now under negotiation would cut the number of large Soviet land-based missile warheads in half, and would make smaller reductions in other warheads.

The four days of talks were scheduled to end today.

Baker said he was ''very encouraged'' by the fact that Gorbachev had met last night with Lithuania's prime minister. Baker said he hopes that begins a dialogue to end the crisis over Lithuania's secession from the Soviet Union.

(MAY 18) UPI - Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene pledged today her republic's parliament will discuss Soviet demands that the republic rescind its independence declaration.

Prunskiene made her comments after meeting in Moscow with Soviet President Gorbachev.

Gorbachev said he is willing to ''explore any possibilities'' with the secessioninst Baltic republics as long as they observe the Soviet Constitution.

Those comments suggest an easing of Lithuania's two-month showdown with Moscow. But the situations in Latvia and Estonia, which are also seeking freedom from Soviet rule, remain tense.

In Riga, Latvia's president went on television last night to appeal for calm. The republic's conservative Communist leader warned of ''serious confrontation'' in the heavily Russian republic.

In Tallinn, the Estonian legislature revoked the legal status of a Russian-dominated labor union three days after anti-independence demonstrators tried to storm the Parliament building.

U-S Customs Service agents yesterday raided an underground tunnel that cost more than one-Million dollars to build.

Officials say the football field-length tunnel's entrance was found at a luxury home in Mexico. The exit was at the Douglas Building Supplies and Materials Company in Douglas, Arizona, one block from the border.

The tunnel extends 200 feet into the United States and 73 feet into Mexico. Officials say it is five-feet tall, four-feet wide and is fortified with cement. In the words of one official- ''it has sound architectural design.''

Two people were arrested at the Mexican house. NO arrests were made on the U-S side.

(MAY 18) UPI - A New York City jury today acquitted the alleged ringleader of last summer's Bensonhurst racial slaying of murder and manslaughter charges. Keith Mondello greeted the innocent verdict with tears streaming down his face. Mondello was found guilty of lesser charges in the brutal killing of a black teen-ager.

Supporters of the slain teen-ager Yusuf Hawkins stormed out of the Brooklyn courthouse shouting their discontent with Mondello's acquittal. One person tossed a garbage can through a diner window while others rocked passing cars.

(MAY 18) UPI - New York Mayor David Dinkins is appealing for calm following today's innocent verdict for the alleged ringleader of last summer's Bensonhurst racial murder. Keith Mondello was acquitted of murder and manslaughter but convicted of lesser charges. The case, which some credit with Dinkins' victory over former Mayor Ed Koch, has inflamed racial relations. After the acquittal was read, crowds surged out of the Brooklyn state courthouse and overturned police barricades and trash cans.

A New York television station broadcast a report showing a woman who claims to have been an eyewitness to the Bensonhurst shooting saying she heard Mondello urge another youth to gun down Yusuf Hawkins. The unidentified woman made her claims with her face hidden and her voice electronically disquised. A spokesman for the Brooklyn prosecutor refused to comment on the report.

CAMBRIDGE, MA (MAY 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Lotus Development Corp. (NASDAQ:LOTS) announced Saturday that it has terminated its merger discussions with Novell Inc.

The two companies signed a letter of intent to merge on April 5.

''We are disappointed that we have had to break off negotiations; however, in the due diligence process we discovered that the implementation issues associated with the merger were too great,'' said Jim Manzi, Lotus' president and chief executive officer. ''We expect our business to be unaffected by this action. We recently announced record sales and are in the midst of a strong product cycle.

''Our direction remains unchanged, focusing on our cross-platform strategy and our leadership in networked and standalone applications.

''Rather than engage in lengthy secret negotiations, we entered into a letter of intent and publicly disclosed it on April 6 in order to conduct the due diligence process as openly and completely as possible. We believe this was an appropriate action, and regret that we couldn't complete the merger,'' Manzi said.

Under the original letter of intent, Lotus was to issue 1.19131 shares of its common stock for each share of Novell common stock, or approximately 41.6 million new shares. The figure was based on the Provo, Utah-based company's current outstanding shares, assuming conversion of its outstanding convertible subordinate debentures.

Mr. Lee, Foreign Minister Lien Chan and Communications Minister Clement Chang welcomed Mr. Endara with a 21-gun salute at Taipei's military airport.

The Panamanian leader was accompanied by his daughter Marcela Endara de Yap and Foreign Minister Julio Linares.

During his visit here, Mr. Endara will have talks with Mr. Lee, while the two foreign ministers are due to sign an agreement on investment guarantees.

Mr. Lee will be inaugurated to his first full six-year term on Sunday.

Nine heads of state and government are expected to attend the ceremony, including the colorful king of Tonga, Taufaahau Tupou IV.

Also here is Ratu Sir Penaia Ganilau, the president of Fiji, a South Pacific island country that recognizes Beijing instead of Taipei.

NEW DELHI, May 19 (AFP) - The superpowers are growing uneasy over the crisis in Kashmir as border tension and military posturing increases between Pakistan and India with the worrying spectre of nuclear weapons in the background.

U.S. President George Bush decided to send a high-level mission to the two South Asian neighbors this weekend to urge them to open a dialogue on Kashmir, where Moslem militants are fighting for secession from India.

Robert Gates, number two in the U.S. National Security Council, will meet Monday with Indian Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh to deliver a message from Mr. Bush, and also talk with Foreign Minister Inder Gujral.

He will be accompanied by John Kelly, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs.

(In Islamabad, diplomats said the two U.S. officials would be having an unscheduled meeting Saturday with Pakistan Prime Benazir Bhutto in the North Yemen capital Sanaa, before travelling to Pakistan and then onto New Delhi.)

They will be coming from Moscow, where according to a senior State Department official, U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze discussed the Kashmir crisis on Friday.

"Each side sort of outlined the concerns about the situation," the official said.

"The Soviets said they too are concerned and they too have been engaged on a bilateral basis and they're doing what they can and will see if that's going to make a difference," he added, apparently referring to the fact that Moscow is the main arms supplier to India.

There were several reasons Mr. Bush ordered the mission, a diplomat said here, the major one being "the rising tension" on the border.

The Indian press said Friday that Islamabad had ordered 10,000 more soldiers to the northern third of Kashmir, which it controls. Islamabad denied the reports on Saturday.

Pakistan also denied a report by Indian officers earlier in the week that it was engaged in "unusual troop movements" and massing tanks near the border.

The two countries, who have already gone to war twice over Kashmir, have exchanged numerous accusations in recent weeks of troop buildups.

India has welcomed the announcement of the U.S. mission, but rejected the possibility of U.S. mediation.

MOSCOW, (MAY 19) - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, in a presidential decree issued Saturday, said an Estonian parliament vote that created a provisional leadership was illegal, Tass news agency said.

CAIRO, (MAY 19) - The leader of the African National Congress (ANC), Nelson Mandela, criticised Israel for its support of the South African government as he began a three-day official visit here Saturday.

Shortly after his arrival from Libya, Mr. Mandela was President Hosni Mubarak's host at dinner.

The ANC chief is also expected to meet during his stay here with the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organisation Yasser Arafat, who also arrived in Cairo late Saturday.

Mr. Mandela is currently touring some African countries in the wake of the ANC's first formal talks with the government aimed at removing obstacles to negotiations on a new, non-racial constitution.

Egypt currently chairs the Organization of African Unity.

Asked if he would be paying Israel a visit during his regional tour, Mr. Mandela said he would only be making stops in states "which supported our struggle."

He criticised Israel "for the support it gave South Africa".

In Tripoli, Mr. Mandela thanked Libyan leader Colonel Moamer Kadhafi for his "readiness to provide us with facilities for forming an army of liberation".

Elsewhere, he said that the government of South African Prime Minister Frederic de Klerk had failed to endorse "any important measure to remove obstacles for negotiations" with the ANC.

MANAGUA, (MAY 19) - Nicaraguan contras will continue to disarm and demobilize, despite their announcement they were suspending the disarmament process, a senior government official said Saturday.

Roberto Ferrey, who represents the government of President Violeta Chamorro in talks with the rebels, said the contras had decided to not act on the decision to suspend disarmament, announced Friday in a statement signed by rebel military leader Israel Galeano.

Mr. Ferrey told Agence France-Presse he had met with Mr. Galeano, known as Commander Franklin, who promised not to suspend the demobilization of his troops.

The meeting was held near El Almendro, 250 kilometers (155 miles) southeast of the capital, where Mr. Galeano has a base camp.

"He sent me the communique ... but, he added, it has not become effective, in the sense that demobilization has not been suspended in any of the zones. ... The decision will be to not make it effective, but to continue with the process of disarmament," Mr. Ferrey said.

Mr. Ferrey said U.N. officials had told him late Friday that the contras were continuing to hand in their weapons.

In explaining the apparent reversal, he said that Nicaraguans' recent political successes, hinting at the six-day strike by public employees, "forced them (the contras) to make the announcement, but they did not make it effective in the sense that it was not given as an order to the troops."

The former U.S.-backed rebel group had agreed April 19 to surrender their weapons and demobilize by June 10, following Mrs. Chamorro's decisive electoral victory over the Sandinista National Liberation Front.

Fewer than 1,000 of the 13,000 contras were estimated to have turned in their weapons in the past three weeks.

According to political sources, the communique was announced without the consent of other contra leaders. Mr. Ferrey refused to comment on the subject.

MILAN, ITALY, (MAY 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The Board of Directors of Montedison S.p.A., the Ferruzzi Group's industrial holding company in the chemicals, pharmaceuticals and energy sectors, today announced the company's results for 1989. These results reflect the Montedison Group's structure after the formation of Enimont.

Consolidated Results For the year 1989 the Montedison Group achieved consolidated net income of 1,156 billion lire, a significant increase over last year's 668 billion lire due to the extraordinary items associated with the formation of Enimont.

Consolidated earnings per share were 427 lire for 1989 versus 247 lire for 1988.

The Group's consolidated net income excluding extraordinary and non-recurring items was 362 billion lire versus last year's 490 billion lire. This decline is attributable to a deterioration in market conditions which have been particularly favorable over the past few years, especially in 1988.

The changes in the Group's structure due to the formation of Enimont have had a significant impact on the consolidated income statement. The Group's net operating income reflects only the results of directly managed activities, while the businesses conferred to Enimont contribute to Montedison's results only as income from investments accounted for under the equity method. To allow for meaningful comparison of 1988 and 1989 figures, the 1988 operating results have been restated excluding the impact of operations contributed to Enimont.

The Group's consolidated sales revenues for 1989 were 5,681 billion lire, up 7 percent from 1988 due primarily to the impact of the S.I.R. Group which was acquired at the end of 1988, as well as to higher sales in the energy segment.

Operating income before depreciation was 978 billion lire for 1989 (net operating income of 420 billion lire plus depreciation of 558 billion lire) versus 1,384 billion lire for 1988)875 billion lire of net operating income plus 509 billion lire depreciation). This reduction reflects the substantial change in cost/price relationships particularly in the polymer materials area where there were excess supply conditions due to capacity additions in response to continued strong demand. An abnormal, temporary increase in the costs of key petrochemical intermediates also contributed to cost/price or gross margin squeeze during the period. These intermediate costs have gradually come back in line during the first few months of 1990.

The Ferruzzi Group is a leading international industrial system which operates in the chemical, pharmaceutical and energy sectors through Montedison and in the agro-industrial sector through Eridania, with an aggregate turnover of approximately $30 billion.

BIG PINE, CA (MAY 19) UPI - A charter bus carrying European tourists on a two-lane mountain road crashed Friday, killing one woman and injuring 46 others, the California Highway Patrol said.

The Southwest Charter bus was on Highway 168 enroute from Las Vegas to Mammoth Lakes when it struck an embankment about 4 p.m., rolled over once and landed back on its wheels, CHP dispatcher Bob Storar said.

Investigators were still trying to determine the cause of the accident, he said. No other vehicles were involved in the accident, about 220 miles northwest of Las Vegas. The CHP closed the road after the crash.

Marguerite Finat was pronounced dead at the scene. Her husband was injured in the crash. The couple was believed to be from France.

The injured were taken to Northern Inyo Hospital in Bishop, 14 miles north of the accident. At least six patients were in critical condition with internal injuries and broken bones, Spencer said.

The small 32-bed hospital triggered its disaster response plan and called in 25 doctors and nurses to treat the injured, Spencer said. Volunteers fluent in German and French came in to interpret for the doctors.

''One of the complicating factors is that many of the people do not speak English. They speak French or German as their primary language. We brought in interpreters to help,'' Spencer said.

Even before the patients arrived at the Bishop hospital, Spencer said, a plane was en route from Reno to pick up victims. Six were subsequently flown to Washoe and another eight were taken by paramedics to Mammoth.

About 12 to 15 others were treated in the emergency room and released, Spencer said. Bishop police took them to City Hall and then helped find them lodging.

DALLAS (MAY 19) UPI - Awaiting signs of pre-summit progress on the diplomatic front, President Bush hit the political trail for a work-and-play weekend in a cross-country pursuit of megabucks for the Republican Party.

A high-priced fund-rasier in Dallas for the Texas GOP, where the tab ran as high as $25,000 a couple, was the first stop of a three-state swing Friday that began as U.S. officials in Moscow worked overtime to remove clouds hanging over the superpower summit less than two weeks away.

Before hitting the road, Bush declined to comment on reports of possible progress on arms control and other summit priorities during meetings in Moscow between Secretary of State James Baker and top Soviet officials.

With Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev due to arrive in Washington May 30 for a summit both leaders had hoped would showcase cuts in strategic, conventional and chemical weapons, the pressure was on to overcome nagging problems exacerbated by what U.S. officials criticized as recent Soviet backsliding.

Administration officials were guarded in their assessments of the Moscow talks and forecasts the conflict over Lithuania could ease enough to remove it as a potential irritant at the summit.

Bush acknowledged Wednesday that the Soviet coercion of Lithuania had ''certainly put some tension'' into preparations for the summit, but held to the official U.S. line that the meeting with Gorbachev would at least serve as evidence U.S.-Soviet relations have entered a new phase where even disagreements can be aired without rancor.

Hope for a successful summit rose a notch Friday on the news Gorbachev had met with Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene in a gesture that could signal a move toward reconciliation over Lithuania's bid for independence.

Echoing Baker, who saw Prunskiene in Moscow after the Gorbachev meeting, White House press secertary Marlin Fitzwater called the development ''an encouraging sign'' that could mean Western calls for dialogue to resolve the stand off will be heeded.

The first leg of his political trip took Bush home to Texas, where he labored in the fields for the GOP in the 1960s. Fitzwater said Bush is especially interest in the statewide races, because the state stands to gain as many as three congressional seats due to the population changes being measured in the 1990 census.

Because those new House districts - and by implication the GOP's chance of winning them - ultimately could be shaped by the state's top elected officials, Fitzwater said, ''We think its important to provide money for the state races and influence reapportionment.''

In addition to Bush's personal interest, the Texas races feature some extra spice because of the comments of colorful Clayton Williams, the Republican candidate for governor.

Williams stirred no small amount of controversy by comparing rape to bad weather - ''If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it,'' he quipped - and admitting that he frequented prostitutes while growing up in West Texas.

In a bit of understatement, Bush praised Williams Friday night for having ''his own energetic style'' and said: ''I am for you 100 percent. You must and you will win this race.''

Speaking at a GOP fund-raiser in Dallas, Bush called the next six months crucial to Texas and the country. ''The future is at stake and we've got to join together,'' the president said.

The wisecracking Williams is locked in a hard-fought battle with Democratic State Treasurer Ann Richards, who has been on the political defensive herself over a refusal to say whether she used illegal drugs.

GOP State Chairman Fred Meyer estimated the dinner in Dallas could bring in up to $1.5 million and suggested the stakes were high. With Republicans within reach of solid gains this fall, he said, ''This dinner had better be good.''

Bush, who got the campaign season off to an early start this year, will stump Monday for Dave Frohnmayer, the Republican candidate for governor in Oregon, and stop in California, the No. 1 GOP target for the fall, for a big-money fund-raiser at the home of industrialist David Murdock.

In between, the ever-active 65-year-old chief executive was slated to drop in on the headquarters of the 1990 Economic Summit in Houston, hit the PGA Seniors golf tour, deliver a commencement address at the University of Texas and dispense awards for voluntarism.

(MAY 19) UPI - Paul O'Neill reaffirmed Friday night that sometimes baseball percentages are nothing more than hooey.

O'Neill homered off Ken Dayley with two out in the ninth inning, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 1-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dayley, 1-1, the left-handed set-up man in the St. Louis bullpen, struck out right-handed hitters Todd Benzinger and Luis Quinones to start the ninth. That brought up O'Neill, a left-handed hitter who has been plagued by southpaws throughout his career.

But O'Neill responded with an opposite-field home run for his fourth homer of the season.

''It's a funny game,'' Reds Manager Lou Piniella said. ''Dayley strikes out two right-handers and then gives up a homer to a lefty, O'Neill.''

The homer was the fourth of the season for O'Neill, who has had problems against lefties.

O'Neill said he ''can't remember winning a game with a homer in the last of the ninth. I wasn't sure the ball was out when I hit it, but I watched the left fielder go back and then jump for it at the wall. It was a pitch high and away and I knew I hit it good, but that was all.''

Dayley said he thought O'Neill's drive was going to hit off the wall.

''But it must have kept on going,'' he said. ''Then I saw Vinnie (Coleman) going to the wall and looking up, and that was the game.''

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog second-guessed Dayley's location on the home-run pitch.

''O'Neill likes the ball up and away, and that's exactly where Dayley threw it,'' Herzog said.

O'Neill's heroics brought to an end a brilliant pitching duel between two starters coming off offseason surgery - Reds right-hander Ron Robinson and St. Louis lefty Greg Mathews.

''I'd have to say that two guys who had surgery really operated on us tonight,'' said Benzinger, who went 1-for-4. ''It must have been a mistake pitch by Dayley, up and out to O'Neill, who really took care of it.''

Robinson left after walking Jose Oquendo leading off the eighth. Norm Charlton, 3-0, replaced him and pitched two perfect innings, striking out the side in the ninth.

''I was throwing strikes, mixing my pitches,'' said Charlton, who induced Mathews to ground into the Reds' fourth double play of the game in the eighth.

Mathews gave up four hits over eight innings before giving way to Dayley to start the ninth.

Elsewhere in the National League on Friday, Pittsburgh ripped Atlanta 9-3, Chicago blanked Houston 7-0, San Diego doubled up New York 6-3, Los Angeles clipped Philadelphia 4-2 and San Francisco belted Montreal 7-2.

In the American League, it was: Kansas City 4, New York 1; Baltimore 13, Texas 1; Minnesota 6, Boston 0; Cleveland 5, Seattle 0; California 4, Toronto 2; Detroit 8, Chicago 2; and Milwaukee 5, Oakland 0.

Pirates 9, Braves 3

At Atlanta, Bobby Bonilla smacked his first career grand slam and Wally Backman pounded out four hits to help the Pirates end a three-game losing streak. Pittsburgh collected 15 hits to back the pitching of Bob Walk, 4-3 who gave up five hits and one walk over 6 2-3 innings. Atlanta starter

Marty Clary, 1-2, took the loss.

Cubs 7, Astros 0

At Houston, Andre Dawson drove home three runs and Mike Harkey pitched a six-hitter over eight innings to lead Chicago. Harkey, 4-1, walked three and struck out four for the win. Houston starter Bill Gullickson, 2-3, gave up seven hits and five runs over 1 1-3 innings as the Astros lost their seventh game in their last eight outings.

Padres 6, Mets 3

At San Diego, Garry Templeton belted a grand slam and Joe Carter hit a solo home run to help the Padres hand Frank Viola his first loss of the year. Viola, 7-1, had entered the game leading the majors in wins and ERA. Bruce Hurst, 3-4, allowed three runs, seven hits and four walks over five innings for the win. Craig Lefferts pitched the final two innings for his fourth save.

Dodgers 4, Phillies 2

At Los Angeles, Rick Dempsey hit two home runs to power the Dodgers. Dempsey, playing in his fourth decade, homered twice in a game for the fifth time in his career. Tim Belcher, 3-3, allowed six hits over seven innings for the win, and Jay Howell recorded his first save of the year after coming off the disabled list earlier in the day. Bruce Ruffin, 2-4, took the loss.

Giants 7, Expos 2

At San Francisco, Will Clark broke a tie with a wind-blown RBI single, igniting a five-run seventh inning for the Giants. San Francisco sent 11 men to the plate in the seventh to make a winner of Atlee Hammaker, 3-2, who pitched two-thirds of an inning in relief. Steve Frey, 2-1, lost in relief of starter Oil Can Boyd.

(MAY 19) UPI - After the Orioles battered Bobby Witt with a record-tying string of singles, the shellshocked pitcher conceded he received the pounding of a lifetime.

Baltimore hammered Witt for eight consecutive singles and built a seven-run first-inning cushion Friday night en route to a 13-1 pasting of the Texas Rangers.

''I've never seen anything like it,'' said Witt, who surrendered 10 hits in 4 1-3 innings. ''I was making good pitches and they were hitting everything I was throwing. I can go back to Little League. I don't remember anything like that happening to me.''

Witt, 1-5, also allowed nine earned runs, which tied a club record for most allowed in a game.

Rookie first baseman Diego Segui drove in four RBI, and Mickey Tettleton and Joe Orsulak had four hits apiece as Baltimore snapped a three-game losing streak.

Witt's bewilderment contrasted with the mood in the Orioles' clubhouse, which was marked by amazement and a sense of humor.

''It's crazy,'' said Tettleton, who collected a career-high four hits. ''One night you can't make contact. The next night you're getting hits.''

David Johnson, who was the beneficiary of the Orioles' season-high 17-hit attack, joked about the evening.

''If I would have lost that game, they would have sent me back to Class Z '' said Johnson, 3-2, who scattered eight hits and struck out five. ''It was a lot of fun watching all those hits.''

The eight singles tied an American League record set on May 7, 1951 by the Washington Senators against the Cleveland Indians and by the Oakland Athletics against the Chicago White Sox on Sept. 27, 1981.

Phil Bradley walked to open the first inning, but was retired on Steve Finley's groundout. Cal Ripken beat out an infield single and Orsulak singled, scoring Finley. That was followed by consecutive RBI singles by Randy Milligan, Tettleton, Craig Worthington, Segui, Billy Ripken and Bradley.

''I was happy to see the runs,'' said Orioles Manager Frank Robinson. ''We didn't hit the ball great, but people don't ask you how you hit them. They just ask did you?''

NEW YORK (MAY 19) UPI - Protesters enraged by a jury verdict clearing the alleged ringleader in the Bensonhurst racial killing of murder charges stormed through Brooklyn neighborhoods in a demonstration of anger, authorities said Saturday.

Volatile outbursts from blacks in a number of Brooklyn neighborhoods punctuated the cool Friday evening air in the hours after Keith Mondello, 19, was acquitted of murder and manslaughter charges in the killing of 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins, who was attacked by a white mob on Aug. 23. The demonstrations had dissipated by midnight, police said.

Mondello's co-defendant, Joseph Fama, 19, the alleged triggerman in the killing, was convicted Thursday of second-degree murder with ''depraved indifference to human life'' but cleared of intentional murder.

In separate incidents around the borough Friday night, blacks clashed with television crews, white motorists and police. No demonstrators were arrested.

Chanting demonstrators massing outside the home of Hawkins' family in the predominantly black and Hispanic East New York section of Brooklyn smashed the windows of a television news van, slightly injuring several television crew members in one of several melees.

The journalists were not seriously injured in the fights, which began about 9 p.m. after more than 200 chanting demonstrators gathered around the Hawkins'home, said Doug Kahn, news assignment editor for WPIX-TV.

A heavy object hurled through the window of a WPIX-TV van struck reporter Ed Miller as he was preparing for a live broadcast segment, Kahn said.

Miller was taken to nearby Brookdale Hospital, where admitting doctors said his nose may have been broken, Kahn said. A hospital spokeswoman was unable to provide details of his injuries.

An unidentified CBS Network news cameraman also suffered a broken finger, but the circumstances surrounding the attack on him were unclear, Kahn said. Network personnel brought the cameraman to an unidentified Manhattan hospital.

There were earlier reports that personnel from WCBS-TV and WABC-TV had suffered slight injuries in the disturbances, but police and spokesmen for the station could not confirm those.

By early Saturday morning, the protests had died down and police reported no disturbances. After beefing up their patrols in certain areas, police reduced the number of officers to normal strength.

After the verdict in the Mondello case was announced at 6 p.m. Friday, more than 150 protesters who had gathered in front of the courthouse surged out onto the streets, enraged that the white teenager had been cleared of the most serious charges.

They were joined by scores of angry demonstrators who rushed out of the courtroom, some of them overturning trash cans.

Protesters flipped over and tore apart four blue police barricades, scattering parts of them onto the courthouse steps and onto cars.

At least one person, a freelance photographer, was reported injured in the melee.

Bands of demonstrators branched out in different directions in the general area of the courthouse, with some walking as far the Albee Square Mall a mile away and chanting against the verdict.

Some protesters circled the courthouse, while others went with Hawkins' father, Moses Stewart, and the Rev. Al Sharpton to the nearby offices of activist-lawyer C. Vernon Mason.

Stewart waved a hand to more than 75 people gathered outside, pounding his fist in the air to their chants after leaving Mason's office.

One person threw a garbage can that smashed a plate glass window of a coffee shop near the courthouse.

''The cops didn't do nothing,'' said the shop's owner, Louis Alexandris, who said no one was arrested for the incident.

Demonstrators chanting ''Yusuf, Yusuf!'' rocked passing cars, one of them with two children inside.

''The guy who admitted he had the bat gets off,'' said an angry Kwasi Mensa, a Harlem resident originally from Ghana. ''He admitted in the newspaper he was the leader.

''It's very upsetting,'' Mensa said. ''America should practice what it preaches.''

In the Fort Greene section about 25 blocks from the courthouse, about 200 protesters, mostly young people, marched through the streets at 7 p.m., said a resident of the area who asked that her name not be used.

They yelled, ''Yusuf!'' and pounced on a car, smashing its window while trying to overturn it and push the white driver out, the resident said. Police could not confirm the incident.

The resident said many shops along the street closed quickly following the verdict.

NEW YORK (MAY 19) UPI - Already heated racial tensions erupted into violent protests with the acquital on murder charges of a white youth accused of leading a mob that slayed a black teenager in the city's most explosive racial case in years.

Keith Mondello, 19, was cleared of all murder and manslaughter counts Friday but convicted of lesser charges in the fatal shooting Aug. 23 of Yusuf Hawkins, 16, who ventured into a predominantly white Brooklyn neighborhood to look at a used car.

The verdict came a day after a separate jury found Mondello's co-defendant Joseph Fama, also 19, guilty of murder in the frenzied attack last summer in the Brooklyn neighborhood of Bensonhurst.

Mondello, who stood with tears streaming down his face as they verdict was read, was found guilty of riot, weapons possession and a series of lesser charges that could bring him a minimum of one and one-third years in prison to a maximum of 24.

The courtroom erupted into pandemonium when the jury's decision was announced in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn, with scores of angry demonstrators rushing outside, some of them overturning trash cans as they marched through the streets.

Additional protests erupted later in the evening as tension welled. One group of people pounced on a car and tried flipping it and pulling the white driver out, a witness said. Police reported several television cameramen were slightly hurt in one melee.

Mayor David Dinkins appealed to New Yorkers for calm.

''I have been informed that crowds objecting to the decision have gathered in the streets of Brooklyn to protest the verdict and have destroyed property and disrupted civil order,'' he said. ''There can be no excuse for lawlessness.

By Saturday morning, the protests had dissipated and police said there were no disturbances.

When the ''not guilty'' verdicts were announced, the Mondello family hugged in tears as the family of the slain youth shouted at them, one saying, ''You'll get yours.'' A wailing Diane Hawkins, the dead boy's mother, pounded her fists on her knees and fought off all attempts to console her.

The jury - composed of six whites, three blacks and three Hispanics - deliberated for 11 days before reaching a decision.

Outside the courtroom, Mondello's attorney, Stephen Murphy, said, ''I think Mr. Mondello was happy with the verdict. But when a young man's dead and another young man's in jail for murder, I don't think there's any winners.''

Prosecutor James Kohler said he was concerned the verdict would be ''misunderstood,'' noting that ''Keith Mondello was not acquitted of all crimes ... (he) was found guilty of several crimes.''

Bail for Mondello was revoked after the verdict and he was sent directly to jail. Sentencing was set for June 11. Mondello faces a minimum of one and one-third to four years in prison, and he could get a maximum eight to 24 years if Justice Thaddeus Owens orders consecutive sentences.

Protesters massed outside the courthouse after the verdict, and the crowd grew to about 150. Protesters flipped over and tore apart four blue police barricades, scattering parts of them onto the courthouse steps and onto cars.

At least one person, a freelance photographer, was reported hurt in the melee. The extent of injury and condition were unavailable.

Bands of demonstrators branched out in different directions in the general area.

One person threw a garbage can that smashed a plate glass window of a coffee shop. No arrests were made.

Demonstrators chanting ''Yusuf, Yusuf!'' rocked passing cars, one of them with two children inside.

''It's very upsetting,'' Kwasi Mensa, a Ghana native now living in Harlem, said angrily of the verdict. ''America should practice what it preaches.''

(MAY 19) UPI - Tensions are running high in Brooklyn following Friday's acquittal of murder and manslaughter charges against the alleged ringleader of last August's racial slaying in the Bensonhurst neighborhood. Protesters enraged by the ruling gathered outside the home of Yusuf Hawkin's parents, where they roughed up T-V news crews and harassed cars driven by whites. Earlier, New York City Mayor David Dinkins pleaded for peace and calm.

Parts of Oliver North's diaries made public Friday may solidify the claims of skeptics who say President Bush was aware of the Iran-Contra scandal as it UNfolded. Although most of the entries are so cryptic that it's hard to determine exactly what they mean, one analyst with the National Security Archive says the diaries- quote- ''suggests that Bush knew earlier that this could be arms for hostages.''

The impasse between Lithuania and Moscow may be easing. Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene Friday pledged to bring before her republic's parliament demands made by Soviet President Gorbachev. Gorbachev said Friday he is willing to negotiate with the independence-minded Baltic state so long as it abides by the Soviet constitution.

Federal agents Friday raided a tunnel the length of a football field which they say was used by drug runners for months to smuggle cocaine from Mexico to the United States. Authorities sniffed out the concrete tunnel after snaring a flatbed truck last week which ferried nearly one ton of cocaine from the shaft. The entry to the 30-foot deep tunnel is in a Mexican luxury home, beneath a pool table that is hydraulically lifted.

CAGAYAN DE ORO, PHILIPPINES (MAY 19) UPI - Soldiers exhumed the bodies of 15 people believed to have been suspected government informers executed by communist rebels, the military said Saturday.

Brig. Gen. Hermogenes Peralta, a military regional commander, said the 15 bodies were dug up Friday from mass graves outside Tagapaa village, 550 miles south of Manila.

Peralta told reporters in his headquarters in nearby Cagayan de Oro city that a captured communist rebel, who served as the secretary of the ''kangaroo court'' that convicted the victims, led the soldiers to the mass graves.

He said the guerrilla court thought the victims were agents who passed information to the military. They were executed early this year, Peralta said.

''The victims bore gunshot wounds and burns, indicating that they were tortured before they were executed,'' Peralta said.

Officials said purges in the 19,000-member communist New People's Army indicate deep divisions in the guerrilla leadership that has weakened the 21-year insurgency.

(MAY 18) UPI - Thunderstorms and showers hit rain-weary north Texas and the South Saturday, while officials in central Texas and Nebraska cleaned up from tornadoes and high winds that caused widespread damage.

Twisters damaged as many as 30 mobile homes, uprooted trees and downed fences near Pflugerville, Texas, north of Austin Friday, but caused no injuries.

''We really lucked out on this one,'' said Lt. George Meek of the Travis County Sheriff's Office. ''We really came out good.''

Another tornado was reported north of Waco near the community of Chalk Bluff, but caused only minor damage, said McLennan County sheriff's dispatcher David Evans.

Large hail, high winds and tornadoes tore through western Nebraska Friday night. One a tornado destroyed mobile homes in the unincorporated village of Sarben, officials said.

''A couple of trailer homes were destroyed and one house with the roof blown off. There were no injuries reported,'' said Mark Marshall, Keith County Sheriff's Department dispatcher.

There also were reports of tornado damage to farm buildings in two nearby counties, officials said.

Thunderstorms whipped up orange size hail near the central Kansas city of Great Bend, but no damage was reported.

Rain fell across parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

The rain continued to fuel flooding along the surging Trinity River in southeast Texas.

The Trinity River Authority increased the release of water through the Livingston Dam to 100,800 cubic feet per second, more than five times the normal rate and one that would probably be maintained for several days. A flow of 20,000 cfs is enough to cause flooding.

Red Cross disaster administrator Bubba Haley estimated 900 houses in San Jacinto County and 40 homes in Polk County have been destroyed or seriously damaged.

The National Weather Service also reported flooding across portions of New Jersey, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio due to heavy rains this week.

Hundreds of residents have been evacuated from homes in 11 central and southern Indiana counties. Sinkholes as large as 20 feet by 20 feet threatened some homes and landslides closed roads in two counties. More rain was expected through Wednesday.

Skies were mostly clear in the East and West. Temperatures were in the 40s in the northern Plains and northern Rockies; 50s in the Northwest, California, the Great Basin, the Middle Atlantic Region the Northeast; 60s in the nation's midsection; and 70s in southern Florida and Arizona.

MOSCOW (MAY 19) UPI - The Lithuanian government met in a special session Saturday to discuss Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand that the republic rescind or suspend its declaration of independence.

Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene met with Gorbachev in Moscow Thursday night to propose a compromise, and the Soviet leader insisted the issue of the March 11 independence proclamation still needed to be clarified.

Prunskiene met with government ministers, the presidium of the Parliament and other deputies Saturday afternoon to discuss the issue, the Lithuanian information bureau said. A formal session of the republic's Parliament was to be held later in the day.

Lithuania has offered to suspend laws implementing the declaration of independence but Gorbachev told Prunskiene the declaration itself must be suspended or revoked before any formal negotiations with the republic can begin.

In Moscow, visiting U.S. Secretary of State James Baker told reporters he was encouraged Gorbachev and Prunskiene had met and said he discussed the Lithuanian crisis in depth with Gorbachev during five hours of talks Friday.

Before meeting with Baker, Gorbachev said he is willing to ''explore any possibilities'' with the secession-bent Baltic republics as long as they observe the Soviet Constitution.

While Prunskiene signaled Friday an easing of Lithuania's two-month showdown with Moscow, the situations in Latvia and Estonia, which are also seeking freedom from Soviet rule, remained tense.

In Riga, Latvian President Anatolijs Gorbunovs went on television to appeal for calm and conservative Communist leader Alfred Rubiks warned of ''serious confrontation'' in the heavily Russian republic.

In Tallinn, the Estonian legislature revoked the legal status of a labor union dominated by Russian workers three days after anti-independence demonstrators tried to storm the Parliament building.

The Soviet Interior Ministry, fulfilling Gorbachev's twin decrees Monday condemning the Latvian and Estonian independence declarations, instructed its local police ''to take measures without delay to enhance the maintenance of public order and legality in the two republics,'' the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

Prunskiene, head of the defiant Lithuanian government that proclaimed independence March 11, met with Baker on Friday after an hourlong session with Gorbachev and Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov the previous evening.

''We are ready tomorrow to discuss very specifically in the (Lithuanian) Parliament the position of the Soviet Union ... that is to say, an appeal to suspend the declaration itself ... and make a decision after the subject has been discussed in detail,'' Prunskiene told reporters following her talks with Baker.

Prunskiene said the Soviet leaders had implied they were prepared to extend the economic blockade Gorbachev ordered last month if Lithuania refuses to annul its March 11 independence proclamation.

''Gorbachev wants (us) to renounce or stop'' the declaration, said Bronius

Kuzmickas, a deputy chairman of the Lithuanian Parliament who accompanied Prunskiene to Moscow. ''But we don't mean it in such a sense. What does it mean to freeze (the proclamation)? We will discuss that tomorrow.''

Radical deputies in the Russian republic's new legislature stormed out of the session in a dispute over a proposed letter condemning Lithuania's declaration of independence.

Baker, in Moscow for arms control talks to prepare for the May 30-June 3 superpower summit, welcomed the talks Thursday evening between Gorbachev and Prunskiene.

''We are very hopeful, as we have been for some time, that a dialogue will begin,'' Baker told reporters. ''We found it encouraging that Mrs. Prunskiene was able to meet with President Gorbachev yesterday.''

(MAY 19) UPI - Students on opposite ends of the United States wrapped up protests Friday after winning battles with their respective administrations. In Middletown, Connecticut, students at Wesleyan University ended a 10-day hunger strike after gaining a ''general agreement'' to ease racial tensions on campus. And in Oakland, California, students at Mills College woN'T have to be co-eds afterall. School trustees rescinded a decision that would have allowed males to enroll in 1991.

The Illinois state House has approved a measure that would require newspapers in Illinois to use recycled paper beginning in January. Under the House legislation, at least 22 percent of a paper's newsprint would have to be recycled by the start of next year. The state Senate is scheduled to consider the measure, which calls for offenders to receive fines of up to one-thousand dollars and as much as 30 days in jail.

MOSCOW (MAY 19) UPI - A freight train collided with a Soviet passenger train Saturday near the Black Sea resort of Gagra and the official Tass news agency said there were an unspecified number of casualties.

The crash occurred at 6:48 a.m. near the Gantiadi station outside the small Black Sea resort town of Gagra, 1,235 miles south of Moscow.

The passenger train was en route to Moscow from Tbilisi, the capital of the republic of Georgia, when it was hit by the freight train, Tass said. The cause of the accident was under investigation.

Tass said ''there are casualties'' but did not give details. The report said doctors and medical teams flew to Gagra from Tbilisi to help the injured.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (MAY 19) UPI - An inter-city bus and a truck collided on a major road at Lazarevac, 37 miles south of the Yugoslav capital Saturday, killing six people and injuring 21, police said.

Doctors in Belgrade's medical center said six of the injured were in serious condition.

In another mishap, a Lockheed-60 light plane of the Valjevo Aero Club with a crew of six aboard crashed on takeoff Friday evening, killing the pilot and two other persons and seriously injuring three others.

The plane, which had planned to drop advertising leaflets over the town of Titovo Uzice, 120 miles southwest of Belgrade, failed to take off and crashed at the end of the runway, police said.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (MAY 19) UPI - Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos warned Saturday an abrupt U.S. military withdrawal from the Philippines would create a security vacuum that could spark a big power rivalry in Southeast Asia.

Ramos made the remarks a day after Manila and Washington ended five days of talks that settled a compensation dispute but held over discussions for a new treaty to cover U.S. bases in the Philippines, whose leases expire Sept. 16, 1991.

Chief U.S. negotiator Richard Armitage said although the compensation dispute has been settled, the future of the giant Clark Air Base, Subic Bay Naval station and four smaller facilities cannot be sustained ''simply on the basis of money.''

Most members of the Philippine Senate, which would have to ratify a new treaty, are opposed to the continuation of the U.S. presence.

Ramos, in a speech to graduates of the Command and General Staff College at the army heaquarters, said, ''There are still pressure points in Southeast Asia and these could provide extra-regional powers the opportunity to exploit the strategic void.

''Any adventurist posture by the greater powers will only strain our capability to advance and defend our national security, especially in the short term,'' he said. Ramos did not identify the powers.

Ramos said closure of the bases would force member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to double their defense spending ''to make up for the vacuum left by the Americans.''

The defense secretary also called on ASEAN - the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand, Singapore and Brunei - to forge a regional defense alliance based on a self-reliant defense industry to prepare for a U.S. withdrawal in the future.

ASEAN has refused a political role, preferring to concentrate on being an economic and social organization.

The outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines, meanwhile, accused President Corazon Aquino's government of ''traitorous moves'' and called on Filipinos to intensify their ''political and military struggle'' against the U.S. bases.

In a statement sent to news agencies, the CPP ''called on all patriotic forces to unite and prevent the U.S. imperialists, the Aquino government and other local traitors from reimposing the U.S. military bases on our people.''

Rebels of the New People's Army, the CPP's 19,000-member armed wing, have killed 11 Americans in the past three years to express their opposition to the bases. The victims included two airmen who were shot to death on May 14 outside Clark air base.

LEXINGTON, VA (MAY 19) UPI - Gov. L. Douglas Wilder told Saturday's graduating class at the Virginia Military Institute that the federal courts should decide whether women should be admitted to the all-male academy.

''I am prepared to have the Department of Justice make its case, for VMI to defend its position - if need be for the Commonwealth ... which it has not yet done ... to state its case - and for the courts to rule,'' Wilder told the 215 VMI graduates and their families and friends.

The nation's first black elected governor, a defendant in a lawsuit by the Justice Department that seeks to force the state-supported school to admit women, told the audience that whatever the outcome, the school would endure.

''My charge to you is to stand prepared to accept that decision - whatever it may be - to uphold the law that you have come to cherish and to know through command, and to remain loyal to and supportive of VMI whatever its structure,'' Wilder said.

The school is fighting the suit, which was prompted by a female high school student who wanted to apply at VMI. State Attorney General Mary Sue Terry is defending the all-male tradition.

Wilder. who has filed papers seeking to remove himself from the dispute, has refused to divulge his personal views because the matter is in litigation. His opinion likewise would not have any impact on the legal outcome, he contends.

MOSCOW (MAY 19) UPI - The United States and the Soviet Union reached agreement Saturday on limits for air- and sea-launched cruise missiles, the key stumbling block to a strategic arms treaty to be signed at the Washington summit.

''I think our discussions have resulted in some real accomplishments, and the progress we have made here makes me optimistic that we will have a productive summit in Washington,'' Secretary of State James Baker told reporters following marathon talks that forced him to extend his visit to Moscow.

Baker said the agreement provides for a ''complicated formula'' limiting the number of cruise missiles that is fair to both superpowers.

''There is going to be a substantial reduction in strategic nuclear weapons because of this treaty,'' he said.

Baker's announcement made it more likely that President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev will sign the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, or START, during their May 30-June 3 summit.

Baker also announced major progress on separate agreements that would limit chemical-weapons production and the testing of nuclear weapons.

The secretary's pre-summit visit included five hours of talks with Gorbachev, several long meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and all-night bargaining sessions between the two men's technical teams.

''We have just completed four days of detailed talks,'' Baker told reporters. ''These were some of the most intense talks in this (Bush) administration.''

Baker said the talks had focused on four areas: arms control, the crisis in Lithuania and the rest of the Baltic region, German reunification and the crippled Soviet economy.

In Houston, Bush noted there had been some ''interesting developments (in Moscow) ... some encouraging things, some problems need to be solved. So, it's a mixed review right now. And we'll keep going forward.''

''We want the Gorbachev summit to be successful,'' the president said. ''But it's going to take some give on the Soviet side in my view. But we are going to keep pushing.''

The secretary of state said the two sides had made a breakthrough in negotiations on the START accord Bush and Gorbachev had hoped to sign at the Washington summit.

''We reached agreement on the two most vexing problems ... air-launched cruise missiles and sea-launched cruise misiles,'' Baker said.

Baker said he and Shevardnadze had also reached agreement on a ''precedent-setting'' chemical weapons treaty and protocols for limiting nuclear tests.

Baker added, however, that there was ''less progress than we hoped for'' was in talks on an accord to slash conventional forces in Europe.

Baker also met Friday with Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene and said he was ''very encouraged'' that she had met earlier with Gorbachev to discuss a compromise to end the crisis over Baltic secession.

Prunskiene discussed with Gorbachev Thursday a compromise proposal approved by the Lithuanian Parliament that would have the rebellious republic suspend laws implementing its March 11 declaration of independence without actually renouncing the declaration itself. Gorbachev who has launched an economic blockade against Lithuania, has been insisting that the republic withdraw the independence declaration.

WASHINGTON (MAY 19) UPI - The Hubble Space Telescope will snap its historic first picture of the heavens Sunday, an important step toward launching the observatory's long-awaited probe of the universe, officials said Saturday.

The telescope's wide field planetary camera is expected to take a one-second exposure of a star cluster Sunday afternoon after engineers complete last-minute tests on the 12-ton observatory's guidance system.

Jim Elliott of the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., said the first images from the telescope will be received at about 1:49 p.m. EDT and processed images would be received at about 2:35.

The subject of the ''first light'' picture will be the 3 billion-year-old star cluster known as NGC 3532, located about 1,500 light years from Earth in the constellation Carina. A light year is about 5.8 trillion miles.

''We're all kind of excited,'' NASA astronomer Edward Weiler said. ''We're all looking forward to getting first light out of the way.''

The black-and-white picture, which officials had initially hoped to take about a week after the telescope was placed into orbit 381 miles above Earth April 25, is intended as a test and not to produce any new discoveries.

''To the public it's become a historical event. We look at it as an engineering test,'' Weiler said. ''We will probably learn nothing of any scientific value. None of us expect anything of scientific value.''

Because the $1.5 billion telescope has not been completely adjusted, the image's quality is expected to be only about equal to that of an equivalent telescope based on Earth on a good night.

''You'll hear a lot of cheering if that happens,'' Weiler said.

As the telescope orbited Earth Saturday, workers at the Goddard Space Center beamed computer commands to the observatory to complete a 36-hour focusing process that began at 10 p.m. Thursday.

The critical focusing process involved finding and locking onto stars and minutely moving the telescope's 12-inch secondary mirror, which is 16 feet from a 94-inch primary mirror. The secondary mirror can move only a total of little more than one-tenth of an inch.

Light enters the telescope, bounces off the primary mirror to the secondary mirror mounted back near the opening and then down through a hole in the primary mirror to a point where cameras and other instruments can record the concentrated light.

Ferried into space by the shuttle Discovery, the telescope is expected to revolutionize astronomy by studying stars, galaxies and planets in greater detail then ever before from its perch high above Earth's atmosphere.

By studying various forms of light, scientists hope the telescope will answer fundamental questions during its 15-year life about the birth of the universe, its current structure and age and perhaps ultimate fate.

An eight-month process of carefully turning on and adjusting the telescope has fallen about 10 days behind schedule due to a series of glitches with the sensitive telescope during the painstaking start-up.

While most of the problems have been resolved, workers are still trying to correct two unusual movements in the telescope, including a vibration that occurs whenever the craft goes in and out of sunlight.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (MAY 19) UPI - Some of the color film carried into a record high orbit aboard the shuttle Discovery last month was fogged by space radiation but officials say the crew was not in any danger.

Discovery and its five-member crew were launched into a 380-mile-high circular orbit April 24 to deploy the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope high above Earth's obscuring atmosphere.

At that altitude, roughly twice as high as shuttles typically fly, the astronauts were exposed to more radiation than usual from the Van Allen belts, doughnut-shaped clouds of charged particles that spiral about magnetic field lines between the north and south magnetic poles.

The belts begin in earnest about 600 miles up and Discovery flew closer to them than any previous shuttle flight.

Arnauld Nicogossian, director of life sciences at NASA headquarters in Washington, said Friday the radiation the Discovery crew was exposed to during the mission was ''like having several chest X-rays.''

Among the film that apparently was damaged by exposure to space radiation: spectacular high-resolution 70 mm ''IMAX'' footage shot for a commercial film designed to be shown on giant seven-story-tall screens.

''Apparently, there was some radiation damage,'' said a NASA official in Washington.

One of the experiments launched aboard Discovery involved a human skull loaded with sensors in an continuing project to characterize the threat posed by space radiation for crews on long-duration or high-altitude flights.

Andrei Konradi, a radiation expert at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said data from the skull had not been analyzed but readings from dosimeters mounted in the crew cabin showed a total exposure over the five-day flight of about 1.8 ''rad.''

''Rad'' stands for ''radiation abosorbed dose'' and the unit is used to describe the amount of radiation actually absorbed by a substance.

''The dosimeter at location No. 2, on the starboard wall of the crew cabin which probably gets the highest exposure of all the passive dosimeters we have, read something like 1.8 or so rad,'' Konradi said. ''We expected just about that. We expected a fairly high dose on this mission.''

Nicogossian said astronauts on previous long-duration missions like those aboard the Skylab space station in the 1970s received far more radiation than Discovery's crew.

''If you look at the previous missions, the long-duration missions, they can get up to 10 rads, cumulative dose,'' he said.

A physics textbook said an exposure to between 20 and 50 rad would cause ''some blood changes; 100-250 R, severe illness but recovery within six months; 400 R, fatal to 50 percent of the persons affected.''

Konradi said Discovery's crew was not in any danger from the radiation they were exposed to during the mission.

''It's not something I'm overly concerned about,'' Discovery co-pilot Charles Bolden said before launch. ''I feel the gain from this is far greater than the risk.''

Officials with IMAX Systems Corp. could not be reached for comment Friday on the condition of their film, but a NASA manager in Washington said the fogging only affected some of the footage.

''I haven't seen their footage yet,'' he said. ''The way they talk about it, most of it is useable and generally speaking, they're more critical than most people. We're expecting to see that footage here next week.''

Other NASA film aboard the shuttle also was slightly fogged by radiation exposure, according to William Robbins at the Johnson Space Center.

''We had some minor fogging on our film,'' he said. ''It was not to the extent where we lost any or there was any noticable damage to the image. The film that was affected was the color negative film because it has a lot of silver in it.

''We do know the exposure inside the spacecraft was within the limits that were expected for the mission and were safe for the astronauts.''

He said NASA workers plan to assemble a data base on radiation exposures for different altitudes ''so we can anticipate on different missions what type of exposure you could expect film to get.''

As for the film aboard Discovery, Robbins said, ''I'd rather have my film go through that than the Frankfort (West Germany) airport.''

#90139u0494 05/19/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (MAY 19) UPI - Tired but satisfied, special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh is now supervising the final phase of his long investigation into the Iran-Contra scandal, Ronald Reagan's biggest political disaster.

In an interview with United Press International, Walsh made it clear his investigation is continuing, although he would not discuss specific details.

Now that he has prosecuted all the ''central figures'' in the case, Walsh said, ''That would leave the supporting agencies and the supervising agency - the National Security Council itself.''

Although Walsh declined comment, legal and law enforcement sources outside his office expect a federal grand jury to examine the possibility of perjury by figures who testified during the congressional Iran-Contra hearings and in various court cases.

Oliver North, the retired Marine lieutenant colonel who was convicted in the scandal, will undoubtedly be given immunity and be forced to testify, these sources said.

North, a White House aide, worked on the National Security Council staff. John Poindexter, Reagan's recently convicted national security adviser, also is a prime candidate to testify, the sources said.

Neither North nor Poindexter have appeared before a grand jury.

In addition to examining the National Security Council, the CIA's role also may be scrutinized more closely.

So far, Walsh's office has prosecuted or negotiated guilty pleas with seven Iran-Contra defendants. The eighth case, involving a former high-ranking CIA official, was scuttled by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh on ''national security'' grounds; Walsh is appealing. A ninth man awaits trial in Baltimore.

By the end of the summer, Walsh expects to know when he can conclude his 3 1/2-year investigation. He is 78, tired and wants to return to Oklahoma City, where he lives. But he also says he fully intends to complete his job.

Being tired is ''no excuse for quitting,'' he said.

Walsh is a former federal judge. A Republican, he served as deputy attorney general under President Eisenhower and has a distinguished legal career.

He was named to investigate the scandal that dominated Reagan's second term. It was a complex scheme involving secret weapons sales to Iran in an effort to win freedom for American hostages in the Middle East.

Profits from the arms sales then were diverted to assist the Nicaraguan Contra rebels at a time when Congress had banned military aid.

Overall, Walsh said, the prosecutions have clearly established that it is illegal to lie to Congress.

''We have not prosecuted anybody for their political views or for their policy views,'' Walsh said. ''No one has been prosecuted because the president saw fit to try to get hostages released, regardless of what the national policy was.

''No one has been prosecuted because they sympathized with the Contras or because they helped the Contras. The basic prosecutions that have gone forward have been for deceiving Congress,'' he said.

Congress controls the money, Walsh noted, and when government officials or agencies undertake activities ''in conflict with congressional policy,'' Congress ''sooner or later is going to ask them about it.''

Then there are three choices, Walsh said. Tell the truth, hide the facts under a claim of ''executive privilege'' or lie.

''Now the last alternative is illegal, it's criminal, and that's what we've been prosecuting,'' Walsh said. ''They do not have the option of lying to Congress.''

''Congress has enormous powers of oversight,'' he said. ''And when Congress is exercising those oversight powers, it's entitled to honest answers. And if you don't give an honest answer, you're subject to prosecution. It's that simple.

''Deniability is a policy that is used in international affairs. But no one is entitled to follow a policy of false deniability to Congress, or to the courts.''

The last successful prosecution, of Poindexter, was a high point, Walsh said.

Poindexter, who was convicted on all five felony counts, awaits sentencing and is appealing. He faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine on each of the five counts.

''I think that the Poindexter verdict solidifies our efforts,'' Walsh said. ''It is a very unequivocal response to three years of effort. Litigation doesn't always come out that way.''

The Poindexter conviction was important for Walsh. The retired Navy rear admiral was the highest Reagan administration official to be tried on felony charges.

Also, Walsh said, Poindexter's five guilty verdicts established the illegality of ''a pattern of deception practiced against Congress'' by officials in the Reagan administration.

Although less dramatic than the diversion of arms profits to the Contras, the deception of Congress is really ''the more important concern,'' he said.

Asked why the public has largely lost interest in the Iran-Contra scandal, Walsh brought up the Watergate crisis that toppled the presidency of Richard Nixon in the mid-1970s.

Iran-Contra ''is a more subtle problem than Watergate, which was an outright burglary and coverup, and very easily understood,'' Walsh said. ''Trying to explain the significance of deception to a system of constitutional checks and balances is not a matter of a few words, it's not a matter of a single dramatic story or even a series of dramatic stories.

''It's an evolution of a very important concept, but one which doesn't grip people until they sit down and think about it a little while,'' he said.

Walsh admits he is ''bothered'' by criticism that the prosecutions have been expensive and no one has gone to jail for Iran-Contra crimes.

The defendants have received a series of probationary sentences and fines, accompanied by some community service assignments. So far, the prosecutions have cost taxpayers some $20 million.

''I am bothered by it,'' Walsh said, referring to the criticism. ''I'm concerned with the high expense, per case, that any independent counsel has to incur.''

But the expense is because of extraordinary security concerns in such cases, he said, adding the cost of the prosecutions is ''greatly magnified to satisfy the intelligence agencies,'' which are concerned about the disclosure of important security secrets.

Even typewriters must be modified to prevent electronic eavesdropping, Walsh said.

''At one point I had more security officers than I had lawyers,'' Walsh noted. ''I say this not critically - it's sort of a lament. It goes with the turf. This is what it costs when you prosecute intelligence cases.''

Walsh also said he has cut his office space by two-thirds since the North and Poindexter prosecutions, and currently has only eight full-time lawyers on his staff.

OAK RIDGE, TN (MAY 19) UPI - The Willow Brook Elementary School principal, who lost a bet that his students couldn't read 100,000 books in three months, will pay for his miscalculation by sitting on top of a five-story smokestack Tuesday.

''Weather permitting, I will be up there from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.,'' principal Craig Rigell said Friday. ''I'm very proud of the students.''

The wager grew out of a discussion with a reading specialist at the school about what would happen to an old smokestack there after remodeling.

The principal told the specialist, Martha Lewis, that if she could somehow tie the smokestack into improving the pupils' reading, he would climb the 50-foot structure.

Fourth grade math students figured out how many cartons of books it would take to fill the stack and they came up with 100,000, weighing about 30 tons.Then came the bet.

Officials said the zeal of the students turned up in several ways. One of the first grade classes used a bathtub for a reading room. And this week, the mother of one student caught her child reading with a flashlight under her bed covers when she was supposed to be sleeping.

Lewis said third graders took books to the cafeteria where they read after gulping down lunch.

Rigell said he plans to use his time on the stack Tuesday reading favorite book selections over a microphone while the children picnic around the stack.

CAIRO, EGYPT (MAY 19) UPI - Egypt said Saturday it had assurances from Israel that the Jewish state would not launch a first strike against any Arab country.

The Egyptian Middle East News Agency also reported that Israel wants to continue the Middle East peace process begun with Egypt but it did not mention specifically whether Israeli caretaker Premier Yitzhak Shamir had abandoned its reservations about a U.S.-sponsored plan calling for Israeli-Palestinian talks.

The agency said the assurances were received during recent contacts between Egypt and Israel, but gave no further details.

The report came several days after President Hosni Mubarak met with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in Moscow.

The reported Israeli statements appeared to be aimed at Iraq, which has threatened to use poison gas against Isreal if it tried to repeat a 1981 air strike on a nuclear reactor under construction near Baghdad.

There was no immediate reaction to the Egyptian report from either Israel or Iraq. Cairo-based Western diplomats said it was too early to judge the significance of the report.

But one envoy said if the assurances came from Shamir it indicated he is under pressure from the United States and Egypt to defuse the tension created in the region between Iraq on the one hand and Israel and a number of Western governments on the other.

''The assurances are timely because they come before the Arab summit in Baghdad later this month, when (Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein) is expected to receive pan-Arab support for his stance,'' the envoy said.

MENA did not reveal its sources but Egyptian government officials told United Press International the report was accurate.

''MENA has learned that as a result of contacts held lately between Egypt and Israel, Israel promised Egypt that it would not be the first to launch an attack on any Arab country,'' the news agency said.

''MENA also learned that Israel told Egypt it was keen on continuing the Middle East peace process with Egypt and reaching peace with the other Arab countries,'' the agency said.

Baker's five-point peace plan aimed at Israeli-Palestinian peace talks prompted disagreements in Israel and the collapse of the Likud-Labor coalition. But Israeli diplomats said the fault was not only Israel's because the Palestinians themselves were unable to agree on a delegation to talk to them.

FATHERLY ADVICE FOR SALE: A New York auction house is selling a 1967 letter Ronald Reagan wrote to daughter Patti, counseling her about the dangers of smoking and the benefits of telling the truth. The handwritten four-page letter, signed ''Love, Dad,'' is expected to bring between $40,000 and $45,000 when it is sold next month. The letter is a response to one a 14-year-old Patti wrote Reagan from boarding school to tell him that she had admitted to smoking cigarettes and was being punished. Reagan warned her against ''compromising the truth no matter how trivial'' and managed to put a sexist twist on smoking. ''Unfortunately, women are more susceptible to habits than men and find them much harder to break or change,'' he wrote. The Washington Post said Davis apparently sold the letter to another person who is auctioning it. A source told the Post that Davis, who has filed for divorce from husband Paul Grilley, needs the money so she can finish her third novel.

PICTURE THIS: Arsenio Hall is being sued for using photographs of Roseanne Barr's honeymoon on his late-night talk show. Free-lance photographer Alexander Byrne filed suit Friday in Los Angeles, claiming Hall violated his copyright protection by using the pictures in a routine on his show Jan. 29, the same day the photographs were published in the National Enquirer. The suit seeks profits from commercials aired on the show and to prevent Hall from using the photos in the future.

KINISON TARGETED: Andrew Dice Clay isn't the only controversial comedian around. Sam Kinison, whose act includes jokes about homosexuals, will be the target of a protest by the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, known as ACT-UP, outside the theater where he will be performing Sunday night in Seattle. ''Sam Kinison is not funny. He is dangerous,'' ACT-UP member Patrick Hagerty said. ''He gives people license to laugh at others' pain. He gives people license to attack us.'' The same group picketed Kinison's Seattle appearance last June and set off a stink bomb inside the theater before he went on stage.

ART OF GETTY: Aileen Getty is the granddaughter of oil tycoon J. Paul Getty but says her artwork is a little too subversive for her family. ''Eccentricity runs rampant in our family but the art - well it's put me at odds with the family,'' said Getty, 30. ''The Gettys are corporate-minded and this doesn't go down well. In this family, this wealthy family, I found myself in an unusual situation with a passion for politics and ideas.'' Getty's exhibit, which opened Saturday at a Los Angeles gallery, is composed of pieces she made of excerpts from the FBI's internal glossary. ''My work says that only when you mistrust, doubt and question learned truth, can the truth be learned,'' says Getty, who has two sons from her failed marriage to actress Elizabeth Taylor's son, Christopher Wilding. ''It is crucial to government that the people remain ignorant. My endeavor is what motivates and pushes me from that ignorant place.''

WARSAW, POLAND (MAY 19) UPI - Four soldiers on guard duty were shot to death Saturday by an apparently berserk fellow sentry who then fled the garrison, the official news agency PAP said.

It identified the soldier as Pvt. Janusz Ochnik and said he opened fire with a submachine gun on the commander of the guard unit and three other soldiers, killing them instantly.

PAP said the incident occurred at the Military Communication College at Zegrze, 20 miles from Warsaw.

It said the sentry fled and ''is being chased,'' but gave no other details.

BALTIMORE (MAY 19) UPI - A second straight day of sunshine, mild temperatures and cooling breezes Saturday produced a dry, fast and fair Pimlico track for Unbridled and the eight 3-year-olds in the Preakness Stakes trying to stop the Triple Crown bid of the Kentucky Derby winner.

The good weather and fast track were a refreshing change. Rain and off-tracks were the rule rather than the exception during the dozens of spring prep races that produced the field of 15 Derby starters, and several days of downpours resulted in a ''good'' track for Unbridled's come-from-behind Derby triumph by 3 1-2 lengths over Summer Squall.

Afterwards, jockey Gary Stevens blamed the drying, cuppy Churchill Downs surface for the dismal showing by Mister Frisky, the 9-5 favorite who tired and faded to a dismal eighth-place finish, his first defeat in 17 races.

The early races on the Preakness Day card indicated the track was tailor-made to Mister Frisky's speed and front-running style. Closers like Unbridled made up no ground on the front-runners in the first two races.

In the first race, for example, Tony Cool led wire to wire to win a six-furlong, $17,000 allowance in a crisp time of 1:10 4-5.

The track condition no doubt led to the early betting action that made Mister Frisky the 2-1 favorite by a small amount over Summer Squall, who also was 2-1. The betters dropped Unbridled, the 7-5 favorite on the program line, to 5-2 as the third choice.

Like Mister Frisky, Summer Squall also is a speed horse, though he usually runs just a little off the pace. His status among the bettors, however, was somewhat surprising considering the fact that he discharged a ''minor trickle'' of blood from his left nostril for four or five minutes after cooling out from a gallop Friday morning.

Summer Squall is a documented pulmonary bleeder and races on Lasix, a diuretic used to control the problem. Though trainer Neil Howard said the trickle should have no affect on Summer Squall's performance in the 1 3-16-mile Preakness, other horsemen expressed concern that the trickle might be a forwarning of a major pulmonary hemorrhage. Summer Squall's human connections had already announced that they will not risk the colt's health by racing him in the June 9 Belmont Stakes, final jewel of the Triple Crown, because Lasix is prohibited for racing in New York State.

The early odds on the other six starters were Land Rush, 8-1; Kentucky Jazz, 10-1; Fighting Notion, 25-1; Baron de Vaux, 30-1; J.R.'s Horizon, 60-1, and Music Prospector, 80-1.

Post time for the $686,000 race was set for 5:30 p.m. EDT.

The demonstrators slightly hurt several television crew members. Other demonstrators marched elsewhere in Brooklyn.

The demonstrations began after a jury cleared 19-year-old Keith Mondello of murder and manslaughter charges while convicting him of lesser offenses. Mondello had been accused of inciting the shooting of Hawkins. Joseph Fama, also 19, was convicted one day earlier of second-degree murder.

(MAY 19) UPI - Thunderstorms and showers Saturday hit rain-weary north Texas and the South, central Texas and Nebraska recovered from tornadoes and hundreds of Iowa residents fled high water.

In Sioux City, Iowa, heavy rains forced Perry Creek eight feet above flood stage and forced hundreds of people to evacuate and millions of dollars damage. More rain was expected.

City Manager Hank Sinda said the Iowa National Guard took more than 150 residents by boat to an emergency shelter at a high school. Another 80 people were evacuated from a nursing home and many other people found their own way to higher ground.

Sinda said the water was subsiding at mid-morning and Gov. Terry Branstad was to inspect the area later Saturday.

After three soggy days, New Englanders endured cloudy weather Saturday. Scattered showers were predicted for much of the region, especially the north, during the afternoon, with the high temperatures ranging from 50 degrees to the mid-60s. Forecasters said the rain would continue Saturday night and resume again Sunday afternoon.

Rain fell across parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana and continued to fuel flooding along the surging Trinity River in southeast Texas.

In Livingston, Texas, about 90 miles north of Houston, President Bush viewed natural catastrophe in his adopted homestate, flying to a dam swollen by flood waters and saying more federal assistance was under discussion.

''We've been talking about that,'' Bush said when asked if the government could do more to aid residents and businesses devastated by the flooding. ''The federal government wants to be as responsive as possible.''

The president said, however, he had received no additional requests for help and commended the efforts of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which is handling the case for the federal government.

The Trinity River Authority maintained the release of water through the Livingston Dam at 100,800 cubic feet per second, more than five times the normal rate.

The National Weather Service also reported flooding across portions of New Jersey, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas,

Kansas, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio due to heavy rains this week.

Hundreds of residents were evacuated from homes in 11 central and southern Indiana counties. Sinkholes as large as 20 feet by 20 feet threatened some homes and landslides closed roads in two counties. More rain was expected through Wednesday.

Twisters damaged as many as 30 mobile homes, uprooted trees and downed fences near Pflugerville, Texas, north of Austin Friday, but caused no injuries.

''We really lucked out on this one,'' said Lt. George Meek of the Travis County Sheriff's Office. ''We really came out good.''

Another tornado was reported north of Waco near Chalk Bluff but caused only minor damage, said McLennan County sheriff's dispatcher David Evans.

Large hail, high winds and tornadoes tore through western Nebraska Friday night. One tornado destroyed mobile homes in the unincorporated village of Sarben, officials said.

''A couple of trailer homes were destroyed and one house with the roof blown off. There were no injuries reported,'' said Mark Marshall, Keith County Sheriff's Department dispatcher.

There also were reports of tornado damage to farm buildings in two nearby counties, officials said.

Thunderstorms whipped up orange-sized hail near the central Kansas city of Great Bend, but no damage was reported.

ST. LOUIS (MAY 19) UPI - First lady Barbara Bush told graduating students at St. Louis University's 172nd commencement Saturday to ''seize the wind'' and take risks but reminded them of the importance of friendships and family.

Mrs. Bush told some of the almost 1,300 students who received degrees in a ceremony at St. Louis Arena that commitment to great causes, humor and personal relationships were the most important applications of a college education.

The first lady, whose rise to prominence because of her husband's career had been criticized as a poor example for women by female undergraduates of Wellesley College, where she is scheduled to speak at commencement, sprinkled her speech with references to her family.

She hailed her husband as ''one of the world's great risk takers'' who at different times in their marriage was a pilot, professor, salesman, businessman, congressman, diplomat and politician.

''Nearly all of you had ancestors who were liberty-loving risk takers,'' the first lady said while recommending that graduates place importance on personal involvement in issues such as her efforts to improve the nation's literacy.

Mrs. Bush also said the graduates should prize a sense of humor and pay close attention to their relationships with family and friends.

''You're a human being first, a husband and wife first, a son or a daughter first,'' she said. ''How sad it would be to fail at one of these things. You will regret time not spent with a husband or wife, a husband or daughter, a parent or friend.''

Mrs. Bush quoted entertainer Bill Cosby, who once said that ''being a parent is a harder job than being president of the United States.''

The first lady arrived in St. Louis earlier Saturday from Texas, where she had been with her husband on a political fundraising trip. She left the arena after her speech to fly home to Washington.

The speech was the third of four college commencements at which the first lady has been scheduled to speak this spring, said Jean Decker, Mrs. Bush's press secretary.

Mrs. Bush did not mention in her speech the controversy surrounding her next commencement speech June 2 at Wellesley College in Wellesley, Mass.

About 150 students at the college have signed a petition saying Mrs. Bush is not an appropriate commencement speaker for women because she attained prominence through her husband rather than on her own.

Mrs. Bush drew applause, however, from the arena when she said, ''Who knows, somewhere out there may be the future president of the United States, and I wish her well.''

(MAY 19) UPI - The latest news from around the world and across the nation... from the wires of United Press International.

The streets of Brooklyn calmed down this morning after an evening of protests over a jury's verdict in the Bensonhurst racial killing.

The jury yesterday cleared the alleged ringleader of murder in a white mob's killing of a black 16-year-old, Yusef Hawkins.

Volatile outbursts from blacks occurred in a number of Brooklyn neighborhoods last night. In separate incidents around the borough, blacks clashed with television crews, white motorists and police. Several t-v crew members were hurt slightly outside the Hawkins family's home.

19-year-old Keith Mondello was acquitted of murder and manslaughter charges. However, he was convicted of lesser charges... among them rioting and possessing weapons.

The courtroom erupted into pandemonium when the jury's decision was announced in New York State Supreme Court... with scores of angry demonstrators rushing outside, some of them overturning trash cans as they marched through the streets. Additional protests erupted later as the tension heightened.

Mayor David Dinkins appealed to New Yorkers for calm. In his words- ''There can be NO excuse for lawlessness.''

One day earlier, 19-year-old Joseph Fama- the alleged triggerman in Hawkins' murder- was convicted of second-degree murder.

In a new development in the case yesterday, a woman claiming to have witnessed the shooting came forward and said she heard Mondello urge Fama to shoot the black teen-ager.

The unidentified witness, her face hidden and voice electronically disguised, appeared on a television program. She said she saw Fama shoot Hawkins.

Prosecutors said they would interview the woman to determine whether her statements could be used against the remaining defendants.

(MAY 19) UPI - Lithuanian Prime Minister Prunskiene has pledged to inform the republic's Parliament of President Gorbachev's demands.

The Soviet leader continues to call for the break-away republic to rescind its declaration of independence.

Visiting Secratary of State Baker says he's encouraged by Prunskiene's meeting with Gorbachev Thursday. Baker adds he discussed the situation with Gorbachev during their own meeting.

While the crisis may be easing between Lithuania and Moscow, the mood remains tense in Latvia and Estonia, which also are seeking freedom from the Soviet Union.

The Estonian legislature has revoked the legal status of a labor union dominated by Russian workers. The move comes three days after anti-independence protesters tried to storm the Parliament building. In Latvia, President Gorbunovs appeared on televsion to appeal for calm.

The government has made its first admission linking Agent Orange to a serious medical problem.

Along with the admission, Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward Derwinski directed his agency to pay eight-Million dollars a year to Vietnam veterans afflicted by a broad class of cancers.

The cancers are soft-tissue sarcomas, tumors found in such tissues as muscles or body fat.

An estimated 11-hundred Vietnam veterans or their families are expected to receive compensation. Payments are projected to be eight-Million dollars a year. Some will be retroactive.

The decision to compensate veterans suffering from soft-tissue sarcomas was prompted by recommendations of an advisory committee. The panel concluded there is ''at least as likely as NOT'' a significant statistical link between exposure to the herbicide and the difficult-to-diagnose cancers.

Derwinski announced in March the V-A would give about 20-Million dollars a year to about 17-hunred Vietnam vets who have non-Hodgkin's lymphoma... a rare cancer. But the V-A did NOT acknowledge a link to Agent Orange.

(MAY 19) UPI - House and Senate negotiators failed to agree yesterday on a spending bill that includes 720-Million dollars in emergency aid for Panama and Nicaragua. President Bush requested the money months ago and is frustrated about the delay in completing work on the bill.

Legislators have agreed on all new spending included in the measure. But Democratic Senator Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, says conferees still must meet with other congressional leaders to discuss military spending cuts.

The cuts are needed to off-set the non-mandatory spending in the bill. Inouye says the reductions total one-point-seven-BILLION dollars and adds some would lessen U-S combat readiness.

Details of the defense cuts will be made public Monday.

Once the bill is complete, Congress must pass an authorization bill so the president can spend the money. And that presents a problem because House Democrats, angered by the killing of six Jesuit priests by Salvadoran troops, have added a provision cutting military aid to El Salvador.

The administration opposes the Democratic proposal.

ATLANTA (MAY 19) UPI - A male prostitute was being held in jail Saturday as authorities in three states investigated claims he killed as many as seven male clients.

Henry Hodges, 24, was extradited to Atlanta from North Carolina Friday night and was scheduled to appear in municipal court Saturday for a bond hearing.

Hodges, of Nashville, Tenn., was arrested early Friday outside the house of a Shelby, N.C., man he is accused of strangling at an Atlanta hotel Wednesday.

Police said Hodges confessed Friday that he met his latest victim, Michael Whisnant, at a nightclub frequented by homosexual men in Atlanta. Hodges said he went to Whisnant's motel room and strangled him after Whisnant refused to pay for sex.

Atlanta Deputy Police Chief Eldrin Bell said a security officer at the Atlanta Hilton & Towers found Whisnant's body Thursday night after friends of the man said he had missed several events at an electronics conference.

Whisnant was found handcuffed with a curtain cord around his neck underneath the bed in his hotel room, said Police Cmdr. Dale Ledbetter of the Shelby, N.C., police force.

Hodges also admitted to the slaying of a Nashville man Monday, police said.

Ronnie Bassett, 37, a line worker with Bell Telephone Co., was found in his home handcuffed and strangled with a nylon cord. Nashville police said they believe the slaying also involved a homosexual encounter.

Hodges told authorities in Shelby, N.C., he killed Whisnant and Bassett, and that there were at least five other similar cases, officials said. Ledbetter said Hodges did not say when or where the other killings occurred.

Shelby police issued a nationwide bulletin Friday asking for help in the other cases, Ledbetter said.

Hodges and a 15-year-old female companion were arrested near Whisnant's home, the apparent target of a burglary. The girl was found in Whisnant's car and told police Hodges was about to burglarize Whisnant's house, police said.

She said she ran away from home in Ohio three years ago and has been living with Hodges for about a year, police said.

The girl, who is not being identified because of her age, said she and Hodges took a television and a videocassette recorder from Bassett's house Ledbetter said.

Whisnant was an engineer for a company that manufacturers air compressors and refrigeration equipment.

Police said no wallet or identification was found on Whisnant's body and officers believe those items were used to locate the victim's home in Shelby.

ATHENS, GA (MAY 20) UPI - Raising taxes and reducing defense spending are needed to lower the budget deficit, but President Bush must take the lead in endorsing such a move and not wait for Congress, Sen. Sam Nunn said Saturday.

But Nunn, who spoke in his home state at commencement exercises at the University of Georgia Law School, said he will not support any deficit-reduction plan unless the president calls for it.

''What he wants is for members of Congress to demand that he raise taxes '' Nunn said of Bush. ''But that's not going to happen.

''We're much better off to take some castor oil now than we are to have major surgery in a few years,'' said the Democrat. ''It's time for the president to lead.''

Nunn praised Bush's ''candor'' on addressing the nation's budget problems, saying it was ''coming out of the White House for the first time in years.''

''It's slow, but it's better than the smoke and mirrors we had for eight years (under Ronald Reagan),'' he said.

Nunn said cuts in defense spending would help trim the deficit, but he criticized the Defense Department for not developing new strategies to address the changes in central Europe.

To invade Western Europe, the Soviets now would have to ''fight their way across Poland and fight their way across East Germany,'' said Nunn, who chairs the Armed Services Committee.

BALTIMORE (MAY 20) UPI - Summer Squall swept by Kentucky Derby winner Unbridled in mid-stretch Saturday and drew away to finish first in the 115th Preakness Stakes, tying the prestigious horse race's second-fastest time ever.

Mister Frisky finished third in a photo finish over 60-1 outsider Music Prospector.

Summer Squall - a small lean colt with a pulmonary bleeding condition - posted a time of 1:53 3-5 under Pat Day. That mark tied for the second-fastest Preakness time in history with Gate Dancer, one-fifth off Tank's Prospect record run in 1985. Day rode Tank's Prospect.

The Kentucky Derby-winning Unbridled's loss in the Preakness means horse racing fans cannot see a Triple Crown coronation this year.

The third leg of the crown comes in three weeks with the Belmont Stakes June 9. Racing will be denied a chance to see a showdown between the Derby and Preakness winners in that running, however. Dogwood Stable announced 12 days ago that Summmer Squall would not go on to the Belmont primarily because of a New York state prohibition against the use of Lasix, a diuretic to control bleeding.

Summer Squall's triumph Saturday was remarkable in light of the physical maladies he has suffered over the past nine months. Less than 36 hours before the 1 3-16 mile Preakness, the colt discharged a ''trickle of blood'' after cooling down from a routine gallop.

Though trainer Neil Howard said he was unconcerned about the event, other horsemen contended Dogwood was risking a major pulmonary hemorrhage like the one Summer Squall suffered after a workout in February.

The February bleeding episode came just as the colt prepared to make a comeback from a hairline fracture of a cannon bone.

Day said after winning his second Preakness he had been nervous about the colt's health going into the race but ''Neil put my fears to rest.

''He told me this morning that if he wasn't 100 percent, he wouldn't send him over there. He finished bigtime, like I knew he was capable of.''

Day deserved considerable praise for the 2 1-4 length triumph. While Craig Perret took Unbridled outside around the turn to take the lead with three-sixteenths of a mile to go, Day saved ground inside, just as he did through the early part of the race. Had he gotten shut off, the 36-year-old jockey who was so badly criticized for his second-place finishes with Easy Goer in the 1989 Derby and Preakness would have been an easy target for second-guessing again.

Day already had been subjected to some Monday-morning quarterbacking for his decision to ride Summer Squall rather than Unbridled in the Kentucky Derby. Day had the mount when Unbridled won the Florida Derby but immediately gave him up to stick with Summer Squall for the Triple Crown races.

''I still think I made the right choice and today I proved it.''

KEY WEST, FL (MAY 20) UPI - A small flotilla of pleasure boats gathered Saturday to carry Cuban exiles across the Straits of Florida to waters off Cuba for a demonstration on the anniversary of the island nation's independence.

Josea Basulto, a spokesman for flotilla organizers, said 55 boats had arrived by late Saturday. That was fewer than the 100 boats predicted, but Basulto pointed out that additional crafts were expected to arrive before the flotilla's pre-dawn departure Sunday.

Basulto said 114 boats had registered to take part in the Flotilla de la Hermandad, or Flotilla of Brotherhood.

''It is Cubans letting the world know that Cubans in exile have solidarity with the Cubans on the island who have not obtained freedom,'' said Pepin Pujol, a member of the Association of Veterans of Special Missions, the Cuban group that is coordinating the flotilla.

''We hope that the world gets to know that Cuba remains the last absolute dictatorship in the Americas,'' he said.

Organizers said the flotilla would proceed to a point 13 1/2 miles off the coast of Cuba, despite a Coast Guard recommendation that the boats remain outside 20 miles.

''We are not expecting any confrontation,'' said Alexis Rodriguez, a coordinator of the flotilla. ''In fact, we feel Fidel (Castro, the Cuban strongman) will ignore the flotilla altogether to cut his losses.''

Basulto also said that organizers had asked individual boat captains not to carry firearms aboard their boats, but added that flotilla organizers could not enforce that request.

The flotilla was expected to depart from marinas around Key West before dawn Sunday on the day Cubans celebrate their independence from Spain.

In 1898, a treaty was signed that separated Cuba and Spain. On May 20, 1902, the Republic of Cuba was born.

Boats making up the flotilla ranged in size from small 16-foot pleasure boats to larger oceangoing cruisers, and at least one high-performance speedboat.

Key West and Cuba are separated by 90 miles of water.

Organizers said they expected to arrive at their destination off the coast of Cuba at about 1 p.m. EDT and then proceed 6 miles to the west parallel to the coastline.

Some of the smaller boats may not make the complete crossing, depending on the weather, organizers said. The Coast Guard expected seas of between 4 and 6 feet Sunday.

Once in place off the coast, organizers plan to hold a religious ceremony in memory of those Cubans who have lost their lives trying to leave the island.

''We will cry a little, we will laugh a little. We will sing some songs,'' said Rene Touzat, a musician who left Cuba in 1946 and now lives in Miami.

''At least the people in Cuba will know we have not forgotten,'' said Rodriguez.

Many of those gathered Saturday for the flotilla were middle-age and older like Pujol, but still driven by the cause of Cuban freedom.

''The bones are getting old, but the spirit is still young, and the ideals do not die,'' Pujol said. ''Freedom is worth fighting for and it is worth giving your life for.''

Coast Guard was not going to provide an official escort, Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Karonis said. He added, however, that the flotilla would be tracked on radar and by air.

''We will patrol the general area,'' he said.

Organizers said they would offer assistance to any refugees encountered during the flotilla, but then notify the Coast Guard. Immigration officials have warned participants that they will face penalties if they transport undocumented aliens.

(MAY 19) UPI - The United States and the Soviet Union today agreed on limiting cruise missiles. The air- and sea-launched weapons had been a key stumbling block to a strategic arms treaty to be signed at the Washington summit in two weeks. The accord came during marathon talks between U-S and Soviet negotiators in Moscow. The session forced U-S Secretary of State Baker to extend his visit to Moscow. Baker says he's now optimistic about the coming summit, which he predicted will be ''productive.''

Leaders in Lithuania met today in a special session to discuss Moscow's demand that the Baltic republic rescind or suspend its declaration of independence. During talks this week between Lithuania's prime minister and Soviet President Gorbachev in Moscow, Lithuania offered to suspend laws implementing the independence declaration. But Gorbachev indicated that's NOT good enough. He says the declaration itself must be suspended or revoked before any formal negotiations with the republic can begin.

(MAY 19) UPI - NASA officials say space radiation fogged some color film carried into a record high orbit aboard the shuttle Discovery last month. But officials say the five-member crew was NOT in any danger. Officials say the amount of radiation the astronauts were exposed to was ''like having several chest X-rays.'' They say, however, that some film apparently was damaged by exposure to the radiation, including spectacular high-resolution 70-millimeter ''IMAX'' footage shot for a commercial film to be shown on giant, seven-story-tall screens.

Space agency officials also say the Hubble Space Telescope will snap its historic first space picture tomorrow afternoon. Officials say the telescope's wide-field planetary camera is expected to take a one-second exposure of a star cluster after engineers complete last-minute tests on the 12-ton observatory's guidance system. The event is an important step toward launching the observatory's long-awaited probe of the universe.

He bet that students at Willow Brook Elementary School couldn't read 100-thousand books in three months. They did and now he has to pay for his miscalculation by sitting on top of a five-story smokestack for five hours.

(MAY 19) UPI - After four days of detailed talks, U-S and Soviet negotiators have agreed on a news arms pact. Secretary of State James Baker describes the deal as a ''complicated formula'' that ''substantially'' reduces strategic nuclear weapons for both sides. The treaty may be signed at the coming Washington summit.

President Bush told reporters in Houston today that he'd give mixed reviews to the preparations for the coming summit. Bush says he hopes the stage has been set for a successful summit, but adds- quoting here- ''it's going to take some give on the Soviet side'' to complete an arms control agenda.

Philippine Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos has warned that a sudden U-S troop withdrawal from the Philippines will create a security vacuum in Southeast Asia. Ramos says there are still pressure points in the area. He called on other Asian countries to forge a regional defense alliance if U-S bases are shut down.

The Lebanese magazine that exposed the U-S arms-for-hostages scandal now reports that negotiations are under way to free Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite and three other Western hostages. The magazine also says American captive Thomas Sutherland is seriously ill and would be among the first of any Americans freed.

A report in Egypt says Israel has promised NOT to launch a first strike against any Arab country. The Egyptian Middle East News Agency also reports that Israel wants to continue the Mideast peace process, but did NOT specify whether top Israeli officials have re-considered a U-S-sponsored peace plan.

(MAY 19) UPI - Tens of thousands of students in South Korea continue heated protests to commemorate the 10th anniversary of a bloody pro-democracy movement. In Kwangju, where government troops killed nearly 200 people in 1980, some 30-thousand students denounced President Roh-Tae-Woo and the United States.

British Prime Minister Thatcher is urging that South Africa be given access to the international finance she says is needed to further dismantle apartheid. Thatcher met with South African President Frederik de Klerk today outside London, giving a warm reception to his campaign for European support.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela pleaded with the international community today to reject South African calls to lift economic sanctions. Mandela told U-N officials meeting in Tripoli that sanctions are one of the most effective weapons for peace in South Africa.

Foreign ministers from the 12 European Community nations are meeting in the Irish countryside today to prepare for a June summit aimed at strengthening the E-C's political ties. The two-day meeting in County Kerry, Ireland, is NOT expected to produce any major announcements or new policy.

Heavy rains continue to pound much of the country, including Texas, where some houses near the Trinity River are reported to be floating away. In Sioux City, Iowa, rising flood water is forcing hundreds of people to flee their low-lying homes. The Weather Service reports flooding in 13 other states.

(MAY 19) UPI - U-S and Soviet negotiators agree on a key issue in strategic arms reduction... President Bush looks to a successful summit with his Soviet counterpart in Washington... Flooding is reported in 15 states... And Washington is warned against making a sudden withdrawal of U-S military bases from the Philippines... U-P-I details these stories and more, next.

There's been a break-through in pre-summit talks in Moscow.

U-S and Soviet officials agreed on a strategic arms treaty after four days and nights of hard-fought negotiations.

Secretary of State Baker stayed an extra day in Moscow to clinch the deal. He says the pact substantially reduces nuclear air- and sea-launched missiles, as well as limits nuclear weapons testing.

A separate agreement virtually eliminates the Soviet and American stockpiles of chemical weapons.

Baker says the stop-and-go talks were among the most intense ever in the Bush administration. And he added that the Soviet-Lithuania dispute cast a dark shadow over negotiations.

The secretary's pre-summit visit included five hours of talks with Soviet President Gorbachev, several long meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and all-night bargaining sessions with technical teams.

Presidents Bush and Gorbachev are expected to sign the new START treaty later this month in Washington.

(MAY 19) UPI - Philippine Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos says a sudden withdrawal of U-S troops from the Philippines will leave a security vacuum which may spark power struggles in the region.

Ramos issued the warning today during a speech at Philippine army headquarters.

He says closure of U-S bases would force member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to double their defense spending

''to make up for the vacuum left by the Americans.''

Ramos called on ASEAN nations... which include the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand, Singapore and Brunei... to forge a regional defense alliance.

To date, ASEAN has refused a political role, preferring to concentrate on being an economic and social organization.

Ramos commented one day after Manila and Washington settled a nagging compensation dispute that threatened to derail talks to renew the leases of U-S military bases in the Philippines. The leases expire on September 16th.

Most members of the Philippine Senate... which would have to ratify a new treaty... are opposed to the continuation of the U-S presence.

A report from Lebanon today says talks are under way to free Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite and three other Westerners being held hostage.

The story... in the magazine that broke the U-S arms-for-hostages deal... also says American captive Thomas Sutherland is seriously ill and would be among the first Americans freed in any future deal.

The Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for kidnapping Sutherland, who disappeared on June 9th, 1985, in Moslem west Beirut.

The magazine says the current negotiations are aimed at freeing Waite, two other Britons and an Irishman. It adds that the talks to free Irish school teacher Brian Keenan are separate from those on behalf of the Britons.

Ireland's ambassador to Lebanon paid a two-day visit to Lebanon this week hoping to win Keenan's release. The report says an Irish envoy is now conducting behind-the-scene talks to secure Keenan's release.

The magazine gave NO details of the parties involved in the talks to free the British hostages.

(MAY 19) UPI - The South African government today granted many of the nation's top black and communist leaders temporary immunity from prosecution.

State-run South African radio says the order by chief racial reform negotiator Gerrit Viljoen begins today for 38 politicians from the African National Congress and the South African Communist Party.

Viljoen... who's acting president during Frederik de Klerk's current European tour... granted the immunity under new legislation aimed at promoting power-sharing negotiations.

The Indemnity Act gives the president sweeping powers to grant temporary or permanent indemnity from prosecution to virtually anyone.

The move allows exiled A-N-C and communist leaders to safely return to South Africa and participate in formal power-sharing talks with the government.

A-N-C internal leader Walter Sisulu hailed the announcement, saying- quote- ''any step towards the normalization of the situation in the country is welcome.''

South African President Frederik de Klerk met for 90 minutes today with British Prime Minister Thatcher at her country home outside London.

Thatcher embraced de Klerk's campaign for European support... echoing his call for access to international finance to help his government continue its dismantling of apartheid.

Thatcher has long argued that South Africa should be rewarded for any steps taken toward the end of the racist system. She wants the European Community to relax sanctions by ending the ban on new investment, tourism and academic exchanges with South Africa.

Black South African nationalist leader Nelson Mandela arrived in Cairo, Egypt, today from Libya... where earlier he urged U-N officials meeting in Tripoli to continue economic sanctions.

Mandela said the armed struggle and sanctions against Pretoria must go on until there is one man, one vote. The African National Congress leader described sanctions as- quote- ''one of the most effective weapons for peace in South Africa.''

(MAY 19) UPI - NASA says space radiation that destroyed some of the color film aboard the shuttle Discovery did NOT endanger the crew.

Discovery and its five-member crew were launched into a record-high orbit last month to deploy the Hubble Space Telescope high above Earth's obscuring atmosphere.

At that altitude... roughly twice as high as shuttles typically fly... the astronauts were exposed to more radiation than usual from the Van Allen belts... doughnut-shaped clouds of charged particles that spiral about magnetic field lines between the north and south magnetic poles.

Discovery flew closer to the belts than any previous shuttle flight.

But NASA's director of life sciences says the radiation blast is about as strong as a typical chest X-ray.

Discovery co-pilot Charles Bolden says he's NOT overly concerned about the exposure.

(MAY 19) UPI - Secretary of State Baker and his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, are optimistic their bosses will have an ''important and fruitful'' summit later this month. During talks in Moscow, the men laid the groundwork with a breakthrough arms treaty which substantially reduces air- and sea-launched nuclear missiles and virtually eliminates stockpiles of chemical weapons.

In Texas, President Bush gave the treaty a mixed review, however. He says he's ''hopeful'' his Washington meeting with Soviet President Gorbachev will be successful... but says the Soviets still need to cut conventional forces in Europe. Baker and Shevardnaze stalemated on that score. Bush and Gorbachev have said they want to agree on troop reductions by this fall.

South African President de Klerk is in London, while black nationalist leader 6elson Mandela travels to Cairo...

Nicaraguan Contra leaders stand by their decision to halt demobilization...

These stories... and more... next, from the worldwide wires of United Press International:

U-S Secretary of State Baker and his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, are both optimistic that the upcoming Washington superpower summit will be a productive one.

Baker and Soviet leaders in Moscow reached agreement today on several key issues in their pre-summit negotiations.

But in Houston, President Bush displayed restrained enthusiasm... saying there must be more give on the Soviet side.

The two sides agreed to limits on air- and sea-launched cruise missiles... a key stumbling block to reductions of strategic arms. But Baker stresses that Bush and Soviet President Gorbachev will NOT be able to sign the Strategic Arms Reduction Treat when they meet May 30th to June 3rd.

He says the leaders are likely to sign a chemical weapons treaty. It'll ban production of all chemical weapons... mandate immediate destruction of 80 percent of their chemical weapons stockpiles... and reduce the stockpiles to two percent within eight years.

Baker says the leaders may also sign a pact limiting nuclear testing.

(MAY 19) UPI - In London, only a few anti-apartheid protesters today turned out to heckle visiting South African President Frederick de Klerk today... proof that de Klerk's reforms are being noticed.

London is de Klerk's fifth city in a whistle-stop tour to persuade European leaders to relax economic sanctions against South Africa. De Klerk met with British Prime Minister Thatcher at her country home outside London.

During the 90-minute session, Thatcher applauded de Klerk's reforms and promised to go to bat for him in convincing other European countries to end the ban on new investment, tourism and academic exchanges in South Africa.

Thatcher has long encouraged the international community to use carrots rather than sticks to bring an end to apartheid. She ordered Britain to drop voluntary sanctions against South Africa in February when de Klerk freed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela .

Mandela arrived today in Cairo, Egypt, from Tripoli. He was quoted by Libyan radio saying the armed struggle against the white minority government will continue until de Klerk adopts a one-man, one-vote policy.

There will apparently be NO quick disbanding of Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Contra leaders today say they'll stand by a decision to halt the disarming of their forces... despite a government claim that the rebels will continue their demobilization.

Contra leader Israel Galeano announced yesterday he was indefinitely suspending an agreement to disarm his U-S-backed forces by June 10th. Galeano cited attacks on his Contra units and their failure to receive promised provisions as reasons for his decision.

A Nicaraguan government official monitoring the disarmament says he spoke with Galeano and persuaded him to continue with the agreement.

Galeano could NOT be reached for comment today... but two other rebel commanders say the Contras will stick with the decision NOT to disarm.

A Western diplomat in Managua expresses doubts as to whether the rebels would actually lay down their arms when there's NO one to force them to do it. The diplomat charges the United States is prolonging the disarmament process by NOT taking a stand.

Amir Hawkins, the Reverend Al Sharpton and about 500 demonstrators went to Bensonhurst to protest yesterday's acquittal of Keith Mondello on murder and manslaughter charges. Mondello was accused of gathering the mob that killed Yusuf Hawkins.

Mondello was convicted of lesser charges and is being held in jail pending a June 11th sentencing.

Sharpton told the crowd that the rally was NOT- quote- ''to escalate tension, but escalate justice.''

The marchers were greeted by an equal number of counter-protesters jeering and shouting racial slurs. Despite the heated verbal exchanges, police say there were NO arrests.

Sharpton called for another demonstration next week to urge that civil Police say Hodges met his latest victim in a gay nightclub in Atlanta. They say Hodges admitted he killed the North Carolina man after he refused to pay for sex.

Hodges told police he killed a Nashville man earlier in the week... and says he has murdered at least five other men, although he has NOT said when or where those slayings occurred.

(MAY 19) UPI - A NASA astronomer says the space agency will be excited if tomorrow's picture-taking test of the Hubble Space Telescope is successful... even though they'll learn nothing new.

The one-point-five-BILLION-dollar telescope is more than two weeks behind schedule in snapping its historic first picture.

Space agency officials say the telescope is expected to take a one-second exposure of a star cluster located about 15-hundred light years from Earth. The black-and-white photo is NOT intended to produce any new discoveries and will be NO better than those that can be taken from Earth.

Officials say the telescope will NOT begin producing significantly better pictures until it has been completely adjusted.

Scientists then hope the Hubble will answer fundamental questions about the birth of the universe and its current structure and age by studying various forms of light.

Eastern Europe woN'T go thirsty if Coca-Cola executives have anything to say about it.

Coca-Cola today inaugurated its largest bottling plant ever. Company officials say the facility... in the French port city of Dunkirk... will produce 64-hundred bottles of Coke per minute.

Company president Roberto Goizueta says the 63-Million-dollar plant is a sound investment, particularly in light of changes in Eastern Europe.

The collapse of the Berlin Wall, Goizueta says, has split the beverage market wide open. He says the company plans to ship two-Million more cases of Coke to East Germany... 12-Million cases in all.

Giozueta also says Coca-Cola has a new strategy to derail Pepsi's strong following in the Soviet Union.

(MAY 19) UPI - Moscow and Washington have agreed in principle to an arms pact that would reduce each side's air- and sea-based cruise missiles. The deal was reached after four days of hectic negotiating in Moscow and has prompted officials from both sides to view favorably this month's Washington summit.

President Bush says the compromise reached today is getting a ''mixed review.'' Bush told reporters in Houston that further progress toward an overarching arms pact requires that Moscow be more flexible.

A Nicaraguan official says the Contra leader who yesterday said the guerrilla group will NOT disarm as previously agreed admits he made ''a hasty decision.'' But other Contra leaders say they intend to stand by the declaration NOT to demobilize.

New York police say an estimated 500 protesters were met by an equal number of white residents today in the Brooklyn neighborhood of Bensonhurst, one day after a Bensonhurst man was acquitted of murdering a black teen-ager. The two sides taunted each other, but there was NO violence.

Fort Worth, Texas, authorities say a fifth man has died from gunshot wounds he sustained during a Monday shooting spree at a high-stakes poker game in a run-down cafe. Police have arrested two men for the massacre and are looking for two other suspects.

(MAY 19) UPI - There are conflicting reports from Nicaragua as to whether the Contra rebels will respect an agreement, signed last month, which calls for their demobilization. Contra leaders said yesterday they would NOT turn in their weapons. Today, the Nicaraguan government says... without confirmation... that the rebels will lay down their arms. Contra leaders reached today say they have NO intentions of demobilizing.

The Reverend Al Sharpton is calling for another demonstration next week in the New York neighborhood of Bensonhurst. Sharpton led some 500 demonstrators today to the predominantly white area of Brooklyn, where they were greeted with jeers and racial slurs. Sharpton urges civil rights charges be brought against a white youth acquitted of murder yesterday in the August 1989 slaying of black teen-ager Yusuf Hawkins.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela today lashed out against Israel for supporting South Africa's white-minority government. Speaking to reporters in Cairo, Mandela said there are a ''number of Jews holding high ranking posititions'' in the A-N-C. But he said Israel does NOT merit his organization's appreciation so long as it abets the racist government in Johannesburg.

Election results are in from 89 percent of the polling stations in the Dominican Republic, but official results woN'T be announced until authorities complete a detailed review of the voting. (MAY 19) UPI - A coalition of Brooklyn churches today sponsored a march designed to salve racial tensions in New York. Some 200 people participated in the rally outside a Korean-owned grocery store, which neighborhood blacks have boycotted since workers allegedly roughed up a Haitian woman last January. Yesterday, the reported abuse victim hit the grocer with a six-Million-dollar lawsuit.

Several dozen students at Northeast Missouri State University's graduation ceremonies today silently protested the anti-abortion views of the commencement speaker. Speaking was Missouri Attorney General William Wester, the plaintiff in last year's landmark Supreme Court case Webster versus Human Reproductive Health Services. The protesters drew hangers on their mortarboards.

Organizers of a flotilla of Cuban exiles say 114 vessels have signed up to take part in tomorrow's convoy in international waters off the Cuban coast. So far, 55 ships have assembled in Key West, Florida. Many of the participants of the so-called Flotilla of Brotherhood are middle-aged or older, and fervently desire a democratic Cuba. Orgaizers say they hope their efforts make Americans aware that communist reform has NOT extended to the Caribbean.

The top military official in the Philippines today warned that an abrupt withdrawal of U-S military personnel from the Pacific island nation could lead to disaster. BELGRADE (MAY 20) - A leader of the Serbian Democratic Party (SDP) of the western Yugoslav republic of Croatia, Miroslav Mlinar, was stabbed and wounded by unknown assailants in the town of Benkovac, the Tanjug agency reported Sunday.

Mr. Mlinar, SDP committee chairman for the small town near the Adriatic coast, after the attack late Saturday was rushed to hospital in nearby Zadar where he was reported out of danger.

No reason for the attack is known, but observers here suspect political motives. The election campaign last month in Croatia was marred by confrontations between Croation and Serbian nationalists in the town.

The leader of the Democratic Community of Croatia, Franjo Tudjman, who led his party to victory on a Croatian nationalist platform, had been threatened during a campaign meeting in Benkovac by an apparently deranged Serbian armed with a gun.

Serbians represent only 11 percent of the population in the Croatian Republic, although they are the largest ethnic group in the Yugoslav federation.

An opinion poll taken at the end of April indicated that the Serbian Communist Party, which also has been riding on a nationalist wave, would easily win if an election were held today in the Serbian Republic. Free elections in Serbia are to be held before the end of the year.

TUNIS (MAY 20) - Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi Sunday condemned Tel Aviv for the shooting of eight Palestinian workers by an Israeli, saying that the incident highlighted the need for an Israeli withdrawal from the occupied territories.

"This crime is another proof of the policies deployed by the Israeli occupation authorities who encourage deadly campaigns against the Palestinian population to be carried out by soldiers and settlers," Mr. Klibi said.

"These same authorities do not hesitate, in the framework of their repression against the valiant Palestinian intifada (uprising), to resort to the most barbaric practices, including attacks against civilian populations."

Mr. Klibi said Sunday's incident showed that "the elimination of Israeli presence from the occupied territories has become a vital need to ensure the protection of the Palestinian people and preserve peace in the Middle East."

An Israeli man, according to police wearing an army uniform he stole from his brother, shot dead the Palestinians near Tel Aviv and wounded 10 others when he sprayed them with bullets from an M-16 automatic rifle.

LONDON (MAY 20) - The death of a British journalist in Chile, officially a suicide, could be linked to illegal arms sales to Iraq, the newspaper The Independent on Sunday reported.

According to the weekly, Jonathan Moyle, 28, chief editor of a specialized magazine, Defence Helicopter World, was found hanged in his hotel room in Santiago March 31, but he had given no indication to anyone that he wanted to kill himself.

The newspaper points to other clues which contradict the suicide theory.

"The theory in Chile is that he was murdered by the Iraqis," the newspaper said, because he could have blown the whistle on plans by the Chilean company Cardoen SA to export an ultra-sophisticated missile guidance system to Iraq.

The Independent on Sunday said that the journalist had learned that the company had received an order for 50 new helicopters which were allegedly to be for civilian purposes.

The newspaper cast doubts on the purpose of the helicopters. Citing the Chilean judge who recently asked for a new inquiry into the death of Mr. Moyle, the name "Helios" -- the name of a missile guidance system -- appears several times in the dead journalist's notes.

"What would have been more threatening to Cardoen was for him to have discovered that it was to use a missile guidance system known as Helios," The Independent on Sunday said.

The paper's revelations come amid tensions between Iraq and Britain over British accusations that Baghdad had ordered steel tubes to make a "super-gun".

HYDERABAD, Pakistan (MAY 20) - Ethnic violence in this troubled Pakistani city is developing into "civil war" as rival groups are using rocket launchers for the first time, residents and press reports said Sunday.

This latest round of clashes between native Sindhis and Urdu-speaking Mohajir settlers from India has left more than 30 people dead and 120 injured since Monday, press reports said.

Paramilitary rangers and police have failed to restore normalcy despite an indefinte curfew since Tuesday, residents said, adding that guns and bombs continued to rock the city's sensitive areas Sunday.

Youths belonging to the nationalist Jeye Sindh organisations blocked the main National Highway, which links Hyderabad to the southern port city of Karachi and northern capital of Islamabad.

They set a bus on fire after shooting its driver in the head. A truck carrying bales of cotton was gutted during the three-hour blockade, which ended after troops came in, the reports said.

Panic gripped the city overnight as rumours spread that the drinking water had been poisoned, the reports said, adding that "insurgents" had stopped the water supply in other areas.

Some people fled to mosques and used public address systems to call on residents to follow "safety and security measures," reports said.

Several newspapers said the situation was rapidly developing into a "full-scale civil war."

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, now on a tour of Moslem countries to drum up support for Kashmiri militants campaigning for secession from New Delhi, has been informed of the latest developments, they said.

"Only drastic steps would seize the drift in the situation" in Hyderabad, the second city in Ms. Bhutto's home province of Sindh, Karachi's Daily News said, amid speculation of impending government action.

Residents said the ongoing violence took a dangerous turn Saturday when unidentified men fired at least five rockets and attacked rivals with mortars, causing unspecified casualties and damage to houses.

The worst hit areas were Preetabad, Qasimabad, Phuleli, Garikhata, Tando Agha and Tando Wali Mahmood. Several areas have become virtual battle zones with armed men holding their rooftop positions behind sandbags.

"The city is absolutely divided on ethnic basis," the Daily News said, adding that even the paramilitary rangers were unable to enter some areas and restricted to patrolling main streets.

An angry crowd attacked several places Saturday: blocking the National Highway, they entered a commercial centre and looted several shops after killing three people, including a teenaged girl.

Rival groups looted several shops, attacked buses and private cars and set several vehicles on fire, police said.

The situation here has been grim since Friday, after six bomb explosions led to the cancellation of religious services at several mosques.

Newspapers said high-level meetings were being held daily on the situation in Hyderabad. Quoting reliable sources, they said the Bhutto government, whose Pakistan People's Party holds a majority in Sindh, was seriously considering handing over the city to the army.

The army could be given full power to curb ethnic violence, they said, adding that a large-scale operation to remove terrorists from Sindh was possible.

Authorities fear a "foreign hand" in ethnic unrest in Sindh, which borders India. No country has been named but newspapers said involvement by Pakistan's historic rival India, allegedly backing a separatist Sindhu Desh campaign, could not be ruled out.

Meanwhile, authorities have reportedly arrested Qadir Magsi, described as a leader of the September 30, 1988 clashes in which masked men killed some 250 people.

BUCHAREST (MAY 20) - Romanians began voting Sunday, in the country's first free election after four decades of communist rule, amid opposition fears that the elections have been rigged.

Radu Campeaunu, one of three candidates for president, after casting his vote early Sunday morning, said that he feared "the election reults are being manipulated", and the National Liberal Party (NLP) leader said he hoped "for the future of our country, that public opinion will not be betrayed."

Mr. Campeaunu said that if the National Salvation Front (NSF) wins the election, an agreement to cooperate is certain among "the three historic parties", the NLP, the National Peasants Party (NPP), led by Ion Ratiu, and the Social Democrats.

Interim President Ion Iliescu, presidential candidate of the ruling NSF, was among the first to cast his ballot Sunday. He made no comment as he emerged from a polling station on Bucharest's Radina Bordei Street.

Mr.Iliescu is expected to win the presidential election, but the NSF is not certain to emerge victorious in parliament.

Some 16 million voters will be electing a president and a parliament in polls which opened at 6:00 a.m. and were scheduled to close at 11 p.m. (2000 GMT). Early indications at polling stations, both in the capital and the provinces, were that there will be a good turnout as lineups began forming early in the morning.

JAMMU, India (MAY 20) - Indian federal and state administrations are putting into effect a three-tier plan they hope will effectively seal Kashmir's border with Pakistan against large scale infiltration, security sources said here Sunday.

The plan involves the evacuation of some strategic border villages, the plugging of routes frequently used by armed Moslem militants and a second defence line to net those who do make it through the line of actual control, the sources said.

Authority has already been given for the evacuation of several villages, and security forces have started plugging entry points from the Poonch sector in the Jammu region to the Gulmarg and Shopian areas in the northern Kashmir Valley section.

In addition three companies of two battalions of the counter-insurgency trained Assam Rifles destined to take up blocking positions in the Keran and Karnah border sections for Kashmir have already arrived in Srinagar, the sources said.

Security officials here feel that the first parts of the plan, already in effect, have started to show results and slowed infiltration of Kashmiri Moslem militants from the one third of Kashmir which is under Pakistani control.

India charges that Moslem militants fighting for independence in Indian-controlled Kashmir receive arms and training in Pakistan, a charge denied by Islamabad which is however campaigning for a plebiscite in Kashmir.

During the past month at least 300 border infiltrators have been arrested by Indian troops along the Kashmir border by official count and large quantities of arms and ammunition seized.

NEW YORK (MAY 20) - Cuban President Fidel Castro may give videotaped testimony as a defense witness in the upcoming trial of ousted Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega, The New York Times reported Sunday.

"Fidel said he wants to help and is willing to do whatever he can to show Noriega is innocent," defense lawyer Frank Rubino told the Times.

Mr. Rubino visited Mr. Castro last month to gather documents that will "greatly help" efforts to show that Mr. Noriega -- a former general in Panama's now-defunct defense force -- carried out many apparently illegal activities in connection with his clandestine work for the U.S. Government.

He said the Cuban leader had agreed to provide videotaped testimony on Nr. Noriega's behalf.

Mr. Noriega, who was captured during the U.S. invasion of Panama in December, faces a dozen charges of cocaine trafficking and racketeering. He currently is jailed in Miami, Florida.

Mr. Noriega's trial is due to begin next year, but a preliminary hearing begins Monday in Miami.

The hearing was called to resolve a dispute over a U.S. decision to freeze all of Mr. Noriega's known bank accounts on the grounds that they contain drug profits.

His lawyers have asked to withdraw from the case, arguing they cannot be paid or mount an adequate defense while the bank accounts are frozen.

The Times, quoting Mr. Noriega's lawyers and Justice Department officials, also said the government was likely to disclose for the first time Monday how much it paid Mr. Noriega during his years as a U.S. intelligence operative.

Mr. Noriega claims to have legally received 11 million dollars from Washington and seven million dollars from other governments in exchange for his services as an informant or agent over the years, Mr. Rubino said.

Justice Department officials scoffed at such figures and said they would disclose at Monday's hearings that the U.S. Government actually paid a "far lower figure" to Mr. Noriega, the Times reported.

NEW DELHI (MAY 20) - Two special envoys of U.S. President George Bush arrived here late Sunday from Pakistan for talks designed to defuse military tension between New Delhi and Islamabad over the disputed Kashmir region.

U.S. Embassy officials said the envoys, Robert Gates, number-two official on the National Security Council, and John Kelly, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, were expected to meet Monday with Indian Foreign Minister Inder Kumar Gujral and Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh.

(A U.S. Embassy statement quoting Mr. Bush released in Islamabad said Washington's major objective was "to help both sides avoid a conflict over Kashmir, which would entail great loss of life and damage to both countries."

(A political dialogue could lead to "peaceful and permanent resolution" of the Kashmir problem, Mr. Bush said, and he called for a solution to the Kashmir problem under the Simla agreement of 1972 denouncing the use of force.)

The Press Trust of India said here that the two men were carrying a message from Mr. Bush for Mr. V.P. Singh, whose government has ruled out a mediating role for the United States regarding Kashmir, where Moslem militants are leading a violent independence campaign.

The two U.S. envoys met earlier Sunday in Islamabad with Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan and advisor for foreign affairs and national security, Iqbal Akhund.

They were unable to meet with Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, who is currently on a trip to drum up support for a plebiscite on Kashmir, where India accuses Pakistan of arming and training the militants.

India rules out a plebiscite, saying the Kashmir problem is an internal affair.

Pakistan is a direct ally of the United States, which has recently been developing its ties with New Delhi.

India receives most of its arms from Moscow.

BELEM, Brazil (MAY 20) - Authorities have seized 375 kilograms (825 pounds) of cocaine in Porto Moz at the mouth of the Amazon River, the Federal Police Department said Sunday.

Police said three drug traffickers in a twin-engine plane dumped the cocaine Saturday onto the runway at the Porto Moz airport, some 600 kilometers (360 miles) west of Belem, and then fled.

The drug seizure was the largest haul in two years. Last year, police seized 205 kilos (451 pounds) of cocaine in the Amazonian state of Para.

Authorities said the latest shipment was further evidence that the Brazilian Amazon was becoming an important route for cocaine originating in Colombia.

At the Rio de Janeiro airport Thursday, federal agents arrested two Chileans who tried to board an airplane bound for Zurich, Switzerland, with six kilograms (12 pounds) of cocaine.

SANTIAGO (MAY 20) - Skeletons recently unearthed on land belonging to the army are the remains of a Communist lawmaker and two Communist Party leaders who were arrested by police 14 years ago, a lawyer said Saturday.

Rosemarie Bornard, an attorney for the Solidarity Vicariate human rights group, said that a preliminary investigation had identified the skeletons as the remains of lawmaker Vicente Atencio and Communists Jose Flores and Eduardo Cantero.

The group said the three men were arrested between July and August 1976 by secret police under the previous military government of General Augusto Pinochet.

Gen. Pinochet seized power during a bloody 1973 coup in which elected leftist president Salvador Allende died.

After the coup, thousands of suspected leftists were jailed and several hundred were murdered, human rights groups say.

Spokesmen for the Vicariate said security agents killed at least 500 Pinochet opponents during the general's rule from September 1973 to March 1990.

The three skeletons were unearthed March 21 by workers building a road in the northern outskirts of Santiago.

The construction site belonged to the armed forces until it was sold to a mining company in 1984.

DHAKA (MAY 20) - President Hussain Mohammad Ershad, Bangladesh's longest serving head of state, confirmed on Sunday that he would run for a second term.

The official BSS news agency quoted Mr. Ershad as saying at an education conference here that he "wanted to see illiteracy removed from the society ... by the end of his tenure as president," if he was elected for another term in the next presidential polls set for 1991.

Mr. Ershad, 60, a retired general who seized power in a bloodless 1982 coup, has recently indicated that all national polls could be held ahead of schedule, but had so far refrained from putting himself forward as a candidate.

He was elected president in 1986, and by a constitutional amendment passed by the ruling Jatiya Party-controlled parliament in July, he would be able to run for the post for two more consecutive terms.

DAKAR (MAY 20) - A grenade attack during a religious rally by Moslems in Ziguinchor, the main town in southern Senegal's Casamance region, killed two people and wounded some 50 others, Senegalese radio reported Sunday.

The radio said two grenades were hurled into the crowd late Saturday, killing a youth instantly and fatally wounding a prominent local official who died on his way to hospital.

Two of those wounded were in serious condition, the radio said, adding that others were flown to Dakar, the Senegalese capital, for hospital treatment.

The attack was not claimed, but observers said it could have been carried out by the Movement of Democratic Forces of Casamance, an outlawed separatist movement.

The attack comes after an April 21 assault on a customs post at Selety, on Senegal's border with Gambia, which left two dead. Last Thursday, one person was killed and two were wounded in an attack on administrative offices in Nyassai, in the Casamance region.

Both attacks were blamed on the separatists.

Casamance, a popular tourist resort, lies between Guinea Bissau and Gambia.

Earlier Sunday, Guinea-Bissau protested an attack by Senegalese soldiers on the border between the two West African states.

Informed sources here said the Senegalese military could have been pursuing separatists who had sought refuge across the border after carrying out attacks.

JERUSALEM (MAY 20) - Around 200 Israeli peace activists gathered outside the residence of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to protest against the killing Sunday of eight Palestinians in the Tel Aviv suburb of Rishon le Zion.

Police used batons to disperse the demonstrators, arresting seven members of the civil rights party Ratz and of other small left-wing groups.

A 21-year-old Israeli, who has not been named, shot dead the eight Palestinian workers and wounded 10 others with an M-16 rifle after lining them up for a fake identity check. He was later arrested.

The assailant gave confused reasons for his action, police said, adding he would be given a psychiatric examination Monday to determine if he was mentally unbalanced.

The demonstrators late Sunday held Mr. Shamir and his right-wing policies responsible for the Rishon le Zion outrage.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (MAY 21) - The Soviet Union has fallen behind on payments on a 100 million New Zealand dollar (57 million U.S) deal to buy 70,000 tons of butter, the New Zealand Dairy Board said Monday.

This follows Soviet default on 52.4 million dollar (29.9 million U.S.) payment for New Zealand wool exports, and comes in the wake of a series of Soviet defaults around the world.

The Dairy Board, a government protected monopoly for the export of New Zealand dairy produce, would not say how far behind the Soviets were on payments on the 70,000 ton butter deal.

Spokesman Neville Martin said the Soviet central buying agency, Prodintorg, had given assurances that the butter would eventually be paid for.

"We have faith in those assurances but in the meantime we are watching very closely because they are dragging the chain, no question," he said.

If payments stopped the board would stop sending butter, he said. However the board will have a real problem with handling the unsold butter. Last year the Soviet Union took 200,000 tons of New Zealand butter.

Meanwhile the New Zealand Wool Board is having to cope with a growing stockpile of wool it has bought at auctions to hold up the wool price here. Both China and the Soviet Union, previously the top buyers of New Zealand wool, have left the market.

In the current selling season the board has accumulated 425,000 bales of wool and borrowed 50 million dollars (28.5 million U.S.) to fund the purchases.

According to the New Zealand Herald, a wool sale Thursday saw 60 percent of the offering go to the board.

Board general manager Grant Sinclair said there would no little certainity in the wool market until affairs were sorted out in Australia.

The Australian Wool Corporation has already bought 2.5 million bales of wool, holding to a firm floor price of 8.70 dollars Australian (6.61 dollars U.S.) a kilogram.

Mr. Sinclair said if Australia stuck to the price, buyers waiting for bargain basement prices would return to the market.

SAN JOSE (MAY 20) EFE - Eleven agents of the Costa Rican rapid deployment police force were arrested Sunday, a day after the squad killed a 12-year-old boy with machine-gun fire during a drug raid, authorities said.

"I regret what happened and I have turned over those responsible for the death of the minor to the OIJ (Justice Department)," said Public Security Minister Victor Herrera.

The police squad, dressed in black uniforms and with camouflaged faces, Saturday shot dead the 12-year-old boy during a raid on a farm near the capital.

Officials said the boy's death was an accident.

According to the boy's father, police burst through the metal door of his house with machine-gun fire and one of the bullets hit his son.

"Later, when they saw that they had committed an error, the police picked up the shells as if to hide the evidence, and left," the father added.

Herrera said the squad was involved in an operation to capture suspected drug traffickers, but pledged that those responsible would be punished.

SANTO DOMINGO (MAY 20) EFE - Leftist Dominican presidential candidate Juan Bosch Sunday called on his supporters to resist alleged government efforts to steal last week's elections through widespread vote-buying and fraud.

Bosch, of the Dominican Liberation Party (PLD), claimed he won Wednesday's presidential elections, and said his party was ready to +defend the victory of the Dominican people+ from corruption and fraud.

+We have begun to do battle against fraud, first of all on a legal plane, and we will take it to whatever level is necessary,+ he said.

Bosch accused the ruling Social Christian Reformist Party (PRSC) of spending dlrs 2 million in buying some 300,000 ballot papers.

PRSC candidate and incumbent President Joaquin Balaguer was Saturday leading Bosch by 18,227 votes, according to the latest figures released by the Central Electoral Council (JCE).

The JCE said Balaguer had garnered 620,181 votes with Bosch on 601,954. There are 3.2 million registered voters in the Dominican Republic.

But Bosch's allegations of colossal fraud this week forced the JCE and all the political parties to agree to a vote recount, which was Sunday halted to allow a team of international observers to check ballots for evidence of fraud,

Former U.S. president Jimmy Carter, who acted as an election observer, said before leaving for the United States Friday that he had seen no evidence of widespread ballot rigging but added that there had been minor irregularities.

ST. CHARLES, MO (MAY 20) UPI - A paddlewheel cruise boat struck a highway bridge on the Missouri River Saturday night, slightly injuring 22 people aboard in an accident that did not cause heavy damage, police said.

The Spirit of St. Charles hit the Highway 115 bridge about 8:30 p.m., a police dispatcher said. The two-story boat did not hit the bridge very hard and returned safely to port after the crash.

''We understand that when the boat hit, the people just fell to the floor and chairs rolled around,'' said Barbara Wussler, a spokeswoman at St. Joseph Health Center where the injured were taken. ''A few people fell on each other.''

She said no one fell overboard.

There were no reports of traffic being disturbed by the impact and the dispatcher said officials did not believe the two-lane bridge suffered structural damage. St. Charles police, however, closed the bridge for about two and a half hours until the Missouri Department of Transportation inspected it. The bridge reopened about 11:10 p.m., officials said.

Wussler said everyone brought to the hospital was treated and released.

''It was mostly bruises, bumps and scrapes,'' she said. ''Some of the people were pretty shook up, but they seem to be doing fine now.''

Authorities were unable to say how fast the boat was traveling. Its capacity is 300 people, but officials could not say how many people were aboard.

MENLO PARK, CA (MAY 20) UPI - A strong earthquake measuring 7.5 on the Richter scale was recorded in the Sudan 700 miles south of Khartoum, the U.S. Geological Survey said Saturday.

The quake hit at 4:22 a.m. Sunday local time (10:22 p.m. EDT) and was monitored by the USGS office in Menlo Park. There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries.

A USGS spokeswoman said such an earthquake of that magnitude large event would be certain to cause casualties and structural damage if it occurred in a populated area.

The Sudan, in northeast Africa, is the largest country on the continent, measuring about one-fourth the size of the United States.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 20) UPI - A fallen 115,000-volt power line knocked out power Saturday afternoon for 53,855 customers, including San Francisco International Airport.

At the airport, running lights went out temporarily, moving sidewalks stopped, and the underground fuel delivery system failed.

While backup generators brought in electricity, 15 takeoffs were delayed. The major effects of the outage lasted about two hours.

Bob Schneider, airport spokesman, said much of the airport continued to receive power during the episode. Some of the trouble resulted when circuit breakers went into action, he said, and equipment such as reservations computers had to be reset.

The main affected area was south and adjacent to San Francisco, but power surges caused problems in electronic equipment within the city itself. A television station was off the air for nearly an hour.

At Candlestick Park during a game between the San Francisco Giants and the Montreal Expos, the electronic scoreboard lost its power. A backup generator revived it after 10 minutes.

Two major shopping centers, Stonestown and Serramonte, were closed for the remainder of the day. Numerous traffic lights went off.

Pacific Gas & Electric spokesmen said the power line apparently fell because of ''a flashback,'' an unsual event that results from a combination of dust on the line and moisture. Power was restored two hours after the 2:36 p.m. failure for most customers, but the lights of about 200 customers were not expected to come back on until Sunday morning.

(MAY 20) UPI - Andre Dawson continued his recent assault on National League pitching Saturday, with the latest victim being the slumping Houston Astros.

Dawson drove in three runs, including two on his league-leading 12th homer and Les Lancaster pitched seven strong innings to lift the Cubs to a 4-1 victory over the Astros.

The Astros have lost 11 of their last 13 games.

''He's hitting as well as I think I've ever seen him,'' said Chicago Manager Don Zimmer. ''He had a streak last year on the West Coast right before he had his operation. But when a big guy on a team gets hot, he can do a lot of damage.''

And Dawson has done just that. Dawson, who leads the major leagues with 38 RBI, has hit seven homers and driven in 17 runs in his last 11 games.

Friday night, Dawson drove in three runs in a 7-0 victory over the Astros.

Lancaster, 3-1, who replaced the injured Rick Sutcliffe in the Cubs' rotation, allowed eight hits over 7 1-3 innings walking three and striking outthree.

''I'd like to stay in the rotation,'' Lancaster said. ''But I don't make the decisions. I know I have the endurance and the arm to do it. They're just looking for five to seven good innings from me.''

Mitch Williams worked 1 2-3 innings to record his eighth save.

Jim Clancy, 1-3, allowed three runs and nine hits in five innings for the loss.

Three of the Cubs runs were unearned as the Astros, who lead the league with 39 errors, committed two more.

Chicago grabbed a 2-0 lead in the third on a Glenn Davis home run.

Chicago added a run in the fourth on a two-out RBI double by Ryne Sandberg.

The Astros ended a string of 14 consecutive scoreless innings when Craig Biggio led off the sixth with his second homer of the season.

Dawson's sacrifice fly scoring Sandberg increased Chicago's lead to 4-1.

--- AROUND THE NL ---

In other NL games, Montreal routed San Francisco 7-4; Cincinnati blanked St. Louis 4-0; Atlanta nipped Pittsburgh 2-1; New York clipped San Diego 6-4 and Philadelphia outscored Los Angeles 15-12.

At San Francisco, Kevin Gross was perfect through six innings and drove in a run with a double during a three-run second inning sparking Montreal. Gross, 5-2, limited the Giants to three runs and two hits over 6 1-3 innings, walking two and striking out six. Bob Knepper, 2-2, balked twice in the second to set up RBI-doubles by Gross and Mike Fitzgerald.

Reds 4, Cardinals 0

At Cincinnati, Jack Armstrong fired a four-hitter and Rolando Roomes belted a three-run home run to guide Cincinnati. Armstrong, 7-1, struck out three and walked two in the first complete game of his career. He joins Frank Viola as the only seven game winners in the National League. John Tudor, 4-2, allowed six hits over six innings in suffering the loss.

Braves 2, Pirates 1

At Atlanta, Tom Glavine allowed seven hits over eight innings and Jim Presley homered to lift Atlanta. Glavine, 2-2, carried a shutout into the ninth inning, striking out eight and walking two before being replaced by Joe Hesketh. Hesketh allowed one hit to gain his second save. Walt Terrill 1-3, took the loss.

Mets 6, Padres 4

At San Diego, David Cone retired 21 straight batters during one stretch and limited the San Diego Padres to six hits over 8 1-3 innings to help New York end a four game losing streak. Cone, 1-2, was relieved by John Franco who got the final two outs to earn his eighth save. Andy Benes, 3-4 suffered the loss and allowed home runs by Kevin Elster and Howard Johnson.

Phillies 15, Dodgers 12, 11 innings

At Los Angeles, Rod Booker's bases-loaded triple in the 11th inning broke a 12-12 tie and helpe the Phillies snap the Dodgers five-game winning streak.

Booker entered the game in the eighth and went 3-for-3. His triple made a loser of Jay Howell, 1-2. Roger McDowell pickedu up the win in relief and improved to 2-0. The game featured 42 players, 13 pitchers and 39 base hits. Kal Daniels belted his first career grand slam and drove in five runs for the Dodgers, who had a four-game winning streak snapped. Tom Herr collected five hits and three RBI for the Phillies.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (MAY 20) UPI - President Lee Teng-hui in his inauguration speech Sunday promised to declare a formal end to the 40-year state of war with China as soon as possible and pledged to move Taiwan toward democracy.

But Lee said the normalization of relations between Taipei and Beijing would first require China to adopt democratic reforms and free markets.

Lee was Taiwan's vice-president and has served as president since the death of President Chiang Ching-kuo in January 1988. He was elected to his first full-six year term March 21.

Lee called on Beijing to hold peaceful talks for reunification.

Taiwan conditionally ''would be willing, on a basis of equality, to establish channels of communication, and completely open up ... to lay a foundation of mutual respect, peace, and prosperity,'' he said.

Taiwan has technically been in a state of war against China since 1948, when it fought a losing civil war against Chinese Communists on the mainland. But there has been no fighting reported between the two countries for years.

Taiwan, which was once under the same government as mainland China, has gradually expanded unofficial contacts with China in the last two years, such as family visits and cultural exchange. Tourism to the mainland from Taiwain is expected to double to 1 million this year. But any formal contacts with Beijing have been ruled out up to now.

In a 30-minute inauguration ceremony in Taipei, Lee also pledged to initiate basic constitutional reforms within two years to pave the way for greater democracy in Taiwan.

The 67-year-old native Taiwanese president and his vice president, Li Yuan-zu, 66, were sworn in at the Sun Yat-sen Memorial Hall in Taipei before more than 2,000 guests.

Scuffles were reported between protesting students and police, but tight security around the hall prevented any major disruptions, eyewitnesses said.

China's Foreign Ministry Sunday welcomed Lee's call for opening channels of communications.

CHICAGO (MAY 20) UPI - A third-floor porch collapsed during a party at a North Side apartment early Sunday, injuring 12 people, one critically, authorities said.

The injured were attending a party in the fashionable Lincoln Park neighborhood when the back porch gave way at about 1:20 a.m., sending them crashing three floors to the ground, fire department officials said.

Seven ambulances were dispatched to the scene and the victims were taken to seven hospitals.

A man, whose identity was not released, was listed in critical condition at Illinois Masonic Medical Center, a nursing supervisor said.

Two other victims were taken to St. Joseph Hospital, one with a back injury and the other with an ankle injury, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Sean Melin, 50, a neighbor, said he heard the porch collapse.

''I heard this horrible bang and saw the electrical wires shaking and I thought, 'Oh, my God, something awful has happened.' And then I heard people screaming,'' Melin said.

KWANGJU, South Korea (MAY 20) UPI - Thousands of students and workers battled riot police in Kwangju Sunday in continuing anti-government and anti-American protests commemorating a pro-democracy uprising that occurred 10 years ago.

Police blocked a mass rally that a dissident coalition tried to hold Sunday afternoon at a central square of Kwangju, an opposition stronghold 170 miles south of Seoul. Students reacted with violent demonstrations in the downtown area of the city.

South Korea has been beset by violent street protests since Friday, the 10th anniversary of the Kwangju revolt which erupted on May 18, 1980, in protest against a blanket government crackdown on political dissent. Nearly 200 people were killed in the nine-day 1980 insurrection.

Sunday's violence began when police stormed Chosun University to halt a student rally of 6,000 people called by a dissident labor group to protest the ruling Democratic Liberal Party.

Police fired tear gas to break up the rally shortly after it began, but about 1,000 students and workers fought police units in nearby streets, throwing rocks and a few firebombs.

About 10,000 students, who staged overnight rallies on the campus of Chonnam University, burned a 5-yard-long American flag before dawn Sunday.

At campus rallies at the school Saturday, student leaders accused the United States of backed the three-party merger which resulted in the powerful ruling party, charging America with trying to keep South Korea as its ''permanent colony''.

NEW DELHI, India (MAY 20) UPI - India is moving to acquire a second nuclear-powered submarine from the Soviet Union and is also preparing to purchase two submarine rescue vessels, newspaper reports said Sunday.

The Sunday Observer newspaper said the Finance Ministry has given its clearance to a plan to obtain from the Soviet Union a second Charlie-I class nuclear-powered submarine, although the delivery of the vessel could take some time.

Discussions with Moscow on the terms of the acquisition are soon to be opened, the newspaper said.

India in 1988 obtained its first Charlie-I class nuclear-powered submarine from the Soviet Union, its main defense supplier, on a lease of undisclosed terms that is due to expire in 2001. The vessel was christened ''INS Chakra.''

The newspaper said naval officers prefered that India purchase the second vessel outright to eliminate operational constraints the navy has experienced with INS Chakra.

The acquisition of the INS Chakra made India the sixth country in the world to possess a nuclear-powered submarine and the deal raised concerns among other Indian Ocean nations over New Delhi's ultimate reasons for wanting such a vessel.

JERUSALEM (MAY 20) UPI - An Israeli gunman in an army uniform opened fire with an M-16 assault rifle on a group of Arab workers in the town of Rishon Le-Zion Sunday, killing seven people and wounding 10 others, Israel Radio reported.

The attack - the deadliest against Arabs inside Israel's pre-1967 borders since the start of the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising - sparked violent clashes between soldiers and youths in the Israeli-occupied territories that left at least five Palestinians dead.

Hospitals reported the five were killed and hundreds of other people wounded by live ammunition and rubber bullets in riots in the Gaza Strip, where thousands marched through the streets waving black flags, chanting and burning tires. Palestinian sources said another Palestinian was killed and dozens of others wounded in clashes in the West Bank.

The Army imposed a curfew on the entire Gaza Strip as the West Bank towns of Nablus and Hebron in an effort to contain the violence.

The 21-year-old gunman, who was not identified, fled the scene in his car but police captured him a short time later at his girlfriend's home in Rishon Le-Zion, about 10 miles south of Tel Aviv and 25 miles north of Gaza, Israel radio said.

The radio said the victims were among a group of Arabs from the Israeli-occupied territories who had gathered at an intersection along a highway in the early morning hours to wait for contractors and other employers seeking day laborers.

The gunman was examining the workers' identity documents shortly after 6 a.m. when he suddenly opened fire, the radio said. He reportedly pulled the body of one of the Arabs from his own car before fleeing.

''It is clear the shooting was done at close range because the injuries are very serious,'' a paramedic told the radio.

Police Commissioner Ya'acov Turner said the suspect had left the Israeli army and subsequently been jailed for undisclosed crimes.

''He says more than one thing with regard to his motives,'' Turner told Army Radio. ''He claims to be confused. He is trying to explain his motives.''

He said the suspect first told police he had shot the Arabs because of a romantic disappointment, but then kept changed his story several times.

''He says more than one thing with regard to his motives,'' Turner told Army Radio. The police chief said the suspect had used his brother's U.S.-made assault rifle in the attack.

An Arab witness said most of those killed were from the Gaza Strip town of Khan Younis, and that Israeli drivers passed the carnage without stopping to help, Palestinian sources reported.

Palestinians in the Gaza and occupied territories immediately called a general strike to protest the slayings.

''Really I do not believe that I will return to work here at all because of incidents like this,'' an Arab witness told Israel Radio.

The gunman had come from a nearby orchard, ordered the workers to line up, took their identification papers and threw them away, an Arab, identified by his first name Majid, told Army Radio. The Arab said he had learned details of the shooting from his cousin, who was wounded.

''He began shooting at them from close range,'' he said. ''There wasn't even a meter between him and the workers.''

Palestinian workers commonly gather at intersections on Israeli roads to wait for their Israeli employers.

President Chaim Herzog harshly condemned the attack and sent condolences to the victims's families. Right- and left-wing members of Parliament also denounced the killings.

At a Cabinet meeting, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir expressed shock at the incident and called on Jewish and Arabs to continu working and show restraint.

The General Union of Palestinian Workers declared three days of mourning.

PATNA, India (MAY 20) UPI - Fire engulfed an overturned gasoline tanker on a road in northeastern Bihar state Sunday, killing at least 16 people who had been trying to collect fuel that leaked from the truck, police said.

Police said the incident occurred near the town of Ramgarh, about 125 miles south of the Bihar state capital of Patna.

The gasoline tanker was bound for Ranchi in Bihar and overturned as it negotiated a corner, police said.

Twenty-two people following the tanker in two cars and three jeeps stopped and clustered around the overturned truck, trying to gather leaking fuel, police said.

Police said the fuel exploded for an unknown reason in a mass of flames, instantly burning 16 people to death. Six others were rushed to a hospital in Ranchi, suffering from severe burns.

The flames spread to dense woods bordering the road. Police said troops from a nearby army barracks joined firefighters in battling the blaze, which took several hours to contain.

No other details were available.

NEW YORK (MAY 20) UPI - The U.S. government may disclose in court the amount of money it paid Gen. Manuel Noriega in the years the former Panamanian dictator worked for American intelligence agencies, a published report said Sunday.

The New York Times said the documents might be released Monday in response to subpoenas filed in U.S. District Court in Miami by lawyers for Noriega.

The request for the information came as part of the legal sparring taking place before Noriega's trial on drug-trafficking charges, which the Times reported could included the testimony of President Fidel Castro of Cuba.

Noriega, who was ousted from power and arrested on federal drug charges during December's U.S. invasion of Panama, claims the U.S. government paid him $11 million over the years and intelligence agencies of several foreign governments paid him an additional $7 million for his services, said his chief defense lawyer, Frank Rubino.

A government official involved in the case told the Times the government will declare it paid ''a far lower amount'' than the figure claimed by Noriega.

Monday's hearing was called to resolve a dispute over the government's decision to freeze Noriega's bank accounts, a move that prompted defense lawyers to ask to withdraw from the case because the general cannot pay them.

The government also must respond at the hearing to defense subpeonas issued to the Central Intelligence Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency the Defense Department, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the National Security Council, the secretary of state, the National Security Agency and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

The subpoenas demanded the agencies reveal any payments made to Noriega. U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler, who is hearing the case, said the agencies must respond on Monday.

Rubino has continued working on Noriega's defense, at one point traveling to Cuba to interview Castro, who he says is ''eager'' to help and might testify on videotape.

''Fidel said he wants to help and is willing to do whatever he can to show Noriega is innocent,'' said Rubino.

PITTSBURGH (MAY 20) UPI - Stormie Jones, the world's first heart-liver transplant recipient six years ago, was returning to the hospital Sunday amid fears she may be rejecting a second transplanted liver.

Doctors in Texas suspect Jones, 12, of White Settlement, Texas, is rejecting the replacement liver she received in February after her first transplanted liver was damaged by a bout with hepatitis, a Children's Hospital spokesman said.

She was expected to arrive at Children's, where her previous surgeries were performed, sometime Sunday afternoon. Doctors there intended to evaluate her before any decision is made on whether another transplant is required, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Jones's stepfather, Alan Purcell, said the child's enzyme count has moved far above normal in recent days. The count is used to measure rejection. Purcell said his stepdaughter's transplanted heart is fine.

Jones, who turns 13 on May 31, joked during her last stay in Pittsburgh that doctors should install a zipper in her to avoid future incisions.

Jones received the world's first simultaneous heart and liver transplant on Valentine's Day in 1984.

She suffers from familiar hypercholesterolemia, a disease which impairs the body's ability to remove cholesterol from the blood.

Continuing problems from the disease and the hepatitis eventually damaged Stormie's first transplanted liver, necessitating the second procedure earlier this year.

(MAY 20) UPI - Marchers around the world gathered for candlelight vigils Sunday to commemorate those who have died or are suffering from AIDS.

Memorial services and rallies in Australia and New Zealand kicked off the 7th annual International AIDS Candlelight Memorial about 23 hours before marches and services were planned across the United States.

Events were scheduled in 200 cities around the globe, ranging from the black township of Soweto in South Africa to the Czecholoslavakian capital of Prague, said Paul Boneberg, of the San Francisco-based organizing group Mobilization against AIDS.

In Melbourne, Australia, the vigil coincided with a showing of the giant Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt, which contains more than 10,000 squares commemorating individuals who have died of the disease.

''The goal of the vigil is to make sure anyone, anywhere who is fighting the HIV virus knows they are not alone,'' Boneberg said. ''People need to know that AIDS is not an abstract, foreign disease somewhere else, but is in their town, their city.''

In San Francisco, some 20,000 people were expected to join in four marches from different points in the city to City Hall. In Washington, D.C., an evening memorial service was planned on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, followed by a candlelight procession around the reflecting pool and Mall.

Unlike other AIDS rallies designed to put pressure on public leaders for a greater response to the disease, the candlelight vigils were intended to focus on the lives of those affected, organizers said.

''This is a chance for people to come together to grieve for and remember those who have already been lost,'' said Bart Casimir, chairman of the People with AIDS Alliance of San Francisco. ''In addition, we hope that the vigils will serve as symbols to the rest of the world - the loved ones left behind, the HIV-infected, the concerned.''

The vigil began in 1983 with small groups in San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York. Several key organizers of the first event passed away within a year, and no vigil was held in 1984. Since 1985, the activist group Mobilization Against AIDS has organized the vigils and gathered support in an increasing number of communites.

For the first time this year, several smaller cities, including Gettysburg Pennsylvania, and Bismarck, N.D., plan vigils of their own, Boneberg said.

(MAY 20) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... the latest news from U-P-I.

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft Saturday said ''stonewalling'' by Moscow resulted in the lack of progress on the issue of reducing conventional forces in Europe. Presidents Bush and Gorbachev had set this fall as the target date for an agreement to cut conventional troops, tanks and artillery in Europe.

Secretary of State Baker and his counterpart hailed the progress made in Moscow toward securing a strategic arms pact. U-S and Soviet negotiators agreed on cuts in air- and sea-based cruise missiles. However, Baker says a complete strategic arms pact will NOT be ready before this month's Washington summit.

Iran-Contra special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh says he'd love to return to his Oklahoma City home. But the 78-year-old lawyer - who has led the probe into Ronald Reagan's biggest political disaster- says he intends to complete his job. Walsh told U-P-I the final phase of the investigation is to look into the agencies involved in the scandal, including the National Security Council.

Israel Radio says an assailant with an M-16 assault rifle opened fire on a group of Arabs early Sunday... killing at least seven people. The victims were in a group that had gathered at an intersection on a highway to wait for employers seeking day laborers. Israel Radio says the assailant escaped in a car.

A paddlewheel cruise boat struck a highway bridge on the Missouri River at St. Charles Saturday night... slightly injuring 22 people. Police say the paddlewheeler, the Spirit of St. Charles, was only slightly damaged. A spokeswoman at a hospital says most of the injured just fell to the deck when the boat struck the bridge.

South African black leader Nelson Mandela Saturday said he supports continuing the armed struggle in his country until the white-minority government allows NON-whites to vote. Speaking in Cairo, Mandela also had stern words for Israel, condemning it for siding with the white government in Johannesburg.

Montana authorities Saturday said shootings at two college campuses Tuesday and Friday are NOT related. The shootings left three people dead and another injured. Friday's shooting occurred at a small private college in Helena while Tuesday's double-homicide occurred at Montana State University in Bozeman.

The art world is abuzz about events in the last week, NOT only because a new record price for a painting- but also because of the activity by Japanese buyers. A spokeswoman at New York's Sotheby auction house Saturday said Japanese buyers spent more than 339-Million dollars at sales Tuesday and Thursday.

WASHINGTON (MAY 20) UPI - It appears almost certain that the Soviet and American presidents will not get their wish, expressed last year at their meeting in Malta, for a strategic arms treaty to sign at their summit in two weeks.

That became evident to Secretary of State James Baker and his aides during four exhausting days in Moscow last week. But, the administration hopes to conclude the treaty by the end of the year.

Despite that optimistic outlook, it also became clear in Moscow this week that a strategic arms pact - while desirable - is not as important as it once was, for several reasons cited by American officials.

First, the original goal of the treaty - a true 50 percent cut in strategic arms - is no longer attainable.

Because each side has exempted some of its favorite weapons from any possible cuts, the draft treaty calls for cuts in strategic arms of somewhere between 30 and 35 percent overall. Those weapons that are being cut are, for the most part, obsolete.

Other ''favored'' weapons systems, such as sea-launched cruise missiles won't be cut at all, and in fact, will be increased beyond present levels.

One significant reduction would be a true 50 percent cut in large Soviet land-based missiles, from 308 to 154. These are an awesome first-strike weapon, but they are a remnant of the worst days of the Cold War, when a Soviet surprise attack was a remote - but real - possibility. That is no longer the case and the missiles have become a kind of military dinosaur.

Second, the Central Intelligence Agency believes the Soviets have begun a form of unilateral disarmament anyway as a result of the disastrous state of the Soviet economy. The United States, also for economic reasons, has cut back on strategic weapons spending.

A CIA report published in April estimated that Soviet defense spending dropped 4 to 5 percent in 1989, mainly in the form of reduced procurement of new weapons. The CIA report cites the Soviet government claim that some 400 defense plants turned to production of civilian goods last year.

As State Department officials described U.S. policy as they flew back from Moscow, the goal of arms control is no longer ''reduction for reduction's sake.''

The new aim is to produce stability, to reduce the level of political and military tension and to take the unpredictability out of any situation where tension does rise.

The dissolution of the Warsaw Pact has resulted in a situation - as one senior American official put it - where the score used to be 16 NATO countries to seven Warsaw Pact members.

''Now the score is 22 to 1, in our favor,'' the official said.

Nevertheless, the Soviet leadership did not respond to some American ideas put forward in Moscow for mutual reductions in military forces in Central Europe, something that would appear to make a virtue out of the Soviet necessity to cut back on their military forces.

Why didn't the Soviets respond?

The consensus of those officials travelling with Baker is that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is a man under extreme pressure, and he is so distracted by Soviet internal problems that he does not have the time, energy or inclination to devote his remaining political muscle on arms control issues.

One illuminating episode came last Friday when Baker and Gorbachev leaned across the conference table and shook hands warmly on a deal to limit air-launched cruise missiles.

Within 12 hours, it became evident that the Soviet negotiators were not going along with the deal, and they began adding conditions and hedges to the contract.

Baker saved the deal in the final hours of his visit by writing Gorbachev a letter that said, ''I thought you said we had a deal.''

In this case, the embarrassed Gorbachev did use his muscle and restored the original understanding. But it was a revealing example of the limitations of Gorbachev's ability to command.

That eroding central Soviet authority is seen as one more reason why it is extremely unlikely there will be a full-fledged Strategic Arms Reduction treaty signed at the Washington summit.

BOGOTA, Colombia (MAY 20) UPI - Colombia's surviving presidential candidates held rallies under heavy security in the capital Sunday, ending a bloody campaign rocked by the assassination of three candidates and a spate of car bombings.

The legal period for campaigning ended Sunday, a week before the May 27 vote to pick a successor to President Virgilio Barco of the Liberal Party.

Three of the four major candidates were holding rallies Sunday in areas guarded by heavily armed police, soldiers and bomb-sniffing dogs.

Three presidential candidates have been assassinated in less than a year and a series of car bombs have killed more than 30 people in various cities.

Polls have shown the front-runner to be Liberal Party candidate Cesar Gaviria, the most threatened man in Colombia because of his tough, no negotiations stance against powerful cocaine cartels.

Gaviria, a 43-year-old economist, halted all public appearances in open places after the April 26 assassination of M-19 candidate Carlos Pizarro. Pizarro, a former guerrilla leader, was shot 13 times by a lone gunman aboard an Avianca airlines flight at 16,000 feet.

Gaviria's final campaign rally Sunday was held at an indoor sports facility, with controlled admittance and police searches of those entering.

''To think that a dialogue with the narcotics trafficking could be a way out is no more than favoring the interests of the drug traffickers,'' Gaviria told the newspaper El Espectador in an interview published Sunday.

Gaviria became a candidate after the Aug. 18, 1989, assassination by cocaine gunmen of Sen. Luis Galan, the leading Liberal Party candidate and an arch foe of Medellin Cartel cocaine czar Pablo Escobar.

The latest Liberal Party campaign polls show Gaviria with 55 percent of the vote, three times his nearest competitor, National Salvation candidate Alvaro Gomez, according to campaign officials.

Gomez also was to finish public campaigning Sunday with two rallies at controlled sites in Bogota. Polls made public before a restriction on their dissemination went into effect showed the 71-year-old son of a former president with some 15 percent of the vote. The Gaviria poll gave him 18 percent.

The Conservative vote, one of the two traditional political powerhouses, is split between Gomez and Social Conservative candidate Rodrigo Lloreda.

Lloreda, a 47-year-old lawyer, planned a rock concert to attract young voters to his final rally. The polls had shown him trailing in third place with about 10 percent of the vote.

The fourth major candidate, former M-19 guerrilla Antonio Navarro Wolf, closed his campaign Saturday by speaking to a crowd gathered in a park by a television hook-up in which his image was projected on a giant screen. The Gaviria polling shows Navarro Wolf could end up in third with Lloreda in fourth.

Navarro Wolf, who became the M-19 candidate after the Pizarro assassination, has not made a campaign appearance in an open setting since taking Pizarro's place.

Navarro Wolf is the only significant leftist candidate on the ballot. Patriotic Union candidate Bernardo Jaramillo was assassinated March 22 in the Bogota airport and the leftist coalition chose not to replace him.

Police in Medellin, 160 miles northwest of Bogota, reported four policemen were killed Friday and Saturday, bringing to 23 the number of officers killed in the last two weeks.

Medellin is the headquarters city for the powerful Medellin cocaine cartel that has offered a reward of some $4,200 for the death of police officers.

TEHRAN, Iran (MAY 20) UPI - Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said the 14 remaining Western hostages in Lebanon could be freed if the United States made a goodwill gesture in response to the release of two captives last month, a newpaper reported Sunday.

The newspaper Tehran Times said Rafsanjani made the remarks in a meeting with Iran's U.N. representative Kamal Kharazi.

The Iranian president said the United States and other Western governments could have the remaining hostages freed - six American and eight Western - if they would respond to the steps taken by the hostage-takers in Lebanon.

Tehran radio, which also reported Rafsanjani's remarks, quoted him as saying: ''The Western governments can, by taking corresponding steps, create the grounds for freeing all the hostages, including Iranian and Lebanese hostages.''

Iran has called several times in the past three weeks for a goodwill gesture from the United States following the release last month of American hostages Robert Polhill and Frank Reed.

Rafsanjani said Iran has taken unspecified steps in Lebanon to help pave the way for the release of the remaining captives. He said the Moslem Shiite groups holding the hostages have responded positively to the measures and were now awaiting a gesture of goodwill from the United States.

Since Reed's release toward the end of April, Iran has called on the United States to pressure Israel into releasing Palestinians and Lebanese taken captive in southern Lebanon, particularly Shiite cleric Sheikh Abdel Karim Obeid.

Kharazi reportedly told Rafsanjani that Iran's moves to expedite freeing of the hostages has had a positive effect on world opinion toward Iran.

In a gesture toward Iran earlier this month, President Bush said he would seek information from Lebanese Christian militia leaders on four Iranians who disappeared in Lebanon in 1982.

MADISON, WI (MAY 20) UPI - A University of Wisconsin researcher is working with African scientists to see if a giant rat can be raised in captivity for food in Africa.

The 3- to 4-pound giant rat, found in the wild, is a highly prized delicacy and sold in public markets in Africa.

Tom Yuill, associate dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine at Wisconsin, said there was growing interest in micro-livestock, smaller animals that are easily maintained in captivity.

''The price of rat meat is higher than beef,'' Yuill said. ''But right now it's all from animals that are taken out of the wild.''

Yuill is consulting on the project directed by biology professor Mbakulirahi Malenkani of the University of Kinshasa in Zaire. The project, costing $120,000, is funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development.

WARSAW, Poland (MAY 20) UPI - A wildcat strike by railroad workers demanding large pay increases spread across Poland Sunday, paralyzing rail transport in the northeast.

It was the country's biggest labor dispute since the Solidarity government came to power last August.

Jerzy Sadka, spokesman for the railwaymen headquartered in the northern city of Slupsk, told United Press International the workers involved make only $37 a month compared with a national average of $80.

He said the strikers want a pay hike of $30 a month.

''Even if (President Wojcioech) Jaruzelski was travelling by train through the region affected by strike, his train would be stopped,'' Sadka said.

The protest began 12 days ago in Slupsk when 45 railwaymen from various regions of Poland began a hunger protest against low wages.

Their protest was ignored and negotiations with the authorities brought no results, the workers said.

They decided to begin the full strike action Sunday.

''About 69 commuter trains, 22 long-distance passenger trains and one international train from Berlin to the seaport of Gdynia were stopped in the area,'' Sadka said. ''Passangers are being taken to their destinations in coaches and buses.''

The strikers say they are determined to continue the protest until their demands are met. Apart from higher wages, they include a call for the resignation of the general director of the Polish railways, Janusz Glowackli, and an increase in pensions.

''Wages and pensions should be pegged at a level to guarantee decent living conditions,'' Sadka said.

The strike committee in Slupsk also said the walkout had spread to nearby railway stations in Kolobrzeg and Koszalin and in five smaller stations.

The key railway station in the western city of Poznan has also been brought to a standstill, Sadka said.

Neither Solidarity nor the communist unions had any part in staging the protest.

''The strike is not organized by any union,'' Sadka said. ''It is the railwaymens'strike.''

A handful of railwaymen in the northern city of Torun began a hunger strike on Saturday.

BONN, West Germany (MAY 20) UPI - South African President Frederik de Klerk flew to West Germany Sunday in search of further European support for his political reforms after a weekend meeting with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

During his visit to the West German capital, de Klerk was scheduled to meet with West German President Richard von Weizsaecker, Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

After spending two days in Bonn, de Klerk - who was in Britain for three days - is set to travel to Spain, Italy and Switzerland, a spokesman said.

Thatcher warmly praised the progress de Klerk has made in moving away from apartheid during a 90-minute meeting Saturday at her country home, Chequers, outside London.

Later, de Klerk said at news conference in London that he had also met with British industrialists, economists and bankers during his stay in an effort to convince them that their fears that South African business would be nationalized under a new constitution were unfounded.

De Klerk said he was confident ''everyone will realize'' that a market economy is the best way to guarantee an improved life for blacks in a reformed South Africa.

Declaring that there was no turning back on the campaign to abolish apartheid, de Klerk said he was optimistic that the other four European leaders he has seen this month believe South Africa is changing, and will reconsider sanctions against his country.

''The message is things are on the move. There is no turning back, and South Africa stands on the verge of another very exciting chapter in the process of reconciliation and constitutional reform,'' he said.

Thatcher told de Klerk that the next task is to make international finance available to South Africa so that it can continue its program of reform. De Klerk would like European Community members to relax economic sanctions imposed on South Africa to show dissatisfaction with Pretoria's racist policies.

In Europe, there is ''general recognition of the irreversible process which has taken place in South Africa,'' he said. ''There is acceptance that there is a new reality in South Africa. There is acknowledgement of the fact that we are inexhorably moving to the birth of a new South Africa.''

De Klerk's London visit came after similiar stops in Paris, Athens, Lisbon and Brussels.

TUNIS, Tunisia (MAY 20) UPI - The Israeli government is ''totally responsible'' for the killing Sunday of seven Arab workers and the wounding of 10 others, a Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman charged.

The attack, which touched off rioting in the occupied territories, ''constitutes a dangerous prelude to a vast plan to introduce more soldiers in the Gaza Strip in an effort to undermine the Intifada (the Palestinian uprising),'' PLO spokesman Bassam Abou Sharif said.

He said the plan had started late last week with the creation of an Israeli commando unit in Jerusalem with a special mission to attack the Palestinian resistance and to protect the expropriation of lands that belong to Arabs.

The spokesman said the Israeli government was ''totally responsible'' for the attack.

For its part, the Arab League said the elimination of the Israeli presence in the occupied territories is one of the organization's ''vital objectives.''

Arab League Executive Secretary Chedli Klibi said the ''elimination of all Israeli presence in the occupied territories had become a vital objective if one wants to truly ensure the protection of the Palestinian people and preserve peace and security in the Middle East.''

''This crime again testifies to the policy put in place by the Israeli occupation authorities that encourages soldiers and colonizers to carry out murderous expeditions against the Palestinian populations,'' Klibi said.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (MAY 20) UPI - Police fired into crowds of rioting blacks Sunday in a township in the country's gold-mining belt in violence that left at least three people dead and several others wounded, police and hospital sources said.

The violence erupted in the township of Thabong following a decision at a community meeting to end a nearly two-week boycott of white businesses in the nearby town of Welkom, where racial violence erupted in the gold fields last week.

The superintendent of the provincial hospital, Flip Nel, said at least three blacks were shot and killed and five others wounded, two hit by rubber bullets and three suffering shotgun wounds. A white man also was stabbed in the back and lashed near Thabong, he said.

Casualties also were reported at the nearby Ernest Oppenheimer hospital, witnesses said.

A police spokesman reported scattered incidents of stone-throwing and arson attacks.

''The unrest necessitated police action, which included the use of tearsmoke, rubber bullets and birdshot,'' the spokesman said. Nel said police told him rioters set fire to several houses of local black police officers.

Welkom, 275 miles southwest of Johannesburg, has been gripped by racial tension in the wake of President Frederik de Klerk's racial reform initiatives, with right-wing vigilantes implicated in several assaults on blacks.

The unrest spread to an Anglo-American gold mine on Wednesday, where two whites were killed by black mineworkers.

LONDON (MAY 20) UPI - Vandals spray-painted swastikas and anti-Semitic messages on gravestones at a Jewish cemetery in an apparent imitation of recent desecrations in France and elsewhere, police and other reports said Sunday.

Scotland Yard said the incident occurred at a cemetery in Edmonton, north of London, sometime between May 4 and 6. Vandals daubed a swastika on a monument at the cemetery and coated gravestones with spray paint, Independent Television News reported.

''We believe it was the work of vandals 'copycatting' similiar incidents in France,'' a Scotland Yard spokesman said.

The spokesman declined to give further details of the damage, saying a Jewish organization in London had asked Scotland Yard not to publicize the incident for fear of sparking further acts of desecration.

The Scotland Yard spokesman refused to say whether it was the first such act to occur in England following a rash of similiar incidents in France and abroad.

Earlier this month, vandals desecrated 37 tombs at an ancient Jewish cemetery in Carpentras, France, about 25 miles northwest of Avignon. Graves were pried open, headstones smashed and the corpse of a recently buried man was pulled out and impaled on a spike in an incident which horrified the country.

The incident is believed to have sparked a wave of similiar attacks on Jewish cemeteries throughout France, including cemeteries in Clichy-Sous-Bois near Paris, and in Alsace.

About 100 graves were damaged at a Roman Catholic cemetery in Nantes last week by vandals who were allegedly trying to make their attack appear to be the work of Jews or left-wing groups trying to avenge the damages at Carpentras, according to French police.

At least one desecration of Jewish graves has also been reported in Israel since the French incidents began.

TIRGU MURES, Romania (MAY 20) UPI - Despite ethnic tension between Romanians and Hungarians in this Transylvanian city, only minor scuffles broke out as hundreds of voters struggled to crowd into polling places.

Voters began lining up well before the polls opened at 6 a.m., and halls and school lobbies in surrounding villages were packed with people waiting to vote.

Apart from the presidential race, the electoral battles in Transylvania are at the parliamentary level between the Party for Romanians in Transylvania (PUNTR), backed by the nationalist organization Vatra Romaneasca, and the Hungarian Democratic Union Party, or UDMR.

Six people died in street battles between the two groups last month.

In some villages, there was only one policeman supervising the cordons Sunday, but local officials seemed to believe that was enough.

''I'm not expecting any problems. I haven't got anybody to help. There's no one to help me,'' said one officer in the village of Miercurea Nirajului, north of Timisoara, where people waited up to 45 minutes to vote.

Most voters interviewed by reporters were aware of the significance of the first free elections in more than 50 years, but were not so certain about the future.

''It's very important to vote today, but we don't know yet if (the election) will be free, bearing in mind how we were treated in the past,'' said a 38-year-old Hungarian engineer, Fabian Serencz.

Election officials were also having problems with a lack of rubber stamps to stamp the ballots.

''We're all very nervous,'' said one village election official. ''We still don't know how this is going to work.''

In another village called Hodac, one of the most traditional in Transylvania, most voters were in traditional Hungarian costume. The men wore white embroidered knee-length smocks and trousers, black waistcoats and black felt hats. The women dressed in brightly colored skirts and jackets with sequins.

Even the voting booths were adorned with hand-embroidered wall hangings, and chairs were cushioned with huge embroidered pillows.

In the neighboring village of Ibineste, a 61-year-old peasant came into the voting booth carrying his leather whip for driving his horse.

''In 1946, it didn't matter what we voted,'' he said. ''Now our votes count. We need someone to help us not to be abused. I'm voting, so I don't have to give my cow, my chicken to someone, and to let me just do my job.''

Another ethnic Hungarian, 74-year-old Karolina Henter, expressed concern about the future.

''The elections mean a lot to us. All our lives we've been countryless,'' she said, referring to the more than 2 million ethnic Hungarians who suffered persecution under the regime of Nicolae Ceausescu. ''But we're still afraid things may go wrong after the elections. We're afraid the Hungarians will be attacked again like they were in April.''

(MAY 20) UPI - Up to 13 inches of rain in Arkansas washed away bridges, swept away cars and forced hundreds to evacuate Sunday, while a sinking dam in north-central Texas threatened to collapse and send more water into the Trinity River system.

A torrential downpour that dumped more than a foot of rain in Hot Springs, Ark., put some roads under at least 7 feet of water and sent automobiles floating down streets and crashing into storefronts in the downtown area, authorities said.

Between 200 and 500 homes were evacuated in and around Hot Springs, a central Arkansas resort town, said Ray Briggler, a spokesman for the state Office of Emergency Services. He said the rainfall, which began overnight and ended about 7 a.m., could cause more flooding downstream along the state's rivers.

''We're warning people who live in low-lying areas of (the Ouachita and Saline) Rivers to prepare for a record flood, particularly along the Ouachita, because of the massive amounts of rainfall that were received overnight,'' he said.

Garland County Sheriff's Sgt. Tommy Garner said businesses in downtown Hot Springs ''are full of water.''

''Most of the county roads are not passable,'' a county sheriff's dispatcher said. ''There was very deep water inside the city, up to 7 feet. We've had some evacuations and we've had boats picking up some residents.''

Fire Marshal Richard West said more than 100 people stranded by rising water had to be rescued. In nearby Scott County, deputies used boats and ropes to rescue six men stranded on an island Saturday night in the middle of the rain-swollen Forche River. The men had camped on the island.

''It (the river) came up while they were asleep,'' Deputy Bill Lamon said.

Rain caused a rock slide that closed Arkansas Route 88 in Polk County and tornadoes also hit the state Saturday night, damaging two homes in Conway County and uprooting trees and damaging a mobile home near Little Rock.

Garner said no injuries were reported and there were no reports of missing people, but telephone calls from the public were swamping area law enforcement agencies.

''It's going nuts here,'' he said. ''We've got bridges washed out everywhere.''

Powerful thunderstorms battered much of Texas Sunday as strong winds and heavy rain knocked down trees and power lines.

A tornado touched down in a rural area near Woodway in central Texas about 11:15 a.m. but there were no reports of injuries or damage, police spokesman Randy Williams said.

A half-mile section of the Lost Creek Reservoir Dam has sunk at least 20 feet, raising concerns of a possible collapse and flooding on the Trinity River tributary.

Officials say if the dam breaks, it will not aggravate problems downstream on the Trinity, where towns already are waterlogged by record spring rains and flooding. Few people live along the tributary.

Movement of the earthen dam, which has been holding back a nearly full lake, slowed Saturday but continued slightly, said Sam Vaugh, project manager for HDR Engineers of Austin, which constructed the dam.

''I'm not going to say it won't fail,'' said Vaugh, who estimated the distance of the sinking at about 20 feet, although other observers placed the drop at closer to 40 feet.

The sunken section was still above spillway level on the dam, located about 5 miles northeast of Jacksboro and 60 miles northwest of Fort Worth, well north of the flooded area along the Trinity north of Houston. The cause of the sinking was not known.

Charles McClure of Jacksboro, who owns a ranch along the stream, moved 350 cattle to higher ground Saturday after a call from officials. McClure said the region below the dam is mostly hunting cabins and ranchland.

In waterlogged southeast Texas, rising floodwaters covered some houses in Polk and San Jacinto counties as five times more water than normal continued to surge through Lake Livingston Dam's 12 floodgates and into the bloated lower Trinity River.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (MAY 20) UPI - Joe Dumars sparked an otherwise crushing defensive game by scoring 18 of his 34 points in the third period Sunday, guiding the Detroit Pistons over the Chicago Bulls 86-77 in the opener of the Eastern Conference finals.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series is Tuesday night in Auburn Hills. The series then switches to Chicago for games Saturday and Monday.

Dumars carried Detroit in the third period, hitting 8 of 10 shots from the floor. Shooting off picks and driving the lane, he scored the Pistons' first 12 points of the quarter and 18 of their 28 in the period. He gave the Pistons a 67-60 lead entering the final quarter.

Detroit held Chicago scoreless from the field for 3:54 of the fourth period and stretched its lead to 73-60. Chicago's Scottie Pippen, playing with five fouls, hit a pair of 3-point shots to bring the Bulls within 75-68 with 7:06 left.

Chicago mounted one last surge, pulling within 82-75 with 3:36 left. But Dennis Rodman scored off a steal by Isiah Thomas with 1:15 remaining to put Detroit up 84-77 and seal the triumph.

Detroit, which held the Bulls to 34 points in the second half, received 11 points from John Salley and 10 from Vinnie Johnson. Jordan scored 34 for the Bulls and Scottie Pippen added 16.

The first half ended, oddly enough, with a spectacular 3-point shot by Jordan from behind the top of the key. The All-Star guard, who shook off a bruised hip suffered in the first period, double-pumped and swished his shot to give Chicago a 43-39 lead.

But offense was not the hallmark of the first two periods, Detroit converted just 16 of 43 shots (36 percent) in the first half, while Chicago hit 17 of 43 (40 percent).

The Pistons scored just 15 points in the second period and managed just 5 points - all by Dumars - over the last 4:18.

Detroit made only 3 of its first 12 shots but managed a 24-22 lead behind an 11-4 run over the final 3:49 of the opening period. Jordan scored 14 of his 26 first-half points in the opening period.

LOS ANGELES (MAY 21) UPI - The average price for a gallon of gasoline at the pump rose almost 2.5 cents in the past two weeks, according to a national survey released Sunday.

Trilby Lundberg, director of the Lundberg Survey, said a check of gas pump prices at more than 13,000 retailers nationwide May 18 showed the average price, including taxes, was $1.16.05 per gallon, up from a similar survey May 4. She said the price rises were noted throughout the nation, with little variation by region.

The Lundberg Survey tracks gasoline prices through bimonthly surveys of retailers.

''It is not terribly surprising to see the (price) rise,'' Lundberg said. ''There has been no crude (oil price) slide of substance and in the spring and summer months consumer demand is high, peaking in July and August.''

Lundberg said as the temperatures rise, it also is more expensive for refiners to produce gasoline to meet pollution emission requirements set by the various states.

She predicted further price increases in the near future, noting that since May 4, the price paid by retailers for gasoline has increased more than one-half cent more than the price at the pump.

The prices for a gallon of gasoline in the various grades at self-service pump were: regular unleaded, $1.04.47; premium unleaded $1.21.65; regular leaded $1.03.91.

At full service gas pumps, the price per gallon was: regular unleaded, $1.30.98; premium unleaded, $1.44.51; regular leaded, $1.28.93.

OMAHA, Nebraska (MAY 20) UPI - One of two surviving test-tube tiger cubs born at the Henry Doorly Zoo has died of an acute bacterial infection, zoo officials said Sunday.

Randy Wisthoff, associate director of the zoo, said the male cub died near midnight Friday. The cub was not responding to antibiotics to treat the infection, Wisthoff said.

Three cubs were born April 27 in the world's first test-tube tiger birth. Two survived, a male and a female. The female remains alive and well, he said.

''We're being extremely cautious with her now and we're watching her very, very carefully,'' he said.

NEW YORK (MAY 20) UPI - Top city officials Sunday called for racial harmony in the wake of a race killing trial that divided the city and ended with the acquittal of a white youth on murder charges, sparking two days of protests.

Mayor David Dinkins, Police Commissioner Lee Brown and Schools Chancellor Joseph Fernandez all appeared on television talk shows broadcast Sunday to present plans for peace after verdicts in the trial Thursday and Friday convicted one white youth of murdering a black teen and acquitted a second white male.

The broadcast was played while marchers in the African-American parade, in a tribute to Martin Luther King Jr., made their way up Fifth Avenue and a civil rights group went to Brooklyn to speak out against racism and violence.

Tensions in some parts of the city ebbed Sunday with no reports of violence four days after accused triggerman Joseph Fama was convicted of killing Yusuf Hawkins, 16, last August.

Hawkins, a black youth who had gone to the predominantly white Bensonhurst neighborhood with three black friends to look at a used car, was surrounded by a gang of white youths, some with baseball bats, and was shot to death.

Keith Mondello, the accused ringleader in the slaying, was acquitted Friday on murder and manslaughter charges but convicted of several lesser counts.

Friday's verdict was followed by minor incidents of violence, mostly against television news crews, and a bitter march through Bensonhurst Saturday led by Hawkins' brother. Racial slurs were spewed during the march but there was no violence.

Police said that on Saturday in Bensonhurst, three whites sprayed beer onto a car occupied by blacks that was stopped at a traffic light.

Fernandez, appearing on WNBC-TV's ''News Forum,'' announced the formation of the Blue Ribbon Committee for Racial Harmony, calling on students, teachers and administrators to wear blue ribbons to show their commitment to racial harmony.

''I invite all members of our school community to join me in wearing a blue ribbon as a symbol of our dedication to the goal of understanding and mutual respect,'' Fernandez said in a memo to city schools.

''Wearing these ribbons until the end of the school year will identify us as members of the Blue Ribbon Committee for Racial Harmony,'' said Fernandez, who wore such a ribbon while appearing on television.

The idea for the ribbons came from Gerard Pappas, president of FLAMES, an interracial athletic group that works in Bensonhurst and Coney Island, Fernandez said.

At the African-American parade, the black boycott of Korean grocery stores in Brooklyn was highlighted by a group of Korean students who rode on a float to thank a class of black students who defied the boycott last week.

The New York City Civil Rights Coalition, which was formed following the 1986 Howard Beach killing, marched in Flatbush, calling to fight racism and violence.

Dinkins, appearing on the nationally televised ''This Week With David Brinkley'' on ABC, again said continued marches in Bensonhurst would be counterproductive and announced a rally against racism scheduled for Tuesday in Manhattan.

He called on the federal government to increase aid for schools and jobs in the city as a way to ease racial tension.

''We need job opportunities and educational opportunities that we're not supplying in sufficient quantity right now,'' Dinkins said.

(MAY 20) UPI - The Israeli-occupied territories have been rocked by violent clashes following a deadly attack against Arabs earlier today. It's believed to be the deadliest attack against Arabs since the Palestinian uprising began 29 months ago. Following the incident, violent clashes betwewen Arabs and Israeli soldiers left at least five Palestinians dead.

Romanians are going to the polls today in that country's first contested elections in 50 years. Some fear opposition parties immediately would convert Romania's economy to a free market system, triggering high inflation and unemployment.

Secretary of State Baker says he's optimistic about the upcoming meeting between Presidents Bush and Gorbachev. (MAY 20) UPI - Democratic Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia says higher taxes and cuts in defense spending are needed to cut the budget deficit. And he says President Bush ought to take the lead in endorsing such a move. During a commencment address at the University of Georgia Law School yesterday, Nunn remarked the president should NOT wait for Congress to propose such measures. Nunn added that he will NOT support any deficit-reduction plan unless the president calls for it.

(MAY 20) UPI - The United States and the Soviet Union have reached an agreement on limiting air- and sea-launched cruise missiles... a key issue in strategic arms reductions. But negotiators remain divided about reducing conventional forces in Europe. Secretary of State Baker says Presidents Bush and Gorbachev will NOT be able to sign a START treaty at their May 30th to June 3rd summit. But he adds much progress has been made and the summit should be productive.

President Bush is hailing the goals accomplished by Baker's four-day visit to Moscow. Bush acknowledges there still are issues to be worked out. Yet he says the upcoming summit will be ''another solid step forward'' in U-S-Soviet relations. National security adviser Brent Scowcroft says Moscow is ''stonewalling'' on the issue of conventional forces in Europe.

BALTIMORE (MAY 21) UPI - Preakness winner Summer Squall began a hard-earned vacation Sunday, leaving Kentucky Derby winner Unbridled to run an anticlimactic Belmont Stakes sure to be shadowed by endless debate over Lasix.

Horse racing long has been split over use of the diuretic, which is given to human heart patients as well as to horses like Unbridled and Summer Squall who have bled from the lungs while racing. The 1990 Triple Crown campaign reheated the controversy.

Both Unbridled, who bled in a race last fall, and Summer Squall, who has had several bleeding episodes, were on Lasix when they ran 1-2 in the May 5 Derby and when they flipped places in Saturday's Preakness Stakes at Pimlico.

New York State, home of the June 9 Belmont, prohibits Lasix, and that is the major reason Summer Squall Monday will return home to Churchill Downs for a few months off while Unbridled ships to Elmont, N.Y.

Trainer Carl Nafzger believes he can safely race Unbridled in the 1 1/2-mile Triple Crown finale and then rest him. The robust colt has not bled since the Florida Stallion Stakes Oct. 22.

Trainer Neil Howard and the 28-member Dogwood Stable syndicate that owns Summer Squall are much less certain the lean colt could handle the stress. Summer Squall's first and only major hemorrhage came after a February workout and at the end of a long recuperation from a fractured cannon bone.

Several times since he has trickled blood from a nostril after a gallop - including the day before the Preakness. The grueling Belmont would be his sixth race in 12 weeks.

So racing will be denied the chance to see the two settle their rivalry. All Unbridled must do to collect the $1 million bonus awarded the horse with the best combined performance in the Triple Crown races is finish the Belmont.

Instead, the sport will be left to continue the Lasix argument and debate a Jockey Club-sponsored study released two days after the Derby that suggests the drug doesn't help bleeders but might enhance the performance of horses without bleeding tendencies.

Pimlico's stakes barn Sunday was a preview of what Nafzger can expect at Belmont. There were more discussions about the drug and the Jockey Club study than about Summer Squall's brilliant triumph.

In rallying from fourth to beat Unbridled by 2 1/4 lengths, Summer Squall covered the 1 3-16-mile course in 1:53 3-5, one-fifth of a second off Tank's Prospect's 1985 stakes record. More impressively, he covered the last three-sixteenths of a mile in :18 flat, believed to be one of the fastest finishes ever. Unbridled was nearly as brilliant.

''I know time doesn't mean anything except in jail, but you've got to understand that when you run an 18 flat, that's about as fast as their little legs can go up and down,'' Nafzger said.

In preparing Unbridled without Lasix, Nafzger said the key will be to dehydrate the horse naturally. He plans to cut food and water the last 12 hours before the race in an attempt to duplicate the effect of the diurectic.

Nafzger says he has used the same method in New York with other horses. However, he acknowledged the regimen could hurt the colt.

''You wouldn't want to come right back after a race without it,'' he said. ''He'll get time off.''

Summer Squall's stable hopes Unbridled will be able to come back for a Lasix-free run in the Breeders' Cup at Belmont Oct. 27.

''That's the game plan,'' Howard said, ''but if it doesn't work out this year, it'll work out another.''

Nafzger will not be the only trainer with a Lasix user running drug-free in the Belmont. D. Wayne Lukas plans to run Land Rush, who raced on Lasix while finishing seventh in the Derby and sixth in the Preakness.

''He'll be all right,'' Lukas said. ''He's only bled one time, but when it's available, you're crazy not to take advantage of it.''

One other Derby and Preakness colt will go to the Belmont - Mister Frisky, who was eighth as the Derby favorite and a distant third in the Preakness. Other possible Belmont starters include Video Ranger, Killer Diller, Thirty Six Red, Real Cash, Rhythm, Dotsero and Go And Go.

(MAY 20) UPI - Officials in Garland County, Arkansas, says conditions in the area are ''bad'' this morning after nearly 12 inches of rain fell overnight. Garland County Sheriff's Sergeant Tommy Garner says water has inundated the resort city of Hot Springs, knocking out windows and leaving businesses full of water. Cars are reported floating down the street and many roads and bridges were washed out.

Rioting broke out in the Israeli-occupied territories today after an Israeli gunman in an army uniform shot and killed seven Arab workers and wounded 10 others. The rioting left seven other Arabs dead and hundreds wounded. A man identified as a former soldier discharged on medical grounds was later arrested for the shootings six miles south of Tel Aviv.

The communist-dominated ruling National Salvation Front is expected to win a landslide victory today in Romania's first free elections in 50 years. About 120-thousand soldiers, police and reserve officers are on duty to help keep order. An estimated 16-Million citizens are eligible to elect a president and a Parliament to two-year terms.

Three people were killed and three were wounded early today when three men burst into a crowded Harlem bar, pulled out weapons and began firing. The bar was packed with about 50 people at the time of the shootings. After the shooting, the suspects fled. Police say the three wounded patrons are expected to live.

Riot police fought with thousands of demonstrators in the South Korean city of Kwangju today in continuing anti-government and anti-American protests. The demonstrations were held to commemorate a pro-democracy uprising that occurred 10 years ago. Police fired tear gas to break up a rally at a university shortly after it began, but about one-thousand students and workers fought police with rocks and a few firebombs.

South African unrest kills three and wounds several in the gold-mining belt... And flooding ravages Arkansas resort community... U-P-I has details of these top stories and more, next.

NASA scientists say it's too early to tell if the first pictures taken from the Hubble Space Telescope are any good.

The long-awaited pictures flashed across computer screens at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland this afternoon. The images are of smaller-than-expected star-like dots against a black background.

NASA astronomer Edward Weiler says technicians think they are seeing some very small stars. He says if the pictures are of stars, then the focus is better than expected.

The one-and-one-half-BILLION-dollar telescope opened its shutter at 11:12 Eastern Time, this morning, to snap its first historic ''first light'' photo of a distant star cluster in a critical milestone for the observatory's activation.

But, trying to deflate expectations, they say the media or the public should NOT expect anything spectacular at first. Hubble's focus still needs to be fine-tuned.

(MAY 20) UPI - The flooding in Arkansas and Texas worsened today as more rain fell and an earthen dam began to sink and threatened to collapse.

Nearly a foot of rain that poured down in Arkansas washed away bridges and forced several evacuations in the resort community of Hot Springs.

The downpour put some roads under four feet of water. There were reports of cars floating down the street and crashing into storefronts in downtown Hot Springs.

Officials say there were NO reports of injuries or missing people.

A 400-foot section of the new Lost Creek Reservoir Dam in water-logged southeast Texas has sunk at least 20 feet.

There are now concerns of a possible collapse and flooding on the Trinity River tributary. But authorities say few people live along the tributary.

President Bush surveyed the flooded area yesterday during a quick helicopter tour over Trinity. Federal and state officials say three more counties have been added to the federal disaster declarations... bringing to 41 the number of Texas counties eligible for state and federal aid.

One of the bloodiest NON-military attacks against Arabs in Israel's history today sparked widespread rioting in the Israeli-occupied territories.

In the initial attack, an Israeli gunman posing as a soldier shot and killed seven Palestinian workers and wounded nine others in a town just south of Tel Aviv. A half dozen other Arabs were killed and more than 500 others were wounded in the rioting that followed.

Police investigating the attack say the 21-year-old suspect lined the workers up against a wall and asked for their identification cards. Officials say he then opened fire on the Arabs.

The gunman gave conflicting reasons for committing the attack... first saying his girlfriend had left him, then claiming he had been sexually abused by an Arab eight years ago.

A number of Israelis were stoned by angry Palestinians... and some of the injured included soldiers. Israeli leaders condemned the attack as ''an act of lunacy'' and called for restraint.

But Palestinian leaders blame the attack on Israeli government's policies... and they're calling for three ''black days'' of strikes and school closings.

(MAY 20) UPI - Iranian President Rafsanjani reportedly says that all of the 14 remaining Western hostages in Lebanon would be freed... if the United States makes some sort of goodwill gesture.

The newspaper Tehran Times said Rafsanjani made the remarks in a meeting with Iran's U-N representative.

Several times in the past three weeks, Iran has called for a goodwill gesture from the United States following the release last month of American hostages Robert Polhill and Frank Reed.

Rafsanjani is quoted as saying Iran has taken UNspecified steps in Lebanon to help pave the way for the release of the remaining captives and that Moslem Shiite groups holding other hostages are simply awaiting U-S overtures.

Iran has called on the United States to pressure Israel into releasing Palestinians and Lebanese taken captive in southern Lebanon.

A few Bay of Pigs veterans stopped just short of returning to Cuba today.

34 pleasure boats carrying the veterans and Cuban exiles sailed across the Straits of Florida to waters off of Cuba in a peaceful protest to mark the anniversary of the island's independence.

Organizers say the flotilla was organized to commemorate the birth of the Republic of Cuba on May 20th, 1902, and to honr those killed while fighting the regime of Fidel Castro.

A spokesman say today's offshore protest is intended to remind the world that- in his words- ''Cuba remains the last absolute dictatorship in the Americas.''

Organizers say 100 boats were expected to make the 90-mile crossing, but rough seas and a small craft advisory kept many away.

The prostesters held a religious ceremony in memory of Cubans who have lost their lives trying to leave the island.

(MAY 20) UPI - President Bush chides Congress...

Romanians cast ballots in the country's first free elections in more than half-a-century...

And a wrap-up of one of the bloodiest days of the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising...

These stories... and more... next, from United Press International:

President Bush chided Congress today for NOT getting tough with crime.

Bush accused Congress of NOT supporting the war on crime with tougher laws as he spoke at the dedication of a memorial to slain police officers in Portland, Oregon. His comments come on the eve of scheduled Senate debate on a stalled set of anti-crime proposals.

The president urged lawmakers to honor the memory of police officers both living and dead by passing legislation to give police, prosecutors and the courts more power to get tough with criminals.

Bush flew to Oregon today from Texas, where earlier he expressed optimism about progress in U-S-Soviet arms control talks.

The president told reporters aboard Air Force One prior to leaving Houston that after talking to Secretary of State Baker, he believes the Washington summit with Soviet President Gorbachev in two weeks will be a success.

Bush says the administration is plugging away in those areas where more progress can be made.

Interim President Ion Iliescu and his National Salvation Front reportedly have won landslide victories in Romania's first free elections in more than 50 years.

Although officials results areN'T due until Tuesday, a West German polling firm says Iliescu won 83 percent of the vote.

Exit polls also show Iliescu's communist-dominated National Salvation Front ran away with about 66 percent of the seats in Parliament.

Surveys predict the competiting Liberal Party and Peasant Party snared fewer seats than expected. That could mean a virtual lack of opposition in Parliament to monitor the policies of the government during the crucial next two years.

Romanians took their day at the poll seriously, though.

(MAY 20) UPI - The State Department is joining pro-Arab groups in the United States and other countries in denouncing today's attack by an Israeli gunman on a group of Palestinians.

The State Department says it deplores the ''senseless tragedy'' of the shooting outside Tel Aviv, which killed seven people and wounded nine others.

The Palestine Liberation Organization says the United States had a role in the attack, which touched off violent rioting in the Israeli-occupied territories. Six other Arabs were killed in those clashes and hundreds more injured... making it one of the bloodiest days in the 29-month-old Palestinian uprising.

A P-L-O spokesman says the U-S government is a supporter of such attacks organized by Zionist authorities. The group adds that Israeli policy against Palestinians encourages such acts, making Israel's government ''totally responsible.''

Israeli officials say the shooting was an act of lunacy by a lone individual.

Officials have fresh worries... they're antsy about whether the Lost Creek Reservoir Dam is up to holding the waters back. At least a half-a-mile section of the dam has sunk 20 feet.

The dam's collapse would send waters rushing toward the Trinity River tributary, where towns already are waterlogged by record spring rains and flooding.

In Hot Springs, Arkansas, residents say cars started floating down the street after overnight storms dumped more than one foot of rain. Rising waters washed out bridges, crashed into storefronts and stranded more than 100 people.

(MAY 20) UPI - A new study appears to blow away what it calls the false sense of security of those smokers who doN'T puff that many cigarettes a day.

The report indicates that the number of years people smoke cigarette pose a greater risk than the actual number of cigarettes they smoke when it comes to developing an artery disease that can lead to stroke.

Researchers at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, report their study found that a 60-year-old man or woman who had smoked for 40 years is three and a half times more likely than NON-smokers to having the disease which affects arteries leading to the brain.

The researchers looked at a number of factors, such as whether a person has ever smoked... the number of packs per year... number of cigarettes per day... and the duration of smoking.

The study also took into account factors NOT associated with smoking that can contribute to an increased risk of artery disease.

Organizers call it the ''World Series of Birding,'' and it attracted bird watchers from around the globe.

Avid fans from as far away as England turned out today for the New Jersey Audobon Society's seventh annual bird-watching competition.... which sent participants racing around the state to see which team could spot the greatest number of bird species within 24 hours.

The Garden State sponsors the friendly competition to raise money and awareness of its role in helping the world's birds.

A contest spokesman says New Jersey is an important way-station for birds traveling thousands of miles between winter homes as far south as the tip of South America and summer breeding grounds as far north as the Arctic tundra.

(MAY 20) UPI - Officials in South Africa's Thabong township say police were forced to open fire today when rioting blacks set fire to houses and threw rocks at several vehicles, including an ambulance. At least three people were killed and 20 others wounded.

Also today, South Africa's President F-W de Klerk flew to West Germany for talks with top officials in Bonn. De Klerk also is to travel to Spain, Italy and Switzerland in search of European support for his political reforms.

It looks as though Romania's interim president is cruising to victory in today's elections. Exit polls show Ion Iliescu with 83 percent of the vote and his National Salvation Front with 66 percent of the parliamentary seats.

In University Square in Bucharest, many protesters said the victory margin was ''impossible'' and some suspected vote fraud. The landslide means there will be NO effective opposition to monitor the government's policies over the next two years.

Egypt's President Mubarak met in Cairo today with South African black leader Nelson Mandela, who is on a six-nation tour. Mubarak also met with Pakistan's premier and with the head of the P-L-O... during a busy day that turned out to be something of a diplomatic coup for the Egyptian leader.

The Nicaraguan government says it expects the Contra rebels to lay down their weapons and disband on schedule by June 10th. The rebels earlier decided to cancel the disarmament agreement, but the government says rebel leaders changed their minds.

(MAY 20) UPI - Three prominent Israeli Palestinians began a hunger strike today following a bloody attack on Arab workers that triggered deadly rioting in the occupied territories. The Palestinians are calling for an emergency U-N Security Council session to provide international protection for the occupied territories. Seven people were killed when an Israeli man opened fire on the Arab workers, and six other people died in the ensuing riots.

Sparse crowds turned out to hear today's final campaign speeches in Colombia... where candidate assassinations and violence by warring cocaine cartels have scared away voters. Three of the four major presidential contenders held their final rallies today in Bogota under extraordinary security. Three candidates were killed during presidential campaigning for the May 27th elections.

First lady Barbara Bush placed a candle in every window of the White House facing Pennsylvania Avenue for tonight's candlelight vigil to commemorate AIDS victims. Memorial services and rallies are being held in 200 sites around the world... from Australia to Soweto . The Seventh Annual International AIDS Candlelight Memorial is meant to honor the more than 200-thousand people believed to have died from the disease worldwide.

Investigators say they have NO evidence linking a small explosion in the lobby of a New York hotel to an appearance there two hours later by Vice President Quayle. Police say the incendiary device, similar to an M-80 firecracker, caused NO injuries and only minor damage to some ceiling tile. Security, however, was extremely tight for Quayle's address to an Orthodox Jewish group.

ALAMEDA, CA (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Glycomed Inc., Monday announced it has signed an exclusive two-part agreement with Duke University to license a technique that potentially builds more stable and active oligosaccharide molecules (intermediate-length sugars).

The Duke process links oligosaccharides more efficiently and economically than current methods. Glycomed is synthesizing carbohydrates to create a new class of pharmaceuticals for a broad range of therapeutic applications.

The technique was developed by a team of Duke University organic chemistry researchers headed by Bertram O. Fraser-Reid, Ph.D, and is one of four known and accepted reactions that link sugars. The process, which employs the substrate N-Pentenyl glycoside, represents a stable and more controlled reaction than has been previously developed.

The procedure has been developed in such a way that it may be applied to any oligosaccharide sequence.

The traditional method of linking sugars is to modify, or transform, the end of the carbohydrate via a chemical reaction so the end is ''primed'' to accept a new sugar. This reaction involves several complex steps, the end result of which is to ''prime'' the end of the carbohydrate to allow it to link with another carbohydrate.

Conventional linking procedures destroy vital carbohydrate materials and provide less than a 100 percent yield, which may alter desired results.

Under terms of the research portion of the agreement, Glycomed will continue to fund research on the patent-pending process for one year. Any new findings by Duke researchers will be shared with Glycomed. Under the option portion of the agreement, Glycomed has the exclusive right to license and develop new products based on Duke's technology for one year.

Glycomed is a privately held company that is developing complex carbohydrates for pharmaceutical applications. The company was formed in 1987 and has headquarters in Alameda.

PHOENIX (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - VIASOFT Inc., Monday announced it is shipping VIA/SmartDoc, an intelligent tool for programmers that automatically generates comprehensive COBOL program documentation.

VIA/SmartDoc is the first documentation tool to understand the internal logic of COBOL programs and how they handle data. It collects information directly from the program source code and analyzes and organizes that information into detailed and accurate hardcopy documentation.

VIA/SmartDoc is the newest addition to VIA/CENTER, VIASOFT's revolutionary re-engineering platform. Like other VIA/CENTER tools, VIA/SmartDoc uses the company's proprietary Analytical Engine to extract extensive information about a COBOL program and store it online in the VIASOFT Application Knowledge Repository. The Engine analyzes the source code and captures information on logic paths, data relationsips and data usage. Using this information, VIA/SmartDoc generates a hardcopy report with a detailed analysis of the COBOL program's operation and logic.

VIA/SmartDoc has received a very positive response among current and prospective VIASOFT customers, shipping to over 35 sites in just the first quarter of production release.

VIA/SmartDoc reports include an annotated listing that accents the logic flow and data cross-references of a program. VIA/SmartDoc understands the logic paths to or from any statement in the code, so programmers can predict and eliminate unwanted side effects from changes in the program's logic. Programmers can also look at the data flow within COBOL programs to understand how changes to one field affect related fields.

Key features include VIA/SmartDoc's ability to generate structure charts and its support of software metrics. Structure charts graphically display the logical components within large or complex COBOL programs, helping programmers and analysts better understand them. By applying software metrics, VIA/SmartDoc assesses and measures complexity and overall software quality.

With VIA/SmartDoc, users can get up to 14 different reports and can choose which reports they want to go in the documentation. Other features include the generation of a table of contents and a master index, which lists logical relationships between different pieces of the program as well as where every program entity can be found.

VIASOFT's products operate on IBM mainframes at over 450 customer sites, the largest installed base in the re-engineering market. Founded in 1983, VIASOFT serves its growing customer base through a distribution network that spans 20 countries. The company is headquartered in Phoenix.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Kansas City Southern Industries Inc. Monday announced that certain individuals claiming to be shareholders of Kansas City Southern's 87 percent owned subsidiary, DST Systems Inc., filed suit, purportedly on behalf of all DST shareholders as a class, in the Circuit Court of Jackson County, Mo., on May 17, 1990, against DST, its directors (which include Kansas City Southern directors) and Kansas City Southern seeking injunctive relief, damages and costs in connection with KCSI's intended cash tender offer for any and all shares of DST common stock at $14 per share, which had been announced earlier on that same day.

The suit alleges, among other things, that the tender offer and related transactions amount to an attempt to unfairly eliminate plaintiff's interests in DST in violation of the defendant's fiduciary duties. KCSI and its directors deny these allegations and intend to vigorously defend against the claims.

Although KCSI and its board of directors have previously approved the transaction, DST has not made a recommendation on the transaction. However DST has authorized a special committee of independent directors to consider and make a recommendation on the proposed transaction, which will be announced in accordance with applicable law.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:ADBE) and Oki Electric Industry Co. Ltd. Monday announced the Microline 801PS, a new PostScript Japanese laser printer that prints at a resolution of 400-dots-per-inch (dpi).

In addition, the printer has communications interfaces that enable it to work in both DOS and Macintosh environments.

''The print quality and versatility in different computing environments of Oki's new product should help make it a very successful PostScript Japanese printer,'' said John Warnock, chairman and chief executive officer, Adobe Systems.

''By taking advantage of the PostScript language's ability to handle both Roman and Japanese font software, it will help reinforce the PostScript language standard for electronic printing and publishing in Japan.''

The 400-dpi resolution of the Microline 801PS' LED-based engine represents an improvement in overall resolution of more than 75 percent over the industry-standard 300-dpi (160,000-dots-per-square-inch vs. 90,000). The printer's higher resolution makes it especially well suited to desktop publishing applications.

The Microline 801PS is an eight-page-per-minute, monochrome printer. Its Atlas PostScript controller is based on a Motorola M68020 microprocessor running at 16.67 megahertz. The printer comes standard with eight megabytes of RAM and 13 ROM-resident PostScript Roman font software programs. Two Japanese font software programs, Ryumin Light KL and Gothic Medium BBB, are resident on the printer's internal 40 megabyte SCSI hard disk. The character sets for the Japanese font programs include JIS levels 1 and 2.

Paper sources for the printer are two standard 200-sheet input trays. Paper sizes the printer accepts are A4, A5, B4, B5 and Hagaki (postcard-size), as well as four envelope sizes.

The communications interfaces enabling the printer to function in DOS and Macintosh environments are RS232, RS422, Centronics parallel and AppleTalk along with an external SCSI interface for adding hard disks.

The Microline 801PS will be available by the end of June in Japan from Oki authorized dealers. List price for the printer is Y898,000 (approximately US $5,700).

Adobe Systems Inc., founded in 1982 by Warnock and Dr. Charles Geschke, has headquarters in Mountain View. Adobe is the developer of PostScript, the industry-standard page description language for electronic printing and publishing and Display PostScript, a device-independent graphics software component for computer displays.

In addition, the company develops and markets the Adobe Type Library and a line of application software products including Adobe Illustrator 88, Adobe Type Manager and Adobe Photoshop. Revenues for 1989 were over $120 million.

EL MONTE, CA (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - 1989 was a good year for Marshall Industries (NYSE:MI).

The company set a new company sales record of $533.5 million and continues to gather awards from manufacturers for outstanding sales growth in distributing their products.

As a result of this record sales growth, Cypress Semiconductors named Marshall their distributor of the year for 1989. Marshall has consistently done well with Cypress sales through distribution since the company became the first distributor to offer Cypress products.

After just over a year offering Fox crystals and oscillators, Marshall was given the 1989 Fox Family award for leading sales among distributors. Pat Stroupe, corporate product manager at Marshall, attributed Marshall's success to its broad product offering and depth of inventory.

''We stock every standard item Fox offers. We also get tremendous support from the factory,'' Stroupe said. ''Fox products are also competively priced and fulfill a need in the marketplace for an inexpensive, yet extremely reliable product,'' he said. Marshall Executive Vice President Dick Bentley said, ''I have never seen a start-up line grow so fast. We have a great future with Fox.''

AVX, the world's largest manufacturer of ceramic capacitors, also named Marshall its distributor of the year for 1989, with Marshall posting the largest increase in AVX sales among their distributors. Seth Finkel, Marshall vice president of marketing, passive products, put the honor in perspective. ''Everybody thinks that to succeed in passives you have to be a passive specialist, that it can't be done by a broadline distributor.

''We received the award, however, because we take care of our customers. We have the inventory. We work hard for their business,'' he said.

Earlier in the year, Marshall was also given the Award of Excellence as top distributor in 1989 for Computer Products Inc., a manufacturer of power supplies for electronics applications.

Marshall Industries supplies and services the electronics industry through a network of industrial electronic distribution centers located throughout the United States and Canada. Marshall's products include electronic components, integrated circuits, connectors, memory and computer products, electronic production supplies and hand tools and electronic assembly equipment.

MEMPHIS, TE (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Airport directors can now take a walk through an airport which has yet to be built.

Architects and designers are now employing sophisticated computer aided design programs to graphically demonstrate what a project will look like -- at any angle. The programs even show the shadows from different angles of the sun on any chosen date or you can see what the project looks like at night. Some of the computer programs are so powerful, they allow designers to take you on an animated tour of facilities.

Computer aided drafting design (CADD) systems are used in industries ranging from aerospace to fashion to eliminate the tedious and time-consuming work of hand drafting plans. Want to see what it would look like with the wall removed? How about all the chair coverings changed to mauve? CADD allows the designer to change the plan with just a touch of a few keys.

Dobbs Houses Inc., is one of the nation's largest operators of airport food and beverage and general merchandise concessions.

Rouben Simonian, chief architect for Dobbs Houses, said the company's CADD system is used for all design work, from the initial concept to final working drawings.

''Competition is so fierce for airport projects now that it is imperative to offer creative designs and first-class presentation,'' he said.

Simonian said that while most architectural firms have CADD systems, Dobbs is the first company in its industry to have the capability in-house.

''We've found that we are in the position to respond faster to changes than an outside firm,'' he said. ''Since we are directly involved with the bid specs of the particular airport and our 40-year history is in the airport concessions business, we can provide fast, high quality designs which are most effective.''

Recently, food and beverage for the Harlingen Airport in Texas went out for bid. Dobbs Houses responded with a proposal. The entire project -- concept, design, and working drawings -- was completed in 10 days, a feat that would have been impossible without CADD.

Dobbs Houses uses a Compaq 386 computer with two terminals and a plotter. The software, by Sigma Designs Inc., is called ARRIS. It is powerful enough to provide not only the drafting functions, but the modeling for the three-dimensional-looking views. The entire project can be saved on a diskette, rendering an entire shelf of working drawings obsolete.

These models are what brings an exciting dimension to CADD. Now, airport directors can take an animated tour through the proposed airport design, seeing exactly what it would look like from the perspective of a six-foot tall person.

''All dimenstions, the lighting, furnishings, material and equipment are exactly correct and you are able to determine just what the project will look like,'' said Simonian.

He added that no longer can designers take ''artistic liberties'' with renderings. Miscommunication is avoided, change orders are reduced and the client is better able to judge the look of the finished product.

The system has a library of furnishings and a store of 16 million different shades and colors to choose from.

Dobbs Houses Inc., a subsidiary of Greyhound Dial Corp., operates 380 food and beverage and general merchandise concessions in 30 airports, four Amtrak stations, 13 hotels and six office buildings throughout the country.

NEW ORLEANS (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - An unprecedented advertising campaign designed to stimulate general newspaper readership was formally unveiled Monday by Universal Belo Productions at the International Newspaper Marketing Association convention.

The campaign will be marketed in varying combination packages of television, radio, print, and outdoor advertisements to newspapers across the country.

A joint venture project of Universal Press Syndicate (UPS) and A.H. Belo Corp., the advertising features well-known UPS columnist Abigail Van Buren of ''Dear Abby,'' who addressed the convention's opening luncheon audience Monday as Universal Belo's special guest.

The campaign also centers around the popular comic characters ''Cathy'' and ''Ziggy,'' with combined syndication by UPS in more than 1,000 newspapers nationwide. Each personality is featured in one of three 30-second television spots (with the comic features animated), three 60-second radio commercials, an outdoor billboard, and companion print executions, which also feature the UPS comic panel, ''The Far Side.''

The campaign theme, ''If You're Missing the Paper, You Don't Know What You're Missing,'' targets the occasional newspaper reader, using humor to illustrate how reading the newspaper daily adds value to everyday life.

The animated portion of the television spots was produced in black and white to simulate the format in which most readers see the comic strips in the daily newspaper as well as to set the commercials apart from the clutter of color advertising. The radio and print advertising employs a ''teaser'' element keying off of the term ''missing'' in the campaign theme.

Created by Tracy-Locke Inc. of Dallas, the advertising is designed to include a newspaper's logo and circulation phone number. Prices for the campaign are based on circulation size and the combination of TV, radio, and print components purchased.

Universal Press Syndicate, headquartered in Kansas City, Mo., is the largest independent newspaper syndicate in the country and the parent company of a number of subsidiaries established to provide additional creative opportunities for its columnists, cartoonists, and other non-UPS-related properties.

These include Andrews and McMeel, the book publishing company, and its gift and stationery division, OZ; Trexler Designs, a mail-order handcrafts operation; and Universal Licensing Corp., which explores other outlets for Universal's creators.

SAN FRANCISCO (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Eric Von Pingel, director of the Appraisal Department within BankAmerica Real Estate Division, has been promoted to senior vice president, according to Frank Schultz, executive vice president and head of that division.

Von Pingel, 51, is in charge of a staff of more than 350 in California. Last year, the Appraisal Department evaluated $29 billion in properties to be used as collateral for residential real estate and other types of loans being considered by the bank.

''The performance of the Appraisal Department under Eric's direction has been excellent,'' Schultz stated. ''Eric carries a great deal of customer service and risk-management responsibility and must ensure that properties are evaluated properly before the bank commits to funding a loan, using the property as collateral,'' Schultz explained.

Von Pingel provides property appraisal services to BankAmerica Real Estate and the Consumer Lending Division, as well as to Commercial Banking, when that division makes agricultural loans secured by property.

Von Pingel joined the bank in 1959 as a teller in Chico, and then worked in branch operations in various parts of Northern California until 1964. At that time, he was appointed an inspector in the bank's auditing department in San Francisco and served in that unit until 1970, when he became head of Loan Adjustment for Northern California.

Von Pingel was named the director of the Appraisal Department in 1976.

Born in Sacramento and raised in Hamilton City, a small community 10 miles west of Chico, Von Pingel graduated from the Bank Administration Institute's School of Bank Administration in 1970, where he majored in auditing. In 1981, he graduated from Harvard Business School's Program for Management Development.

Among his professional affiliations, Von Pingel is on the board of directors of the California Market Data Cooperative and is chairman of the Survey Committee for the Real Estate Research Council of Southern California.

Von Pingel and his family reside in Danville.

CINCINNATI (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - Chemed Corp. (NYSE:CHE) today announced that a slate of 22 directors was elected at the company's 1990 annual meeting of stockholders.

The slate included the following new members: Paul E. Barkman, president of DuBois International Inc., a subsidiary; James A. Cunningham, a director of The First Boston Corp.; and Judi K. O'Steen, vice president--finance and treasurer of Omnicare Inc. Stockholders also ratified the continuation of Price Waterhouse as the company's independent accountants for 1990.

Addressing stockholders at the meeting, Edward L. Hutton, president and chief executive officer of Chemed Corp., commented, ''1989 was a year of excellent sales and earnings growth for your company. Each of our three major subsidiaries -- DuBois Chemicals, National Sanitary Supply Co., and Roto-Rooter -- performed well. Chemed's sales in 1989 increased 18 percent to $592 million, placing us at number 471 on the prestigious Fortune 500 list of the largest industrial corporations in the United States. Our income from continuing operations reached $26 million for the year, an increase of 27 percent over the prior year's income. Equally important, Chemed's balance sheet is healthy and your company is very sound financially.''

Commenting on Chemed's outlook for the future, Hutton stated, ''The earnings slump experienced by the U.S. chemical industry in 1989 caught up with Chemed in the first quarter of 1990. This downturn in the industry hit us at a time when we were also making a substantial investment in our future growth. Each of our three subsidiaries has been working to expand its earnings potential and thus has been incurring a higher-than-normal level of operating expense.

''National Sanitary Supply, for example, following its major geographic expansion, is recording increased selling expenses due to higher subsidy costs for its new sales trainees, increased commission costs resulting from an improved profit mix, and greater marketing and promotional costs related to its higher-margin proprietary products. While these costs are a drain on earnings now, they will serve to enhance productivity in National's sales and marketing areas and should have a positive impact on profits later in the year.

''Our DuBois DisCom division is facing similar growing pains. As a result of the transfer of institutional business from DuBois USA to DuBois DisCom DisCom has reached the stage where its fixed costs are not yet being fully supported by sales volume. Like National, this is only a short-term problem, but it nonetheless hampers our earnings growth.

''Roto-Rooter, which has increased its manpower levels considerably, has invested in marketing, recruiting, and training programs to reduce turnover and enhance customer service. While these costs hurt the bottom line now, they pay off handsomely in future quarters by generating new business and guaranteeing customer satisfaction, both of which lead to higher revenues and earnings.

''We firmly believe that these investments in future growth are vital to building a stronger Chemed. But the short-term costs associated with this strategy, when coupled with the impact of a sluggish economy, result in a negative year-to-year earnings comparison, as we experienced in the first quarter of 1990. We expect a similar negative comparison in the second quarter. And while we hope to see these quarterly comparisons improve throughout the second half of 1990, as growth costs fall in line with sales increases, we cannot ignore the impact of the economy. Certain sectors of the economy are beginning to show signs of improvement, but the jury is still out on whether we will see an overall recovery soon. Chemed cannot rebound fully until the economy cooperates.''

Following the meeting, Chemed's board of directors declared a quarterly cash dividend of 49 cents per share on the company's capital stock payable on June 8, 1990 to stockholders of record on June 1, 1990. This represents the 76th consecutive quarterly dividend paid by Chemed in its 19 years as a public company.

MILL VALLEY, CA (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - SourceMate Information Systems Inc. has announced the release of Version III of the AccountMate line of modifiable business software.

Version III has twice the reporting capabilities of previous versions, and contains over 350 new features in the posting, maintenance, reporting and miscellaneous sections.

General Ledger Version III contains a user-definable custom report generator that allows an unlimited variety of financial and management reports to be extracted from existing data. The ability to transfer to any current year period from other integrated modules is an additional enhancement to the new General Ledger.

Accounts Receivable reprints any invoice from customer history, maintains an unlimited number of multiple shipping addresses, and allows quick addition of customer and inventory information during the posting process. The Receivables module also creates and issues cash refunds from any credit invoices with outstanding balances.

''Version III is the next logical step in the evolution of AccountMate,'' said SourceMate President Ben Tse. ''Our development policy has always been to gradually cultivate a stable product for release, rather than confuse our customers with monthly revisions. Since we are an open source code publisher, our resellers' and endusers' intimate knowledge of AccountMate's code provides a significant contribution to our product development process.''

SCOTTSDALE, AZ (MAY 21) BUSINESS WIRE - ATNN Inc. (NASDAQ:ATNN), reported a March 31, 1990 first quarter net loss of $709,991 or 9 cents per share on revenues of $6,906,531 as compared to a net loss for the prior year of $150,223 or 2 cents per share on revenues of $1,043,547.

The company did not acquire the bridge building contracting company until third quarter 1989.

Cook, president and chief executive officer of ATNN Inc. stated: ''Our bridge contracting company recognizes revenues on contracts of long duration by the percentage-of-completion formula and estimates of work completed must be adjusted and revised periodically as work on each project progresses.

''We do not anticipate any additional significant erosions of expected gross profits on contracts in progress in 1990, barring any future unforseen circumstances. As of March 31, 1990, we had approximately $13,800,000 in contracts to complete this year, from which we expect to recognize approximately $1,700,000 in gross profits for the remaining three quarters of 1990.

''Through March 31, 1990, our truck stock was profitable and revenues were 19 percent over the same peirod in 1989.''

Cook further stated: ''Our bridge contracting company expects a decision during the second quarter on claims filed with the Arizona Department of transportation totalling approximately $1 million to recover additional costs incurred on a highway bridge contract completed in 1989. Those costs have been recorded and if we are successful in resolving these claims, a portion of that amount will be recorded as additional revenue at that time.''

The company continues to investigate other profitable businesses which it may acquire.

With Medi-Sim's computerized critical-care nursing simulations, the monitors become individualized learning workstations capable of delivering self-paced instruction. Only SpaceLabs' monitors offer this capability.
